Merger Needed To Back U.S. Foreign Policy

That's Opinion of Sea, Forrestal In Senate Hearing

WAS FIRST WITNESS

Washington, March 14-—The President yesterday called for a merger of the State, War, and Navy departments to make the armed forces into a single, integrated land, sea, and air command. The administration, he said, must be concerned with foreign policy. Foreign policy must take precedence over trade policy in the conduct of foreign affairs.

Forrestal, who was not present, said later in the hearing that he was not opposed to the merger of the State, War, and Navy departments, but he did not think it would be beneficial to the country.

Death Was Nearby

Through a glass darkly

There is a story that all art is not Hence the lack of all directly

In the gallery of the Cheyenne Art Center, there is a painting by a local artist, depicting a quiet, rural scene. The painting is titled "Through a Glass Darkly." It shows a small house surrounded by trees, with a figure standing at the window, seemingly watching the viewer. The artist has used muted colors and a soft focus to create a sense of mystery and depth.

The painting was inspired by the artist's own experiences, as they often found themselves staring out the window, lost in thought. The artist has said that they hope the painting will evoke a sense of longing and reflection in the viewer. The Cheyenne Art Center is open daily from 10am to 5pm, and the painting can be found in the main gallery.

Sports Roundup

By Staff Writers

The day before Kentucky's bud-kicker was to tip off for the second round of its annual invitational basketball tournament, the rival school in the Mid-South, now based at Memphis, Tennessee, announced that its veteran head coach, Jack Hucy, had decided to return to the sidelines after a two-year absence from active basketball coaching.

Hucy, who had been at the head of the Memphis basketball program for 12 years, had resigned in 1953 to join the National Basketball League as assistant coach to the Globetrotters. He remained with the Globetrotters for seven years, then returned to coaching at Memphis in 1960.

The Hucy era at Memphis was notable for its outstanding basketball talent and its steady improvement of the program, resulting in a number of divisional and regional titles and two NCAA tournament appearances.

Hucy's decision to return to coaching came as a surprise to many sportswriters and fans, who had expected him to stay in the Globetrotters' employ.

He had been quoted as saying that he was not interested in returning to coaching, but that his health was not good enough for the rigors of the Globetrotters' touring schedule.

The Hucy return was announced just before the

Floyd Central High School in Jeffersonville, Kentucky, was scheduled to host the third-round tournament.

Floyd Central, under the direction of assistant coach

Charles Coyle, was expected to face one of the top teams in the country in the opening game of the tournament.
