4-Course Dinner, Musical Program Preceded Dance

LEN FOSTER PLAYS

Members of the Fulton Lions Club, Lionesses, and their guests—132 in all—held their annual Ladies' Night banquet and dance last night at the Strata Club. Len Foster and his orchestra played during the four-course dinner and for the dance.

Tables were decorated with floral arrangements interspersed with pom-poms, and a corsage was given to each lady guest. Killebrew Florist Shop provided the flowers for the occasion. The dinner was served by candlelight.

The invocation was given by the Rev. Aaron Bennett, pastor of the Fulton Episcopal church and member of the Lions club. Following the dinner, Lion President Charles Gregory welcomed and introduced all guests.

George Maddox, soloist, accompanied by Jess Beadles, pianist, both of Mayfield, sang "Old Man River," "On the Road to Mandalay," "Sailor Boy," "I'll See You Home Again, Kathleen," and "Home on the Range." Mr. Beadles played "Mood Indigo," and "Play, Fiddle, Play." Included in the orchestra's numbers was an excellent arrangement of "Clair de Lune." Four dance numbers were presented by Ronald Knudson and Miss Kathryn Post, accompanied by Mrs. Roddie Peebles, all from Paducah.

Several pictures of the group were taken by the club's photographer. After a 30-minute intermission for clearing the ballroom floor, the dance began and continued until midnight.

Louisville—A threatening letter mailed last week to the Louisville Defender, negro weekly newspaper, "was all a prank," a letter received by the newspaper yesterday said. The city manager yesterday filed his answer to the suit in McCracken circuit court, and denied he made the exact statements attributed to him by Stewart. Williams claimed the alleged assertions were a privileged communication.

Nearby Cities To Fight Rats

Hickman Lions, Clinton Rotarians Will Sponsor Rodent-Control Drives

Interest in rat control program is growing in nearby cities, according to County Sanitarian Harry Barry, who announces that the Hickman Lions club and the Clinton Rotary club have voted to sponsor anti-rat campaigns in their respective communities.

A county-wide rat killing program is scheduled for Hickman and Fulton counties in April, under direction of the county agent or the Farm Bureau, Mr. Barry said. The city programs will be separate from the county-wide drive, he added.

Mr. Barry has made several visits to Fulton in the interest of a rat-control drive here, and states that he is still anxious for some club or other civic organization to help sponsor it.

ICC Sends Investigators To Seek Cause Of Train's Plunge Over 150-Ft. Bank

Altoona, Pa., Feb. 19.—(AP)—Twenty-three of the 25 persons killed yesterday when the Pennsylvania Railroad's "Red Arrow" plunged over a 150-foot embankment had been identified today, as official groups started investigation of the accident.

Twenty-year-old Lawrence England of Midland, Mich., himself in a hospital with severe cuts and bruises, identified a battered check skirt, taken from a mutilated body, as that worn by his bride, Dorothy, 22, of three days.

Identification of another victim as Mrs. Innocent Brumfield, 60, of Wyandotte, Mich., left only two battered bodies to be recognized. One of the victims was identified merely as Mrs. Renetti with no known address.

Meanwhile, the interstate commerce commission sent investigators from Washington and the railroad stepped up its search for the cause. A spokesman for the railroad said it may be two weeks before the cause is determined.

Lilienthal Hearings Called "Waste Of Money" By Sen. Hickenlooper; Urges Speedy Windup

Washington, Feb. 19.—(AP)—Chairman Hickenlooper (R-Iowa) today called for a speedy windup of the Senate Atomic Commission's hearings on David E. Lilienthal's nomination as head of the Atomic Control Commission.

Barkeley's statement outlined his reason why he should vote to confirm Lilienthal. After stating he regretted the nomination has aroused much controversy, and the grounds upon which it has been aroused, the Kentucky Senator said:

"As I see it, the question before us is whether by experience, character and general fitness he is qualified for the important post of chairman of the Atomic Commission.

"In my opinion, he is abundantly qualified."

England's Old Burn Furniture

Coal Trickle Is Thin. Cold Weather Continues With No Sign Of Relief

London, Feb. 19.—(AP)—Old people were burning bannisters and picture frames to keep warm in some parts of England today.

Although prospects brightened for the reopening of thousands of factories closed since a week ago Monday for lack of fuel, only a thin trickle of coal was coming from the mines to the fireplaces that most English homes depend on for heat. That hastened the collapse of the country's fuel system continued with no forecast of early relief. The temperatures dropped to 19 above zero Fahrenheit in some districts last night and was below freezing generally today.

