Food, Clothing, Housing Price
Will Be Investigated, Clerk Says

Washington, Aug. 12—(AP)—The Consumer, or Attorneys General, Clark told the Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee today that the price of food, clothing and housing is much higher than the Consumer's Bureau recommends.

"I submitted to the Senate the Justice Department's figures which are based on the Consumer's Bureau's data," Clark said. "In the supply of food, the figures are based on the Consumer's Bureau's data," Clark said.

"I submit that the Justice Department's figures, which are based on the Consumer's Bureau's data, are more accurate than the figures of the Consumer's Bureau."

The committee is studying the question of prices of food, clothing and housing.

The Urge To Be First

Bill Otero was responding to an urge which, if he were to follow it when he was free from the world to establish himself, would lead him to a path that would eventually be followed by many who stay at home and those who engage in flight. The story of Bill Otero is a fascinating one. His determination to achieve his goal is admirable, and his actions are certainly inspiring. If he were to follow his urge and establish himself, there is no doubt that his story would be remembered for generations to come.

Most certainly it is one of the mainstays of human progress that the urge to establish oneself in a new world is strong and that it will never be the norm. However, it is important to keep in mind that the urge to establish oneself is not always a result of actual flight. It can also be seen in the determination of individuals to establish themselves in new areas of knowledge or industry.

Fire Is Always Imminent
