Many Vacationists Often Forget Simple Fire Prevention Rules

A few years ago, when the war started, every American proved that he could be a good citizen by cutting back on milk consumption and buying more eggs. Today, fire prevention is receiving the same attention.

Many vacationists are not aware of the importance of fire prevention. They may think that their houses are safe because they are not in use during the vacation season. However, if the appliances are not turned off, the house could be destroyed in a fire.

The best way to prevent a house fire is to turn off all appliances and lights when leaving the house. This includes the kitchen stove, oven, refrigerator, and lights. It is also important to keep flammable materials away from open flames.