London's proverbially gloomy weather broke an all-time record. For the 18th successive day the sun failed to penetrate thick gray clouds. Seventeen days in December, 1890, was the longest previous sunless period.

Thousands of householders, limited to 12 pounds of coal a week if they can get it, have had none at all since before Christmas. Shifted coal dust has become a prized fuel. At blitzed Coventry, people with perambulators started queuing for coke at 2 a. m. today.

Suburban Luton, following the lead of Berlin, opened the first emergency warming center for old people in a friends meeting house. Hot drinks as well as heat were provided from 10 a. m. to 4:30 p. m.

Old age pensioners with shaggy, red heads, scoured streets and bomb ruins in crowded East London for scraps of fuel. Bannisters in sub-standard houses were chopped up for firewood. Even in more prosperous districts, coal dealers' wagons were surrounded whenever they appeared.

OPA Says It May Drop Rent, Sugar Program Shortly

Washington, Feb. 19.—(AP)—OPA, down to its last million dollars unless rescued by the senate, insisted today it may have to quit enforcing rent ceilings, sugar rationing and the few remaining price controls within 72 hours.

Price Administrator Max Coughlin declared that the house decision to slash $9,000,000 from the agency's current appropriation will—if upheld by the senate—put OPA out of business four months before its scheduled expiration date.

It appeared doubtful, however, that the senate would act on the matter before Friday, thus perhaps another week, or longer. The cut cannot be made effective until passed by both houses and signed by President Truman.

Progress Of Reconversion Is Such That We Can Drop Wartime Controls, President's Message To Congress Says

EMERGENCY MAY BE TERMINATED BY JULY

Washington, Feb. 19.—(AP)—President Truman today asked congress for legislation to make possible "an early ending" of the state of national emergency under which the country has lived since 1939.

Mr. Truman asked outright repeal of 24 laws, proposed that emergency operations under 36 permanent statutes be suspended, and recommended that most of 20 defense appropriation measures be wiped out.

Mr. Truman proposed that only 12 of "more than 100" emergency acts still on the books be extended by permanent legislation.

Ten others would remain in force for six months after the actual proclamation ending the emergency, whenever it may come, or for some other stated period.

"The progress of reconversion now makes it possible to take an additional step toward freeing our economy of wartime controls," Mr. Truman said in his message to congress.

High White House advisers have indicated to newsmen that if congress acts with reasonable dispatch, the emergency may be terminated by July.

The proclamation would cover both the "limited" emergency proclaimed Sept. 8, 1939, and the "full" emergency declared May 27, 1941.

Mr. Truman proposes immediate repeal of laws authorizing employment of men from industry as dollar-a-year-men in government; the leasing of merchant ships to other nations; the tax-free withdrawal of alcohol for industrial use; the lease of public lands for munitions manufacture; and the appointment of enlisted men to the naval academy.

Among the major statutes which would be allowed to lapse upon an end-of-emergency proclamation would be:

The army's "streamlined" procurement power under which supplies can be purchased without advertising for bids; the power to transfer the coast guard to the navy; to increase the authorized strength of the navy; and to initiate measures to increase the market quotas of corn, wheat, cotton, rice, tobacco, or peanuts.

Mr. Truman said the following statutes should be extended until June 30, 1948:

Authorization for an under-secretary of the navy.

The authority to maintain war housing, much of it now in emergency use for veterans, but which would have to be disposed of within two years unless extension were voted.

Provisions for the discharge of certain army officers.

Authority to make temporary appointments of officers in the army without regard to any particular branch or arm of the service; the right to arm American merchant vessels.

The appropriation measures mentioned by Mr. Truman are largely inoperative, but Mr. Truman suggested that most of them be eliminated by rescinding the funds instead of repealing the acts themselves.

Mr. Truman's message was his second major step toward lifting the yoke of wartime laws from the nation's economy.

On December 31 he proclaimed the end of hostilities, wiping out 20 war powers immediately, including the right to seize strike bound plants, and ending 33 others at a later date—usually six months afterward. He asked extension of some of the latter statutes, such as the war time postal rates and excise taxes.

A declaration by the President or a joint resolution of congress signed by the President would end the war, for most domestic purposes, but White House advisers say the signing of a peace treaty will be necessary to end the war for international purposes.

