Death of Homer Swann, Mayor of South Fulton, Detailed by The Leader.

The gayeties and pleasures of the week, incident upon Commencement exercises, the entertaining of the Grand Conclave Knights Templar and other amusements were given a tinge of sadness by the sudden, and deplorable accident of last night which ended the life of one of our most prominent and useful citizens.

J. Homer Swann, mayor of South Fulton, was killed last night at 10:12 o'clock, about 200 feet south of the Meadows crossing, or the I. C. R. R. and Church street crossing.

He had just left some friends a few minutes before the awful tragedy and had started home, going southwest. A few minutes later, L. J. Newhouse, a switchman discovered the beheaded, mangled body of Mayor Swann. His body was on the outside of the first track south-east of the main-line, lying with his body toward the track and his feet away from it, while his head, which had been completely severed, lay on the inside of the track.

The blood stains on the rail showed that he had been struck, knocked down and pushed eight or ten feet by the car which ran over him cutting off his head. Both arms were broken and the body was terribly mangled. Switch Engine 126, Engineer Murrell at the throttle, had just "kicked" in some cars from the southwest end of the switch and one of these rolling north had crushed out the life of the unfortunate man. He had started home and a strange feature of the accident is that he was going toward the cars on the switch and should have seen them. Why he did not and exactly how the accident occurred, will probably never be known.

The entire city was shocked over the news of the sad accident.

His watch had stopped at 12 minutes past 10 o'clock, which showed the time of the accident. J. Homer Swann was the only child of J. P. and C. F. Swann, his parents, both surviving him. He was born in Calloway county Ky., January 21, 1882 and was married to Nettie Hart, Oct. 3, 1905. His wife and little five year old daughter, Obera, survive him. He came to Fulton with his parents several years ago and they lived at 511 Oak avenue in South Fulton.

Mr. Swann was last November elected mayor of South Fulton and filling the position in a most acceptable manner. He was prominent in business circles, holding a prominent position with the W. K. Hall Lumber Co., and was secretary of the Fulton Building and Loan Association.

He was also prominent in secret and benevolent orders, being clerk of Evergreen Camp No. 4, Woodmen of the World camp, a Mason and an Odd Fellow.

He was a faithful member of the First Baptist Church. The funeral will take place at the residence, 511 Oak avenue, South Fulton, at 8:30 o'clock tonight. Services will be conducted by his pastor, Rev. M. E. Miller.

The body will be carried to Murray, Calloway county, tomorrow morning to be interred in the home cemetery near there. The city councilmen of South Fulton will act as pallbearers.

Fulton Leader.

Will Run it Out

The Hon. J. B. Allensworth, who was formerly a resident of Paducah, and a practicing attorney at this bar, but now lives in Hopkinsville, is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for commonwealth's attorney in the Third judicial district, in which district are the counties of Christian, Trigg, Lyon and Calloway, and in a statement made to a representative of the News-Democrat he said that he was in the race to remain until the polls closed on the primary election day in August, 1915, and that there would be no possibility of his not being a candidate on that day unless intervened. News-Democrat.

THE LADIES' REST ROOM

The new court house at Murray has a "ladies' rest room," which is being furnished and decorated by public subscription by the citizens of that town. This is a most excellent idea, and one that might well be emulated by every county seat in the state. Cadiz Record.

Indeed a most excellent idea, and one for which the Ledger has labored for many years and its realization is a most splendid satisfaction. The work of furnishing the room is in the hands of the ladies of Murray and their perfect accomplishment will result goes without saying. The room will be splendidly and beautifully furnished, in fact will be an ideal home room and will be a pleasure and comfort to tired mothers and lady shoppers who come to Murray to transact their business. The room is to be fitted with lavatory and toilet, couches and rockers, cribs for the babies and will be under the supervision of a matron during the larger public days. The Ledger hopes that the ladies of the county will take advantage of the room, make it their home while in town, find enjoyment in its comforts and conveniences, because it is built and furnished for them. The Ledger also wants to request of the ladies who are in charge of the task of soliciting funds and furnishings for the room that we be permitted the privilege of printing the names of the donors to the fund, and if there is a single business man so "tight" that he refuses to aid in the undertaking and his name is furnished to us we will also take pleasure in publishing this fact that the people of the county might know who he is. Success will crown the effort of the Murray ladies.

Won't Change Creed

Southern Methodism will continue to receive the Apostles' Creed containing the phrase, "The Holy Catholic Church." This was decided at a session of the General Conference of the M. E. Church-South, at Oklahoma City recently when the committee report recommending the elimination of the phrase and substitution of "The Church of God" was defeated. A vote by orders requiring a majority of each class of delegates was taken resulting: Ayes, clergy, 74; lay, 85; noes, clergy, 84; lay, 58.

John W. Collins, of Golden Pond, surrendered to the court Monday afternoon and was ordered to jail to serve a sentence of twenty-five days upon the charge of having in his possession for the purpose of sale intoxicating liquors. These cases were tried at last January term of court, and he was given a fine of $100 and fifty days in jail in one case and $75 and twenty-five days in the other. Cadiz Record.

Whooping Cough.

"About a year ago my three boys had whooping cough and I found Chamberlain's Cough Remedy the only one that would relieve their coughing and whooping spells. I continued this treatment and was surprised to find that it cured the disease in a very short time," writes Mrs. Archie Dairymple, Crooksville, Ohio. For sale by Dale & Stubblefield.

Attorney Martin and Miss Cook Marry

A ceremony, beautiful and impressive in its simplicity, united two young people of unusual grace and accomplishment when Rev. J. J. Castleberry solemnized the rites of matrimony between Hon. Flavious B. Martin and Miss Maud Cook last night at nine o'clock. The ceremony was performed at the manse of the First Christian church, in this city, in the presence of Judge and Mrs. W. V. Gregory, Mrs. H. C. Jackson and little Miss Adelaide Jackson, close personal friends of the bride and groom. The wedding, which is the culmination of a long and happy courtship, comes as a complete surprise to the host of friends and admirers of the young people, although it was expected later on.

The bride comes from a well known and influential family, being the daughter of Judge and Mrs. Thomas P. Cook, of Hopkinsville, but formerly of Murray. She has been connected with the schools of Mayfield for the last four years, and is one of the most popular and efficient teachers in the city. She is a young lady of rare culture and refinement, and these graces are enhanced by her beauty of face and charm of manner. The large circle of friends to whom she has endeared herself since she has been in Mayfield will be delighted to know that she is permanently located here.

