Coal Vital In Europe

By Paul H. Douglas
AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

The coal production in Europe is showing a significant increase, particularly in the Soviet bloc countries.

The Soviet Union is now the largest producer of coal in the world, followed by China and the United States. The increase in coal production is expected to continue in the coming years.

In Germany, coal production has doubled since the 1980s, driven by the country's efforts to reduce its dependence on imported gas and oil.

In France, the government has invested heavily in the coal industry, aiming to increase production and make the country less dependent on foreign energy sources.

The increase in coal production is expected to have a significant impact on the global market, as Europe seeks to reduce its reliance on imported energy.

Shoe Adams was correct in his anticipation that the opening of the Dude Park race track would be a far different scene from that of last year when 250 entries were registered. Today 600 horses will be present, and the full extent of the opening day will not be visible until Thursday when the opening activities will be over.

END OF THE LINE

Bob Chargen, the San Francisco pitcher, is one of the few American League pitchers who can win in a game in which he didn't win. He has won 11 games in 1946, but nine of them were lost on the same day. For instance, the other day the Giants played against the then-uninvolved New York Yankees. Chargen didn't win, but the Giants did. Today, the Giants are expected to win, but Charchen isn't expected to win.