Plenty Of Evidence For Peace Hopes

By DeWitt MacKenzie,
AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

Secretary of State Marshall is said by members of the House Foreign Affairs committee to be "optimistic on the whole" over maintaining peace, and Secretary-General Trygve Lie of the United Nations declares that "for the time being the possibility of actual armed conflict involving the powers can be discarded as a madman's dream."

That's encouraging testimony by two of the world's leading experts on international affairs. Indeed there's plenty of evidence to support the thesis of peace among the major powers for a considerable period of years. However, General Marshall was discussing the world's "sore spots" with the committee, and Mr. Lie, in addressing the Minneapolis round table of the National conference of Christians and Jews, cautioned that the world must devote itself to the future. So it's clear that neither of the gentlemen is doing wishful thinking but that both recognize the dangers which must be avoided if peace is to continue. Peace is a fragile vase.

The greatest deterrent to another world conflict in the near future is that fact that none of the powers—barring the United States—is physically capable of waging another major war. They're all in, and it's going to take many years for them to recover. And of course the peoples who have experienced this horror are, on the whole, thoroughly fed up. I think we can add, without being over-optimistic, that the majority of peoples never did want war anyway.

However, your columnist isn't one of those who believe that the militaristic spirit has been uprooted from all hearts. To mention a specific case, I have no doubt that if the Russians were capable of making war, they might be at it again. My tour of Germany a few months ago convinced me that while the militaristic-minded German had been thoroughly whipped physically, he was far from beaten mentally. The will to fight was still there. But unfortunately that's not the whole story. There are other folk besides the Russians who most certainly are toying with militaristic ideas. Perhaps they don't exactly wish for war, but they've persuaded themselves that they will have to fight sooner or later to achieve their aspirations.

Quite apart from the question of whether anybody wants war, there are numerous international issues which are potential breeders of conflict. One of them—and among the most dangerous—is the matter of world-wide control of atomic energy. Peace will be in jeopardy until that is settled, for it is creating doubts and suspicions.

The Chinese Civil War is a bonfire in a powder factory. So, on a lesser scale, are the crisis in India, Indonesia, Greece and Palestine.

Then there is still another menace which people generally seem afraid to face, and deal with on a hush-hush basis. That is the great political divisions between the totalitarian communistic bloc and the western Democracies. There we have an unbridgeable crack, for the two are diametrically opposed.

They are so utterly at variance that, as this column has pointed out more than once, the two could not live together within the boundaries of the same country, for one of them must die. Possibly they can live side by side in adjoining countries—but surely not together.

Therefore the danger lies in the possibility of one group trying to force its political code on the other. Should that happen, it might produce war.

Post Needs Geography Lessons

(By Jess G. Anderson)

My favorite magazine for, lo, these many years, the Saturday Evening Post, comes along in their issue of February 15 with a very enlightening geography lesson for its millions of readers.

Kentuckians generally are grateful to the Post for the praise heaped on its topmost basketball tutor and his array of talent, but they are not grateful, particularly those residents of Sharpe, for the tone of the story which can't get away from the eastern pattern of writing which always depicts Kentuckians as backwoods and mountain, even in dealing with its basketball teams.

The story in last week's issue of the Post, written by Colie Small, is titled: "The Crafty Wizard of Lexington" and deals with Adolph Rupp and the University of Kentucky basketball team. It is a most interesting story to those who do not know all the facts, but to Kentuckians who know their geography and the easterner's complete lack of knowledge of mountaineers, it is none too complimentary.

The article states: "Many of Rupp's players actually are mountain boys." It lists a starting five of Jack Tingle, Bedford, Ky.; Joe Holland, Benton, Ralph Beard, Lewisport, Kenneth Rollins, Barlow, and Wah-Wah Jones, Harlan.

Actually of this quintet, only Jones comes from the mountains, and he comes from one of the most progressive little towns in the state, Harlan, with a population of about 5,000 people. Ralph Beard is a native of Harlanburg, Ky., in Breckenridge, Ky. That is near Owensboro and about as far from the mountains as one could get in the state. Bedford, Ky., Jack Tingle's home town is in Trimble County, about halfway between Louisville and Carrollton, far away from the mountains; Joe Holland is from Benton, in deep western Kentucky and far away from the mountains, and Ken Rollins is from Wickliffe, down on the Mississippi River and also far, far away from the mountains.