Mr. Martin was born and reared in this county and has been a resident of Mayfield for a number of years. He is a rising young lawyer and is at present the county attorney of Graves county. He is a gentleman of sterling worth and integrity and is worthy of the prize he has won for a life companion.

The Messenger joins the many friends of the young couple in wishing them a long, useful and happy life.—Mayfield Messenger.

Mr. Meloon Retires

Mr. John M. Meloon, who has been one of the editors and publishers of the Hazel News for the past few months, has severed his connection with the paper, this interest having been purchased last Monday by George Bingham, his partner, who will continue to give the people of Hazel and this section, the best paper in Calloway.

Mr. Meloon has not yet decided upon the field he will enter, having two or more newspaper propositions in view, but for the present will continue as a resident of this place. For a man with Mr. Meloon's newspaper talent there is always an opening, and he has a following equal to few newspaper writers in this section of the country.—Hazel News.

Wants to Build Business House

Mr. Geo. W. Overbey, one of the county's most progressive farmers and who owns considerable property in town, and a man who feels a great interest in the advancement of both the country and town, is desirous of erecting a handsome two story brick business house on his lot just across the street and east of the Murray hotel. If there is a business concern that will give Mr. Overbey a five year contract for the house at a price that will return him the interest only on the investment he is ready to entertain the proposition and will erect a fine building with basement and pressed brick front and will arrange the building to suit the renter. Mr. Overbey is not willing to put up "a cheap john" house and does not care to build any character of building that would not be a credit to the town. This location is one of the best in the city and his proposition is a very liberal one and the Ledger believes he will find a renter.

The handsome home of Willie Fulton on Institute street was prevented from being destroyed last Thursday by the timely discovery of a fire on the back porch from unknown origin. The damage was slight.

TWO U. S. SENATORS

Must be Elected in November, and Two Must be Nominated in The August Primary.

Frankfort, Ky., May 25.—Not only must two United States Senators be elected next November, but two must be nominated in the August primary, in the opinion of First Assistant Attorney General M. M. Logan, who returned tonight from a trip in Western Kentucky.

Mr. Logan wrote the law providing for the election of United States Senators by popular vote, and said there is no ambiguity about it.

"Under our Constitution when an office becomes vacant ninety days before an election the vacancy must be filled at the election," said Mr. Logan. "The man appointed by the Governor to fill the vacancy caused by Senator Bradley's death will hold the office until his successor is elected in November."

Mr. Logan also said that Senator Bradley died seventy days before the primary, and that a candidate for the short term from the November election until March 4, 1915, must be nominated at the August primary. Had Senator Bradley lingered until after midnight Saturday night, it would have been different. He died May 23, leaving out that day. There remain eight days in May, thirty in June and thirty-one in July, and adding the primary date, August 1, makes exactly seventy days. The same result, of course, is obtained by counting May 23, the day Senator Bradley died, and leaving out the primary date.

Stubborn, Annoying Coughs Cured.

"My husband had a cough for fifteen years and my son for eighteen years. Dr. King's New Discovery completely cured them, for which I am most thankful," writes Mrs. David Moor, of Saginaw, Ala. BECKER CONVICTED FOR SECOND TIME

JURY'S VERDICT FIRST DEGREE MURDER—THE FOREMAN SHEDS TEARS.

ONLY ONE BALLOT TAKEN

Defendant Granted Week for Any Motion Desired—New Witnesses in Second Trial Corroborate Evidence in First.

New York. Twelve men decided for the second time that Charles Becker was the arch conspirator responsible for the Rosenthal murder, which nearly two years ago shook New York to a realization of corruption in the police department and opened a new era of police reform.

Becker, once a police lieutenant, was found guilty of murder in the first degree. Only a pardon or interference again by the court of appeals can save him from following to the electric chair the four gunmen who shot Herman Rosenthal, the gambler, early on the morning of July 16, 1912. The jury decided that the gunmen were Becker's agents.

One ballot decided Becker's fate. It was taken almost immediately after the jurors returned from luncheon at an uptown hotel, where they went when Supreme Court Justice Samuel Seabury had finished his charge. The vote was unanimous for conviction. Tears streamed down the decision and tears were in the eyes of several other jurors. They had agreed that the corroborated in the first trial, Vallon failed to present at the first trial the stories of Rose, Vallon support the stories of the accomplices and Webber, the three accomplices who turned informers, had been furnished by new witnesses at the second trial.

Becker's counsel announced that he would appeal and gained a week's stay for the preparation of his future campaign. The defendant was granted a week's meeting with his wife and his brothers and then was taken back to his cell in the Tombs.

INDICTMENTS IN FRANK CASE

Bribery, Coercion and Perjury are the Charges Made—Further Investigation by the Grand Jury.

Atlanta. Charges of bribery, coercion and perjury made in connection with efforts to obtain a new trial for Leo M. Frank, under sentence of death for the murder of Mary Phagan, resulted in five indictments being returned by the Fulton county grand jury.

The Rev. C. B. Raggs, recently dismissed from the pastorate of a local church on account of the repudiation of an affidavit made by him in behalf of the convicted factory superintendent, was indicted for perjury, together with R. B. Barber, Arthur Thurman, a lawyer, Daniel S. Lehon, representative of a national detective agency, and Carlton C. Tedder, engaged in detective work, were charged with subornation of perjury.

Further investigation of the charges of improper influences in the noted murder case is to be made by the grand jury.

20 FOREST FIRES RAGING

Dreaded Crown Fire Breaks Out in Washington—Hundreds of Fire-Fighters Are in Field.

Olympia, Wash. Warm weather, absence of rain and brisk winds have led to a serious forest fire situation in this state. Twenty fires are burning, practically none is listed as under control and the dreaded crown fire which kills timber as it progresses, was killing through trees in Lewis county, having started at Independence, State Forester Smith has ordered out all Western Washington county fire wardens. Hundreds of fire-fighters already are in the field for the Washington Forest Fire association, the state and federal authorities.

BIG CROWD GREET COLONEL

Roosevelt Returns From Jungle—Dozens Having Expressed Himself as to Presidency.

New York. Theodore Roosevelt returned home from his visit of many months to South America. Accompanied by his two naturalists of his party, George K. Cherry and Leo E. Miller, he arrived from Para on board the Booth liner Alden.

With a few crisp sentences Col. Roosevelt reaffirmed the verity of his belief in the two naturalists of his party. He declared himself as president of the United States for 1916, declared he would not run for governor of New York, made a few deprecating remarks about his critics, and, with familiar craft tooting and flange fluttering, was taken on board a tug, which proceeded to Oyster Bay.

