YALE-HARVARD RACES TOMORROW

New London, Ct., June 26—Once more the Yale and Harvard Crews will be in attendance in the Ohio city to witness the culminating of college rowing in this country.

What we need most is a board of the two institutions to train their men to the straightest possible length, to make them perfect rowers, and to give them the elements of good rowing from the beginning, so that when they come to college they will be prepared to learn the finer points of the art. The advantage gained by commanders and rowers is not the probable winner of the big races.

The town is bright, and the noise is increasing, and the advance guard of graduates and undergraduates are discussing the probable winner of the big races.

The principal of the two races will be between 4:30 and 5:00, at the University Rowing Club, at the starting point of the course.

The field for the future of the two races is as yet uncertain, but there is no doubt that the Yale and Harvard Crews will be the best in the country. The best men from the eastern colleges will be in attendance, and the right men for the occasion will be selected. The Yale and Harvard Crews are the only ones that can be depended upon to give the best of workmanship and high design to the work they do.

HELEN KELLER'S SISTER

To marry

Florence, Ala., June 24—Friends of Helen Keller, the wondrous deaf, dumb and blind girl whose school days have been spent in the American school for the deaf, and who is now a famous writer and speaker, have been startled by the death of her sister, Miss Mabel Keller. Miss Keller is the daughter of Miss Keller and the late Mr. H. H. Keller.

The wedding was a very private affair, and only a few close friends were present. The ceremony was performed at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Keller, and the bride was Miss Mabel Keller, a beautiful girl, with a face like a child's, full of life and beauty.

The wedding was performed in the presence of the friends of the bride and groom, and the couple left for their honeymoon in a private car, bound for New York.

History of Yale-Harvard Races

Yale and Harvard have been rivals since the earliest days of the college. The first race between the two universities was held on the Connecticut River in 1845, and graduated to a series of races which have been held every year since.

The races are always held on the Connecticut River, and the course is twelve miles long. The starting point is at the boat races, and the finish is at the school.

DUNAWAY SHOT BY HANNA

Yesterday the Georgia Lee left Memphis, June 29th, in an express boat for the Central Movement. The boat was greatly alarmed on the Wednesday, as it was thought that Judge Loving was going to attempt suicide, but nothing of the kind occurred.

In last night's edition of the New York Times, Judge Loving is reported as saying: "No more."

The answers were evasive. Sheriff Beard, acting as Sheriff Loving, attempted to bring him to the witness a statement of the facts, but Loving refused to answer the questions put to him.

The directors also voted to raise the salary of the head nurse to $50 a month, and to elect the general council to take the places of the present directors, who will be paid a slight increase.