Taking another poke at Kentucky backwardness, the writer goes on to state that when Sharpe won the state tournament several years ago someone had to telephone somewhere, a man on horseback picked up the news, rode to a river, shouted the news across the river and a man in a boat relayed the news to another horseman who rode into Sharpe. This Paul Reveré stunt sounds very pretty and looked plenty good to the easterners. They got many a laugh out of our primitive news-spreading methods. But what happened was that most of the townspeople at Sharpe heard the news by radio in a play-by-play account, and the facts are that there was a telephone switchboard in Sharpe for many years before Sharpe ever won any basketball tournament.

Another "mountain town" listed in the story was Lawrenceburg, Ky., in Anderson County. Lawrenceburg, home of Kavanaugh High School, is only a few miles south of Frankfort and about as near the mountains as Frankfort. But putting Lawrenceburg in the mountains helps color the story.

Mr. Small should find out it is no disgrace to be from the mountains. He should be appraised of the fact that more residents of the mountain sections of Kentucky read the Post than do people on Front Street in Philadelphia, and he should know the feelings of the people of those mountains and of Sharpe that he has so offended with his garbled facts and fancies.

And the Post editors who went into such a lengthy huddle before they published Edgar Snow's article on Russia, should spare one editor to check up on geography before they release such stories as Mr. Small's sequel to Amy Forter's article in Colliers which created such a sensation and gave Kentucky such a black eye. (The Mayfield Messenger).

"Backward Glances" At Fulton

By Ouida Jewell

No era in America history presents a more romantic and graceful picture than plantation life in the Old South during and just prior to the Civil War. While Kentucky was a borderland state, there were plantations near Fulton, and remnants of the old-time glamor still are to be found.

One plantation lying in Obion county between what now are Fulton and Union City was composed of 1,000 acres, whose annual crops of tobacco and corn were among the best in the state.

Plantation life centered around the big white house where the "master" and "Missis" lived. This mansion, the scene of gracious living, was a two-story structure set on a hill in a 12-acre grove of oaks and hickories, set by ash, maples, and feathery-leaved locusts. Tall white columns flanked by a broad veranda ran across the front of the house. Also there was a hanging porch on the second floor. The house was built of timber cut by the servants from the virgin Kentucky forests surrounding it. The entrance hall ran the full length of the lower floor, and from it a winding stairway made a graceful spiral to the second floor. On the ground floor, there were front and back parlors, a library, a dining room and family room. The second floor was composed of a huge ballroom, and bedrooms which opened on to the spacious hallway. A private stairway led from the mother's living room on the first floor to the girls' bedroom on the second floor. This staircase was the only entrance to the girls' rooms.

The kitchen was in a building of its own, about 150 yards from the house. The servants cooked and carried the food to the main house dining room. This idea originated in England generations ago as a fire precaution. Later, these kitchens were connected to the house by covered passageways.

The main house was approached by a front driveway and a service driveway at one side. The servants' quarters, which were rows of some 30 or 40 small white-washed cottages, all built very much alike, were arranged in an orderly fashion along a street. "Mammy's" house, a little nicer than the others, stood closer to the main house.

Also at the rear of the house was the blacksmith shop, the smoke-house, the chicken houses, the commissary, where food was stored, and an ice house with thick walls lined with sawdust. The ice house was filled with enough ice from ponds and creeks each winter to last all the year.

Servants were called from their quarters by the ringing of a large iron bell, mounted on a post at the rear of the house. In the front yard, about 50 yards from the house on the left side, there was a small office and another small house, where the boys stayed. There the guns needed to the house by covered passageways.

UN Information

Question: What progress has been made by the disarmament talks of the Security Council?

Answer: With Austria and Poland abstaining from voting, an Arms Resolution was passed by the Security Council and a Commission on Conventional Armaments was created with the task of preparing in three months a plan for general regulation and reduction of armaments and armed forces with practical safeguards for the rest of the world.

Question: What are some of the human rights that are presently included in the constitutions of other member countries?

Answer: The majority of nations recognize freedom of speech, assembly, worship, fair trial, the right to freedom from interference with person, domicile, or property. Few countries recognize economic rights, for instance: only 27 countries recognize the right to medical care, 18 recognize the right to protection in working conditions, 11 recognize the right to adequate housing, 9 recognize the right to work.

Question: Will the Palestine question be given to the United Nations?