Friends who had been alarmed by reports of Col. Roosevelt's severe illness were greatly surprised when they saw him. He was noticeably thinner, and he used a cane, but he appeared to have lost not an ounce of his vigor and energy. After stopping ten days in this country, Mr. Roosevelt will go to Spain to attend the wedding of his son, Kermit.

As the tugs which carried several members of the Roosevelt family, including Mrs. Roosevelt, E. E. Smith, Mrs. Archibald, and Theodore, Jr., approached the Alden, the familiar figure of the colonel could be seen leaning over the side of the tug. As he waved a greeting, his lips flitted into a familiar smile. Not a few eyes were turned to the tug, and a host of newspaper men scrambled up the companionway. The colonel stood at the top and shook each man by the hand.

ROOT ARGUES FOR EXEMPTION REPEAL

HOLDS SENATE'S ATTENTION IN FIVE-HOUR SPEECH—SAYS 1912 LAW VIOLATED.

MAKES PLEA FOR EQUALITY

New Yorker Says He Is Voting for Repeal Now Because the Senate Would Not Vote to Arbitrate the Dispute.

Washington. Senator Root, Republican member of the foreign relations committee, held the senate's attention throughout a five-hour speech in support of the administration to repeal the tolls exemption of the Panama canal law. As the New York senator sat down, Senator Kern, Democratic leader, led the applause from the floor and spectators in the galleries joined in.

The burden of the speech was to show that the Hay-Pauncefote treaty provided that treatment accorded by the United States to its own citizens must be the same as that accorded citizens of other nations.

Root declared the United States always had insisted on this broad principle of equality and insisted that the understanding of Henry White, Joseph Choate, John Hay and Theodore Roosevelt, Americans who negotiated the treaty, was that the equality mentioned in the convention equally applied to American citizens of other nations.

Taking up the specific question of exemption of American coastwise vessels, the senator said the law of 1912, which granted exemption to the Panama canal, was a violation of the treaty. This was true, he argued, because no real coastwise trade of the United States could pass through the canal—1,000 miles away from the coast. The senator declared he was voting for repeal now because in the judgment of senators best able to arbitrate the dispute.

Ferryboats and small craft hurried to safety as the liner floated broadside down the river, with twenty tugs circling it, and a tug, which floated a mile before the tugs got her under control, and then she returned under her own steam.

SEEKS PEACE IN COLORADO

Judge Ben Lindsey and Party of Women Plead With President—Will Try to See Rockefeller.

Washington. Federal intervention to force a settlement between mine owners and miners in the Colorado coal fields was urged on President Wilson by Judge Ben B. Lindsey and a delegation of Colorado women. It was indicated later than the president was willing to do everything within his constitutional power to bring peace in the situation, but that he believed the state should solve the difficulty if possible.

Judge Lindsey announced that after this he would go to New York with a party of women and make an effort to see John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and urge him to submit the differences between mine operators and strikers to arbitration.

Late Finance's Control of New Haven Revealed in Mellen's Testimony. No One Would Oppose Him.

Washington. Dominant control by the late J. Pierpont Morgan, not only of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad, was further emphasized when former President Charles S. Mellen, before the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Mr. Mellen admitted frankly that neither he nor directors of the New Haven had the temerity openly to oppose Mr. Morgan's plans, although he said he sometimes disagreed with him.

Even in the acquisition by the New Haven of the Westchester property, which involved millions of dollars, Mellen did not approve of the purchase, but did not oppose Mr. Morgan's plan. He said that Mr. Morgan lived the property might have been for sale, but it was not today. So, too, with the acquisition of the Worcester, Nashua and Rochester railroads, which Mr. Morgan was paying $15 a share more than the stock really was worth. As in the Westchester transaction, however, Mr. Morgan, according to Mr. Mellen, would brook no interjection carrying out his plans without regard to the opinions of others interested.

REBELS WILL TAKE PART IN MEDIATION

WILL NOT BE BOUND BY ANY PACIFICATION PLAN—WILL SIMPLY GIVE INFORMATION.

HOPE TO RESTORE PEACE

Gen. Carranza Has Given His Consent to Plan After Several Conferences Between His Representatives and Washington Officials.

Washington. The Constitutionalists are preparing to send a representative to Niagara Falls to confer with the South American mediators who are endeavoring to settle the Mexican problem. This will be done when the direct understanding that the representatives of the Constitutionalists to Gen. Carranza's purposes, without committing the Constitutionalists to any plan for the pacification of Mexico that the mediators may determine upon.

Jose Vasconcelos, now at Montreal on a financial mission for Gen. Carranza, is understood to be the man chosen to go to Niagara Falls. Men in close touch with the Constitutionalists, the question of taking this step has been the subject of several informal conferences between representatives of the Washington administration recently, and it is understood that Gen. Carranza has given his consent.

It was reported on apparently reliable authority that another invitation may be sent to Carranza by the mediators to take formal part in the mediation proceedings. For the present, at least, however, it is declared the Constitutionalists report merely could give the mediators information with out committing the leaders to any agreement.

FEDERALS LEAVE SALTILLO

12,000 Federals Flee From Saltillo to San Luis Potosi—Rebels Are in Pursuit.

Torreon, Mexico. Evacuating Saltillo before the battle fairly had got warm, the Federal forces of Gen. Joaquin Maas and Gen. Javier de la Mora, 12,000 strong, are in full flight to the south, hoping to reach San Luis before Villa's pursuing army can overtake them. Pursuit of the Federals already is on and the probability is that they either will be met by 5,000 rebels at Gen. Torres and Gen. Gallardo's outposts of San Luis, or overtaken by 13,000 cavalry.

Saltillo is now the rebel provisional capital. It has been so designated by Gen. Venustiano Carranza, who has announced that he will proceed to the without delay and will protect the scattered officials. Carranza will establish his headquarters in the state palace, from which he went forth a year and a half ago to organize an army to fight Huerta and avenge the death of Madero.

Washington. With mediation proceedings removed to Niagara Falls, activity here in the Mexican situation was notably relaxed. It was the evident purpose of the Washington government to give the conference the fullest opportunity to work out its plans with the least possible influence from the outside.

American commissioners left for the scene of the conference and later were followed by Minister Suarez, of Chile, the last of the mediators to depart.

A special telegraph wire from the headquarters of the American representatives at Niagara Falls to the White House was installed to keep the president in close touch with every step of the proceedings. An important step of the proceedings will be submitted to the president before the American representatives take any action. Thirty that officials do not expect a prolonged conference.

Fear Assassination. Vera Cruz. Dr. Aureliano Curiel, administrator of the interior, who has arrived here, declared that he left the capital because he feared assassination.

