Finger painting is not a new art, having first been known between the years 1672 to 1724 thru the painting of the famous Chinese artist, Koa Chi Pei. It has appeared and reappeared throughout the years.

Koa Chi Pei stressed the fact that true merit in painting consisted not of quality of brush, but the skill of the hand that guided it. The fascination of finger painting lies in the fact that no brushes are used, the various parts of hand and arm taking their place to develop a picture unusual in design and blending of colors.