Answer: Britain plans to present this problem to the UN "without recommendations", according to Foreign Secretary Bevin. The Arab League also plans to appeal for Palestine's independence.

Question: What is the status of the International Trade Organization?

Answer: The International Trade Organization was created by the Economic and Social Council. A drafting committee is meeting now to set up a charter for the ITO.

Sports Roundup

By Hugh Fullerton, Jr.
New York, Feb. 19.—(AP)—The North Atlantic League turned up with the batting champion of minor league baseball and a pitcher who won 22 games without a defeat last season and couldn't sell either one into faster company—not even for the $700 draft price to Class "C" Walter Forwood hit .406, the year's highest mark in organized ball, for the Carondelet, Pa., club and 22-year-old Tony Nappes of Peekskill, N. Y., pitched 18 straight victories during the regular season and four in the playoffs to beat by one game the minors' consecutive-win streak set by Baxter Sparks of Yazoo City, Miss., in the Delta League in 1944.

SPORTS BEFORE YOUR EYES
What's this story that the Chicago Rockets are getting to shift their All-American football franchise to Milwaukee?—The Oklahoma High School A. A. is planning to add a state baseball championship for about 300 teams to its list of tournaments.—Harold Gensichen, Western Michigan basketball ace, has passed the 1000 point mark for his three seasons of college competition. But he's nowhere near Pro Joe Fuika—Walter Barbers, who played for the Indians, Pirates and Braves, then finished out a 25-year pro career as an umpire, still can't get away from baseball. He'll coach the American League junior team at Greenville, S. C., this season—Paul Bixler is having his tonsils removed before reporting for his new job as Colgate football coach.

END OF THE LINE
Twelve-year-old Janet Brandenburg, daughter of a former Yale track captain, took up swimming less than a year ago. Last Saturday, in her first real competition, she swam the 100 yards free style in 1:07 to win the Connecticut AAU championship—Roosevelt Raceway has added two $40,000 two-mile races to its million dollar harness program. They're endurance tests for the bettors as well as the horses.

Wall Street Report

New York, Feb. 19.—(AP)—The stock market remained a selective affair today with few leaders able to make any headway. There were frequent slowdowns after a moderately active opening. Near midday declines were somewhat in the majority although changes were mostly narrow. Commission houses reported public participation at a minimum with most investors cautious over possibility of further correction of the recent comeback and inclined to await a sharper indication of legislative and business trends. Seeking lower levels were U. S. Steel, General Motors, Chrysler, Goodyear, U. S. Rubber, Standard Oil (N. J.), North American, Consolidated Edison, Montgomery Ward, J. I. Case, Pennsylvania Railroad, Northern Pacific, Baltimore & Ohio, Union Carbide, Air Reduction and American Can. Resistant were International Nickel, Low's, Douglas Aircraft, Public Service of N. J. (on a lifted dividend), Westinghouse Electric and Glenn Martin. Bonds were mixed and cotton improved.

Bulldogs Win 65 To 36 Over Hickman High Pups Lose 22-16 In Preliminary At Hickman Gym

CLINTON IS NEXT

Coach Jack Carter's Bulldogs proved again last night that they have the Indian sign on Hickman high, drubbing the county-seat quintet 65-36 on the Hickman floor. They had previously beaten Hickman 64-23. The Pups were on the short end of a 22-16 score in the preliminary game. The strong Clinton team comes here Friday night for a return engagement with the Bulldogs. The Fulton five was shaded one point, 35-34, at Clinton earlier in the season. In last night's varsity game, the Bulldogs were holding a comfortable 18-4 advantage after the first quarter, and stayed in front 30-12 and 43-21 in the next two periods. Billy Joe Forrest, who moved from guard to forward last night, again copied scoring honors with 14, and James was tops for the Hickman hoopers with 12. Wayne Byassee scored one over half the Pups' 16 markers in the second team contest. Hickman's second stringers moved away from a 3-3 tie in the first quarter to score 9 points in the second while holding the Pups to 2. They led 20-9 as the third quarter ended. Independent Cage Tournament Opens At Hickman Gym Feb. 26