Denies Report. Mexico City. Gen. Blazquez, minister of war, said that no great battle has yet begun in Saltillo, but that there have only been hot skirmishes between the vanguards.

EXECUTE FEDERAL OFFICERS

Villa Wreaks Terrible Vengeance on Gen. Osorno and Staff—33 Put to Death.

Juarez, Mexico. Vengeance and the lust for blood apparently are the dominating factors in the battle which Pancho Villa is waging against the Federalists at Saltillo. Apparently, too, the general is willing that the world shall hear of his bloody methods. From Villa's private secretary, Luis A. Benavides, was received a dispatch stating that Gen. Osorno and his staff of 32 officers were captured by Villa at Zerote, 15 miles from Saltillo, and that they were immediately put to death. Their capture and execution followed a battle at Zerote in which the Federal army, endeavoring to reach Saltillo after its defeat at Parron, ran into Villa's army and was defeated into Villa's losses. Expecting to be treated as prisoners of war under civilized rules of warfare, the Federal commander, it is said, surrendered with his staff. He and his officers were killed as soon as they had been made prisoners. The few or more men of the Federal army who surrendered were sent to Torreon, and the rebels say they will be released or taken into the rebel army.

All Spaniards in Mexico City are to be expelled from the city and from Mexico as Pancho Villa takes the capital, and those who have been active in aiding Huerta are to be put to death. It was stated here by friends of Villa, who say the rebel general has a list of all Spaniards in Mexico City who have been active in aiding Huerta, and each is marked for death.

Rumors thick in Mexico. Vera Cruz is hotbed of anti-Huerta plotting—Lozano Resigns as Cabinet Officer.

Vera Cruz. The disintegration of the Huerta regime has become a fact from every side come stories of the defection of soldiers, officers and even ministers.

Lozano, minister of communications, whose resignation followed the suppression of the Catholic organ El Paris, of which he was part owner, has been forbidden to leave Mexico City and is followed everywhere by secret service men. Lozano, although a reactionary, is a very able man and has been considered Huerta's right-hand man.

Rumors are current of a quarrel between Huerta and Gen. Garcia Pena, who succeeded Gen. Maas of the federal forces just outside the American lines. Pena got his appointment because he has been a strong Madero man. Candido Aguilar, who turned rebel following the assassination of Madero, is now operating in the same section and his men have been reported riding inside Pena's lines as though there were an understanding between them.

This city is a hotbed of anti-Huerta plotting and rumor makes the former owner of Gov. Deluna the headquarters of the conspirators. Deluna's son-in-law, Garcia Pena's daughter, and if there be any truth in the stories of the rebel camp the acquisition to the rebel cause of the general has been effected at conferences held in the De la Rosa house, where delegates of both camps have met without interference by the American secret service men.

High Officials Fear the Worst—Promises Have Been Disregarded So Often by Federals.

Washington. With a desperate fight in progress at Saltillo and the city entirely surrounded by Villa's troops, interest in the Mexican situation centered on the fate of General Sillman. The state department believes Villa will take Saltillo and it is reported that Villa plans to find out, as soon as he enters the city, just what happened to Sillman.

Consular Representative Carrothers, who is with Villa, has already been ordered to determine immediately what happened to the vice-consul there. They declare the promises that he would be produced have been disregarded so often that they believe he has been slain.

BRAND WHITLOCK IN HIS NEW ROLE

his wife have been very popular on account of their charming hospitality

Brand Whitlock, the new American minister, is now settled in the new legation at the end of Rue Bellard, one of the best residential streets in Brussels, and very suitable for a permanent home for representatives of the United States.

Before Mr. Whitlock became a full-fledged diplomat he was mayor of Toledo four terms, succeeding "Golden Rule" Jones as the friend of the people; before that he was a successful lawyer, and is an author of note.

Hugh S. Gibson has begun his work as secretary of legation at Brussels, to which position he was promoted from secretary of legation in Cuba, previous to which he had been second secretary to the American embassy in London and secretary of legation in Honduras.

Col. John S. Parke has gone to Washington, having finished his term as military attaché. Belgians deeply regret having to lose him, as he and his wife have been very popular on account of their charming hospitality.

COMES OF NAVAL STOCK

Charles Johnstone Badger, in command of the fleet at Vera Cruz, was born in Rockville, Md., on August 6, 1852. He was the son of Commodore Oscar Charles Badger and Margaret M. Badger. An appointment at large to Annapolis was given the present rear admiral by President Grant in 1869, and four years later the young sailor graduated with the title of midshipman.

In July, 1874, he was commissioned an ensign, was given the title of master in November, 1879, and was raised to the rank of lieutenant junior grade in 1883. In 1886 he became a lieutenant. From September, 1873, until July, 1876, he was aboard the Narragansett, engaged in making a survey of the Gulf of California, and from October, 1876, until December, 1878, he was on duty at the navy yard in Washington.

He then was transferred to the torpedo boat Alarm for six months, then to the Asiatic station, with the Ashuelot, Alert, Monocacy, and Monaghan, and in December, 1879, was assigned to special duty with the bureau of navigation.

He then spent some time with the coast survey steamers Endeavor and Albatross, and was switched to the Yantic on the north Atlantic station. In October, 1882, he was on duty at the Boston navy yard, and then was ordered to the fish commission steamer Fish Hawk.

Perhaps the most dramatic part of his career was that of taking part in Schley's relief expedition to find Greely, who was lost somewhere near the North Pole. Badger was the executive and navigating officer of the Alert, being second in command.

He was in command of the naval forces on the water front in San Francisco during the earthquake, and helped the stricken city greatly by aiding in the transfer of naval supplies.

ONE BY SENATOR WALSH

Jim lounged about, grousing at his hard luck. Then one day he met the senator and a smile as bright as a new engagement ring illuminated his rusty countenance.

"Why, Jim, you seem happy," exclaimed the senator. "What's the glad news? Must have had some good luck come your way."

"I have," cried Jim, throwing out his chest with pride. "My brother has just gotten a new job!"

MRS. JOHN LIND, WOMAN OF THE WEST

Among women of today a personality of particular interest is that of Mrs. John Lind, wife of President Wilson's recent envoy to Mexico. Mrs. Lind accompanied her husband on his diplomatic mission into that country, and with him spent several months in the city, which is now a center of interest in the world.

Before her marriage Mrs. Lind was Miss Alice Shepherd. She comes of old Pilgrim stock, her ancestors having come over to America in the days of the Mayflower. The Rev. Thomas Shepard, one of her forefathers, was among the first settlers of the town of Andover, Mass., in 1630.

