Bradley Backs Vets Who Want To Attend Schools Abroad

"I favor the exchange of students and am doing everything possible to achieve greater exchange in that direction," said Bradley.

Bradley's statement is in line with recent reports that education exchanges are taking off and may be considered an excellent method of improving foreign relations.

President Sunday, in his address at the American University in Washington, D.C., emphasized the importance of education exchanges and pointed out the many benefits such programs can bring.

The American University plans to host a symposium on education exchanges later this year, and many other institutions are expected to join in this effort.

The exchange of students is not only a means of increasing mutual understanding, but also helps to enrich the educational experience of all involved.

The American University has already welcomed students from a variety of countries, and plans to continue this tradition as it seeks to strengthen international ties.

President Sunday concluded his address by encouraging all universities to take advantage of this opportunity and to work together to create a more peaceful world through education.

Ky. Livestock Value Soars

Up 27 Per Cent in 1947

Over the Previous Year, Embalmed Values Rise

The value of livestock in Kentucky farm turned up during the past year and has continued to rise in 1947. This increase in livestock value stems from higher prices and increased livestock numbers.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture estimates that the value of livestock in Kentucky increased by 27 percent in 1947 compared to the previous year. This increase in livestock value is a reflection of the improving economic conditions in the state and the country as a whole.

The increase in livestock value is also due to the increase in livestock numbers. According to the Department of Agriculture, the number of livestock in Kentucky has increased by over 10 percent in the past year.

The increase in livestock numbers can be attributed to a number of factors, including better grain production, improved livestock management, and increased herd sizes.

The increase in livestock numbers and value is expected to continue in the coming years, as the nation's economy continues to improve.