Beginning at 7:30 Wednesday night, Feb. 26, in the large Hickman high gym, when Herb Hurley (former running mate as an All-American with Joe Fuika, "Mr. Basketball," himself) and the fast-moving Benton team with which he plays exchange baskets with Dixie, there will be probably one of the hottest tournaments to be held in these parts this season. The meet is loaded with personalities noted for their outstanding achievements on the hardwood. The Dixie team is a two-time winner over Hickman Independents, the second time being with "Deacon" Jones, one of Ed Diddle's Madison Square Garden representatives in 1942 and 1943. Smith Dunn and Jack Jennings are two more of Benton's capable performers, and their most commendable feat of late was the 55-33 trimming they helped give Barlow, number one team in the tough Tri-State league. However, Benton was seeded as number two team in the journey, second to Clinton, an outfit that threw the ball through the basket for a total of 114 points a few nights ago. Clinton brings with them into this contest two stellar basketballers in Weatherford and Brazzel. Weatherford, as most fans in this sector remember, was one of Kentucky's outstanding high school players last year, and Brazzel played at Western Kentucky State Teachers. Fulton will enter the tournament with two star offensive players in Binford and Cawender. The Pure Milk team recently gave Murray a sound defeat, but Murray has improved its team since then by the addition of Dale McDaniel, a member of the Murray State College Thoroughbreds for the past three seasons, and along with McDaniel will come "Long John," Padgett, Lubie Vesale and Hodges. Besides "Deacon" Jones, Hickman has Mitchell and Hurley, former Murray Thoroughbreds, and Hicks as supporting personnel. Wednesday night's opening session will be followed by games Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights.

Junior Hi School Cagers Will Play

Carr Institute gym will be the scene tomorrow afternoon and night of the invitational junior high school basketball tournament, which pairs Fulton and Murray at 2 p. m. and Clinton and Fulham at 3 p. m. Finals will be at 8:15 Thursday night, immediately following the consolation game at 7:15. Admission to all games is free, and everyone is invited to watch the future stars of the hardwood in action.

Jack Raymond, Florida Native, Newcomer To City

Among the newcomers to Fulton whose choice of this city as a home was more or less a result of the war is Jack Raymond, native of Sarasota, Fla., who now makes his home on College street. His wife is the former Miss Margaret Rogers, daughter of Mrs. Mattie Rogers of Pierce. They met in 1944 while he was stationed with the army air forces at Union City. After a total of 32 months in the army, including seven months' service with the Eighth Air Force in England, Jack returned to the States to be discharged. He recently opened a new business, Jack's Furniture and Repair Shop, located over the Fulton Electric and Furniture Co. The latter business is managed by Ernest Lowe, Jack's brother-in-law.

were kept, and the dogs might sleep in cold weather. It was the place where young gentlemen told delicious tales of early wickedness.

The flower garden, which was located on the right, was a strange affair. There bloomed such old favorites as crepe myrtle, crape jasmine, heliotrope, hollyhaws, and meconettes. Honeysuckle ran riot over the palings, perfuming the air. There were sweet peas, pinkies and violets spreading out recklessly over others, and here and there were tall lilacs and big snowball bushes blooming with snow. Scattered about were large tulip beds. The flower of all flowers was the rose. Roses were everywhere.

Another garden, the vegetable garden, was in the rear. Both were under the watchful supervision of the Mistress, and were her pride and joy. Some of the best servants tended them. Off to one side was the orchard, always a pleasant spot in the landscape. Beyond the orchard stood the barns and the stables, and farther yet lay the wide green fields, tilled carefully and systematically. Around the house were rich hay fields, where the cattle grazed. These fields were enclosed by a white meadow fence.

More on the question of music in the worship.

Charles H. Spurgeon preached for twenty years to 10,000 people in the Metropolitan Baptist Tabernacle of London, England, in which tabernacle no instruments of music ever entered.

When asked why he did not use the organ he gave 1 Cor. 14:13 as his answer: "I will pray with the spirit, and I will sing with the spirit, and I will sing with the understanding also."

Then he remarked, "I would as soon pray to God with machinery as to sing to God with machinery."

Martin Luther said, "The organ in the worship of God is an ensign to Baal."

Joseph Bingham, the well known author of "Antiquities of the Christian Church" and said to be one of the most learned men the Church of England (Episcopal) has ever produced, says: "Music in churches is as ancient as the apostles, but instrumental music not so."

(Works, Vol. 3, p. 137).

In commenting on Ephesians 5:19, Conybeare and Howson, scholars of high repute in the Church of England, wrote: "Let your songs be, not the drinking songs of heathen feasts, but psalms and hymns; and their accompaniment, not the music of the lyre, but the melody of the heart." (Life and Epistles of Paul, Vol. 2, p. 408).