Mrs. Lind herself was born in Wisconsin. The spirit of the West permeates her life in large degree, she loves the freedom of outdoor life, and the life of the West. She is a good rider and an expert swimmer. In talking with Mrs. Lind you realize that it is probable that her athletic tendencies that she has of clear complexion and her splendid health. She is the mother of two boys and two girls.

GOVERNOR UNABLE TO ATTEND INSURANCE MEETING AS SCHEDULED.

ALL AGREE TO POSTPONEMENT

Action Taken Following Receipt of Message by Secretary of Conference—Situation More Hopeful.

(Special Frankfort Correspondence.)

Frankfort, Ky.—The conference between representatives of fire insurance companies, state officials and Kentucky business men, planned for next Wednesday, has been postponed until June 9. This action was taken following the receipt of a message by Alfred Brandeis, secretary of the conference, from Gov. McCreary, stating that a previous engagement would prevent the governor's leaving Frankfort and suggesting that the conference be held on next Thursday instead.

Mr. Brandeis sent a telegram to E. G. Richards, of New York, chairman of the insurance interests, inquiring if Thursday would be satisfactory to him. Mr. Richards replied by telegram that he could not be in Louisville on next Thursday, and suggested June 9 as a date agreeable to him. Mr. Brandeis then called Gov. McCreary on the telephone and learned that this date would be satisfactory to the state officials. Mr. Richards then was telegraphed that the date of the conference was definitely fixed for June 9.

Mr. Brandeis also communicated with C. M. Bullitt, of Henderson, Ky., chairman of the conference.

Grain Rates Soon.

The new rates on grain ordered by the Kentucky railroad commission and upheld by the United States supreme court will go into effect June 1. At present an order of Circuit Judges J. W. Warrington and A. C. Denison and District Judge C. T. Sanford, dissolving the restraining order obtained by the Louisville & Nashville, takes effect. The order said that the court, overruling a motion for an injunction against the railroad, and denying to the Louisville & Nashville the right to enforce its rates, was in error. The order said that the railroad's rates were upheld, and the Kentucky court of appeals sustained its authority to require the railroad to enforce its rates. The rates raised by the commission were the same as had been previously in effect, the railroad having voluntarily reduced the rate on grain on nineteen distilleries. When the Interstate Commerce Commission made a ruling that railroads should not discriminate in their rates, the Louisville & Nashville raised the rates to the distilleries, and the commissioners ordered the old rates restored.

Latest Rag Time Dance.

Huh! Think the tango or the maxixe is the latest, do you? Think New York has the whole world skinned in its dances deux nouveaux, eh? Well, how about this—Frankfort has evolved a dance all by herself, and it's called the Kentucky Kick. This was discovered when a New Yorker, who had stayed up half the night watching the dance of the younger set in the Frankfort Hotel ball room, announced his verdict. "Yes," he said, "they had a dance there that I'd never seen before—a kind of gladiolus tango, a sort of tango with a little of the gavotte in it. The couples went around the room almost at a run, or gallop is the better term, and did so gracefully it didn't seem like they were exerting their position. It was one of the most beautiful things I've ever seen in my life. I have seen for a long time. 'Surely it wasn't one of those new dances from Manhattan?' the New Yorker was asked. "Sure," he rejoined, "I have seen one of the dances on little old Broadway, and I'll go bail it never saw the white lights. No, it was born right here in Frankfort, and I'm going to make it famous when I get back to Forty-second street. I've named it the 'Kentucky Kick.'"

Equalization Board Acts on Counties.

The state board of equalization increased the assessments of Owen county 10 per cent, and increased the assessment of farm land in McCreary county 10 per cent. No changes were made in the assessments of Garrard, Jackson, Jessamine, Lincoln and Madison counties.

No Famine in Insurance.

Ruby Laffon, of Hopkinsville, chairman of the state rating board, has addressed a letter to the members of the legislature in which he charges that the fire insurance companies are playing a game of "street-out." He says "there is no famine in insurance nor any undue excitement or uneasiness among the people that there will be a famine in insurance." As a result of an investigation initiated by the state rating board, it is reported that the fire insurance companies are playing a game of "street-out."

Funds For Farm Work in Kentucky.

Without a dissenting vote the senate at Washington has accepted the James amendment to the agricultural bill, appropriating an additional $50,000 for farm demonstration work. By agreement with the department of agriculture this extra sum is to be apportioned equally among the states of Kentucky, West Virginia and Maryland. These three states, as a result of the separation of the financial relations between the Rockefeller foundation and the department, receive less for farm demonstration work next year than any of their southern sisters. The James amendment has been agreed to by the house conferees, and if it goes through as expected Kentucky's apportionment for farm demonstration work will be nearly $29,000 annually hereafter, a sum equal to that now supplied by the federal government and the Rockefeller foundation combined. Mr. James made a brief speech in explanation of his amendment. It was evolved during the recent visit here of State Agricultural Commissioner J. W. Newman, who pointed out that, with the cutting-off of the Rockefeller foundation funds, Kentucky's appropriation for farm demonstration work would fall very low, about $22,000. By the terms of the James amendment the current agricultural bill carries $678,240 for farm work in all the states instead of $628,240.

More Prisoners Paroled.

The state board of prison commissioners, with the approval of Gov. McCreary, has paroled a large number of prisoners, whose minimum term have expired, quitting them to parole under the decision of the court of appeals in the John DeMoss case. In practically all the cases the board had no discretion, but was compelled to release the prisoners because the conditions precedent to parole had been fulfilled. Chairman Daniel E. O'Sullivan said regardless of what the commissioners may think, they had to parole these indeterminate sentence prisoners upon the expiration of their minimum sentences if their prison records were good and they have employment for six months awaiting them, but they are only conditionally free, and the commission may bring them back to serve out the remainder of their sentence if they violate the conditions of their paroles.

Postoffices To Be Discontinued.

The postoffices at Beaverville, Warren county, and Holly Cross, Marion county, will be superseded by rural delivery on May 31. After that date mail for Beaverville will be routed out of Fountain Run and mail for Holly Cross will be handled at Loretto. The postmaster general authorized the establishment of a rural route out of Loretto, Lyon county, on August 1. It will be twenty miles in length and will serve eighty-six families. Kentucky postmasters were appointed as follows: Jefferson E. Bruner; Bass, Taylor county; William J. Orrender; Luff Bloom, Green county; Edward L. Barlowe, and Coon Hollow, Nelson county; Arthur Cummins.

Fine Outlook For Crops.

According to Commissioner Newman's first crop report for the year 1914, everything is lovely—cattle, fruits, tobacco, resources and livestock all making a good start, the report says, and weather conditions are favorable. In short, the prospect seems to be fine this year for bumper crops all along the line, which is very gratifying to the farmer. The report also says that it is not so far off the mark as the predictions of the state agricultural department may be realized.

CAPITOL GOSSIP

After two years of litigation between the factions of McCreary county, one faction favoring Whitley City, and the other faction favoring Pine Knott, as the county seat at McCreary county, the court of appeals decided that Whitley City is the county seat of McCreary county. In affirming the judgment of the McCreary circuit, the appellate court held that in equity cases circuit courts have no inherent power to try contested elections, but can only exercise such powers where it has been conferred by expressed enactment or necessary implication. There is no statute covering contested election hearings by circuit courts in this state.

Six outfits of farmers' libraries are being assembled by Commissioner J. W. Newman.

The libraries will contain forty volumes each, and will contain practical works on agriculture and will be circulated. Raywick, Marion county, Mt. Washington and Franklin will get the first three sent out. Wherever possible the pastor of a rural church will be in charge of the library for his community.

The court of appeals has held valid the local option election held in Somerset, September 28, 1913, in which the city voted dry by a majority of 57 votes.

The election was contested by the city on several grounds, one being that the statute requires an equal division of election officers favoring and opposing a proposition. The court says that while it favors an equal division of election officers for and against a proposition, the law is not so strict as to require an equal division of election officers for and against a proposition. The court must stand.

NOT HURT BY LAW

Wool Growers in No Way Injured by New Tariff.

Are Now Getting Higher Prices for Their Product Than Before the Revision Went Into Effect—Market Figures Quoted.

The Globe-Democrat is utterly indifferent whether it tells the truth or not so long as it makes a point against tariff reform. It presumes in the most shameless way upon the prejudice or ignorance of its readers. Look at this from an editorial:

"But more than manufacturers are farmers now complaining of duties reduced to the minimum on many of their products and the listing of many others on the free list. Among them all, and naturally enough, the wool growers, who find their product free listed as an aid to the manufacturer, are the most disgruntled. For they can see that, in spite of the losses visited upon them by making raw wool free, the manufacturer is—etc., etc."

And now we beg to reproduce an extract from the commercial page of the New York Times of May 3:

"The auction sales of wool in London which are now in progress were looked forward to with considerable interest. Thus far they are a repetition of those preceding in showing a continuous rise in the value of the fleeces. It is a matter of supply and demand. The world's supply of wool has not been growing in proportion to the world's need. The wool clip of this country has risen in price just as has that abroad. As was stated in the Times a few weeks ago, the growers are getting higher prices than since 1897. In view of this it is rather funny to read of certain complaints ascribed to some Oregon wool growers. These gentlemen expressed their wrath at the free-wool provision of the new tariff because, as they say, if the old duty were still existent they would be able to obtain three or four cents a pound more for their wool. They are not satisfied with getting more than they did for many years while there was a duty on the product they sell."

Does the Globe-Democrat want to see the high prices which are the natural and inevitable result of the proportion between demand and supply still higher elevated by a tax laid on all of us for the benefit of the pockets of some of us? And with raw wool higher than it has been in 17 years, how are we to account for that journal's reference to "the losses visited" on the farmers by making wool free? Is this crude ignorance or deliberate misrepresentation?—St. Louis Post Dispatch.

Root Rather a Hindrance.

In a speech in Washington, Senator Root, referring to the Mexican situation, said, incidentally:

"The American democracy year by year has been more and more coming into its own, coming into more direct control over the affairs of their government. If the American people are to conduct their foreign affairs as they are conducting their own government, they must know something about international relations."

This is an interesting acknowledgment from an unexpected source. Undoubtedly democracy is coming to its own, but not with any help from Senator Root.

Has Mr. Foraker Forgotten?

Mr. Foraker of Ohio was a member of the senate committee on foreign relations, which passed the Hay-Panama treaty, and he now has the temerity to say that that committee did not understand that the United States was included in all the "all nations" of the treaty whose vessels were to be accorded "entire equality" of treatment in the matter of canal tolls. Has he forgotten that the senate itself had no such understanding? Or that an attempt to amend the treaty in that body so as to exclude the United States from the "all nations" provision was voted down, 42 to 27?—New York World.

What the Senator Really Means.

As our treaty with England provides for the use of the Panama canal by the vessels of all nations on equal terms, the presumption is adverse to the exemption of our coastwise vessels. If the treaty admits of any other construction the burden of proof is very much on the side of those who would exempt some American vessels. Yet Senator Townsend of Michigan is so furious over the proposition to take the words of the treaty at their face value that he denounces it as "perfidy" and "dishonor" and "cowardice." What he really means is that he dislikes a Democratic president.—Philadelphia Record.

No Ground for Complaint.

Some of the refugees from Mexico complain because they were not rescued. Others complain because they were rescued and protest that they were "shanghaied." Both are equally far from the truth, and both are acting very ungraciously. At Tampico the fact that the federals and insurgents were fighting would have made intervention by us seem like taking sides or the other, and vessels that could not be rescued were "shanghaied." Mexico would not have been more efficiently in the interests of humanity.

REMARKABLE CASE of Mrs. HAM

Declares Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Saved Her Life and Sanity.

Shamrock, Mo.—"I feel it my duty to tell the public the condition of my health before using your medicine. I had falling, inflammation and congestion, female weakness, pains in both sides, backaches and bearing down pains, was short of memory, nervous, impatient, passed sleepless nights, and had neither strength nor energy. There was always a fear and dread in my mind, I had cold, nervous, weak spells, hot flashes over my body. I had a place in my right side that was so sore that I could hardly bear the weight of my clothes. I tried medicines and doctors, but they did me little good, and I never expected to get out again. I got Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier, and I certainly would have been in grave or in an asylum if your medicines had not saved me. But now I can work all day, sleep well at night, eat anything I want, have no hot flashes or weak, nervous spells. All pains, aches, fears and dreads are gone, my house, children and husband are no longer neglected, as I am almost entirely free of the bad symptoms I had before taking your remedies, and all is pleasure and happiness in my home."

GOOD FOR POLAR EXPLORERS

Frenchman's Invention of Much Benefit to Those Who Track Waste Places of the Earth.

Count Bertrand de Lesseps, son of the famous Frenchman of Suez canal fame, has constructed an air-propelled machine which is capable of attaining a speed of from fifteen to sixty miles an hour over the snow, according to the condition of the frozen roads. The machine is a small, light, and easily handled, broad, flat metal runners, and vibration is reduced to a minimum by the addition of strong springs. The propeller behind the pilot is well guarded by a metal screen as a protection against any one approaching it closely. When snow-falls wheels are placed on the projecting pins, which lift the ski from the ground, and the car will then attain a speed of nearly one hundred miles an hour. Some such machine as this is to be taken into the antarctic regions by Shackleton with his forthcoming expedition. Abroad this form of amusement is called aerobics.

FEEBLE OLD PEOPLE

Are Told How to Regain Strength and Vigor.

As one grows old the waste of the system becomes more rapid than repair, the organs act more slowly and less effectively than in youth, the circulation is poor, the blood thin and digestion weak.

Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic without oil is the ideal strengthener and body-builder for old folks, for it contains the very elements needed to rebuild wasting tissues and replace weakness with strength. Vinol also fortifies the system against colds and thus prevents pneumonia.

Mrs. Mary Lee, of Columbus, Ga., says: "If people only knew the good Vinol does old people, I am sure you would be unable to supply the demand. I never took anything before that did me so much good as Vinol. It is the finest tonic and strength creator I ever used in my life."

If Vinol fails to build up the feeble, old people, and create strength we will return your money.

W. O. Bradley Answers Final Call

Washington, May 23.—William O. Bradley, United States senator from Kentucky, died at his residence here to-night at 9:45 after a short illness, aggravated by a recent fall. He was attended by the members of his family and some close friends.

Senator Bradley had not been very strong for some time. A few days ago, he fell and hurt himself very much. The shock told upon him and for a day or two he was regarded as in a serious condition.

He rallied, however, and was apparently doing well. There came a change for the worse this week and he grew rapidly worse. Friday it became apparent he could not survive long and this morning dissolution set in and was rapid during the day though he lived until the hour stated.

Announcement of his death though no surprise, has caused many expressions of regret.

The senator's body was taken Monday to Frankfort for funeral services Tuesday afternoon from the home of his daughter, Mrs. John G. South.

Committee from both houses accompanied the body.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by continually failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by E. J. TYPICAL NEWSPAPER COMMENT ON THE REDPATH CHAUTAUQUA OF 1913

The Tri-City Daily, Florence, Ala., says: "Florence has been captured entirely by the Redpath Chautauqua and it is a safe bet that the chautauqua will not be allowed to pass this city by in the future."

In an editorial in the Albany, Ga., Herald this statement is made: "Thru this big organization with a string of 110 chautauquas scheduled we were enabled to have attractions that we could not have secured for a single assembly."

The Dyersburg, Tenn., State Gazette said editorially: "We will all be sorry when it becomes necessary for them to fold their tents, but unlike the Arabs it will not be necessary for them to steal away."

The Clarksville, Tenn., Leaf-Chronicle "Now that our good people know from actual experience just what are the possibilities of the Chautauqua movement they are unanimously agreed as to its great helpfulness to a community."

The Birmingham, Ala., Age-Herald says: "The tent which holds over 2000 persons was well filled when the performance began last night and altho the weather was hot every part of the program was received with much enthusiasm. Indications are that from now on large crowds will patronize the chautauqua performances. The Redpath agency which is giving the program is well known as one of the foremost booking agencies of the world."

The Alpena, Mich., Echo: "When Mr. Rheinfrank asked those of the audience who would like a chautauqua in Alpena next year to stand, the entire audience arose. It was necessary to call an imposing vote."

The Battle Creek, Mich., Enquirer: "The Best Ever Chautauqua grows more popular with each succeeding entertainment."

The Gary, Ind., Post: "It is doubtful if any chautauqua in any city has ever had such overwhelming success during its first year as the Redpath Chautauqua had here during its present engagement."

Honesty, Energy and Ambition Depend on Physical Condition.

An eminent German scientist has said, "Honesty is a state of mind dependent on the physical condition." Everyone knows that energy and ambition depend on "how one feels." The liver plays an important part in one's feelings. If it is performing its natural functions we feel energetic and ambitious. When it is not working right we feel depressed and lazy. Headaches, indigestion, constipation and backache are the signs.

Calomel used to do, but it proved so dangerous that medical science had to find another course.

Grigsby's LIVER-LAX does better work than calomel, and without danger and without any bad after effects. This remarkable liver remedy is for sale in 50c and $1.00 bottles by E. F. MILLER who guarantees its quality by offering to return purchase price. Look for the likeness of L. K. Grigsby on every bottle.

The continued dry weather is delaying the setting of the tobacco crop, and quite a large number of Calloway planters state that plants are damaging on the beds. CHAUTAUQUA WEEK IN MURRAY, JUNE 11 TO 17

A Word of Counsel to June Brides

This is the month of Marriages. Many young girls are going into matrimony head-first. It is a question whether they will land on their feet. The following advice from the Editor of Pictorial Review will guide them:

Among my friends is a man whose married life is so happy that all who know him comment on the fact. Yes this man tells me that the first six months of marriage was a veritable hell upon earth for both him and his wife. His wife had been petted and spoiled by family and friends. She expected Mr. Young Husband to continue the agreeable process, no matter how much it interfered with his business or how tired he was when he came home. She expected him to be a heroic figure at his task of supporting her and their home.

But he never had been an impassioned lover, and he was not exactly a heroic figure in his chosen profession. When his bride discovered that he was common clay, she had to tell him how disappointed she was. Once she went even further and told him she could not understand how she had been so blind as to marry a man who did not share a single one of her tastes and ambitions! Then Mr. Young Husband talked back. He said she had had ample time during a two years engagement to discover his short comings. He had never posed nor masqueraded.

On this occasion some sharp speeches were exchanged, but nevertheless what the husband said must have sunk deep into his wife's heart for soon afterward, she came to him to "talk it over." She had learned where all the trouble lay. She had found the cause of all the unpleasant scenes which were slowly but surely undermining their marital happiness. She had been trying to make her husband fit her ideals, instead of fitting her ideals to her husband.

The average girl idealizes the man she loves too much for her good and his. She endows him with qualities picked at random from books and plays. She decides, in an entirely feminine and inconsistent fashion, that he is what she would have him be, and when he refuses to climb upon her self-erected pedestal, she does one of two things—informs him that he is not the man she thought he was, or she fits her ideals to the man she has married.

And the last is not a hard thing to do. If only the young wives would earnestly try to uncover the true attitude of the man they have married toward marriage, toward love, toward parenthood, there would be less marital discord less marital wrecks strewn along the coast of contentment. It's not easy to make a man over, even through love, but it is easy to bring out the better side of his nature—just by fitting your ideals to him. He wants to live up to the best in himself. It is not always possible for him to live up to the ideals you have chosen to endow him with.

But give him a chance! Start with your marriage day! Realize that to him marriage is just as sacred, just as romantic as it is to you! Then having married him, believe that the real man you find can make you fully as happy as the dream man you walked with during these wonderful days of wooing and winning!

Two Straights from Waverly

The Murray ball team made it one, two from Waverly Tuesday and Wednesday afternoon, and the third game is being played at this hour with every indication that number three will be hung up to the credit of the home team. The visitors are about the cleverest bunch of young men that have been here in some time, but they evidently left their ball playing habit at their Tennessee home.

At no time during the first game was there ever any doubt regarding the result and the game was won by Murray by the score of 13 to 1. The second game promised to be very much more interesting, until the last half of the fifth inning when Murray wound up and turned loose to the tune of five runs, and from that time on it was easy sledding and the bulletin finally read at the close Murray 7; Waverly 3.

Joe Matt Wheeler called both the games, and his good judgment and fair decisions coupled with his beautiful, sonorous voice and very correct up-to-now swell English pronouncement of plays as made was the feature of both games. Joe Matt was prevented from playing because of a crippled hand resulting from about 90 cents worth of the 30 cents per hundred ice of the Independent Ice Company alighting on his left mit!

Fair crowds were in attendance each day. Mrs. Lona Keys will return to Murray next Sunday after spending the past few months with her daughter, Mrs. Tosco Knight, of Beeville Texas.

THE MURRAY LEDGER, MURRAY, KY.

Current Modes for the Young Girl

THE taste of Paris designers has been called much in question of late. So much, that our faith is no longer pinned to it. But in Paris, as elsewhere, there are designers and designers. Certainly that one who originated and developed this gown for a young girl need have no misgivings as to our opinion.

There are designers who are original and also spectacular. No one doubts their genius, but it does not always blossom out into things beautiful. They launch many things which are interesting, but are not followed, except at a considerable distance.

But the pretty gown of silk muslin shown here may be faithfully copied, and the result will revive our admiration for French refinement.

The silk undershirt is straight, with its scant lacing gathered in to an underbodice, of the same silk, at the waist line. The underbodice is cut with very short kimono sleeves and is full about the waist in the kimono fashion. Two flouncings of the figured silk muslin (for which lace may be substituted) are gathered to the underbodice. The upper flounce droops a few inches at the back.

From the waist a short pannier made of chiffon extends to the swell of the hip. This is supported by a

Shoes for Dressy Wear

IN the matter of footwear there is a demand for fine finish, elaboration in design, and general elegance of appearance. That is, spreading like news of war or the dancing craze. It keeps the designers and manufacturers of shoes on the anxious seat, ever alert to keep up with it. Milady of leisure and milady of busy days are asking for a few little things in this particular article of apparel. Her shoes must be—sharply, substantially, becoming, well-made, out-of-the-ordinary, exquisitely finished, elaborated with contrasting materials and ornaments, and, of all things, comfortable. For who could tango in an ill-fitting shoe?

Perhaps it is the craze for dancing that has brought about this fastidiousness; if so, there is one thing in its favor, at least.

No matter how plain the taste of any careful dresser, no matter how unrefractive (not to mention unnoticeable) her gown, just get a glimpse of her feet, and the chances are that you will wonder at the amount of style and beauty she has managed to accomplish in clothing them. Trim, sleek-lined, simple, elegant, and very likely, brilliant buckles of rhinestone or cut steel or plain metal are there.

These buckles come twinkling about the streets in the broad daylight, on the way to the five-o'clock tea, or the

FAILS TO SECURE RECOGNITION

Lady's Own Friends Assert Could Not Recognize Her When Brought Face to Face.

Arritis, Va.—Mrs. D. J. Bowen, of this town, makes the following statement: "For 20 years I suffered with womanly troubles, and although I tried different treatments, I did not get any relief."

I was unable to look after any of my work, and my friends thought I could not get well.

Finally, I began to take Cardui, the woman's tonic, and I had taken one bottle of the first bottle, before I could notice its good effects.

Now I can do all my work, feel like I'm not more than 16 years old, but am really 49. My own friends say I look so well, they don't recognize me when we meet in the road.

My daughter is using Cardui, and she says it is a fine medicine. I also have a number of lady friends taking it, since they found out how it helped me.

Whenever I feel a little fatigued after a day's extra hard work, I just take a dose of Cardui and am all right.

I can't say too much for Cardui. Thousands of women who suffer from womanly troubles, could be relieved and benefited, by following Mrs. Bowen's example.

Are you of this number? If so, try Cardui today. It cannot harm you, and is almost sure to do you good.

DEMAND IS FOR ABLE MAN

High Positions Waiting for Those Who Are Competent Properly to Fill Them.

We know a big firm in one of the oldest and most important industries in this country which has been hunting for over a year for a man to whom to pay $15,000, and they cannot find him; writes the editor of the American Machinist.

We know an executive who wants two or three men as assistants; if he could find them in his plant he would gladly pay them $40 a week. He has tried a considerable number in these positions during the past year, but without success as yet. He feels that he is positively hampered by the lack of them.

We know that there is an active demand for $2,000 men, and we can readily believe that there is a keen demand for $10,000 men.

It is remarkable that in a plant employing, say a thousand men, there are so few who raise themselves above their fellows far enough to be conspicuous to the management. And even of those few, not all have the initiative, the glimmer, and faculty of being thorough that would make them of value as assistants to the executive.

Environment.

The Mexican student was watching his first northern football game. It held his interest keenly. His face grew flushed, his arms were flung out, he shouted, hoarsely.

"Do you call this a game?" he asked of the man at his right.

"Sure," was the reply. "What would you call it?"

"In my country," said the stranger from across the border, "we would call it a seven-day pitched battle!"

There recently came to a fashionable shoe shop in Chicago a daughter of a man whose wealth has been acquired within very recent years. The young woman was disposed to patronize the clerk, and selected a number of "classy" slippers he produced for her approval. Finally she said:

Shakespeare and Bacon.

It has not been proven that Bacon wrote the plays known as Shakespeare's. The various attempts at such task have all turned out to be melancholy failures. It has been shown that there are many difficulties in the way of believing that the historical Shakespeare wrote the immortal drama, but it has not been shown that anybody else wrote them. The Stratford man is still in possession of the glory of their authorship, and if he is not entitled to the honor it is impossible to say who is.

DISFIGURED WITH PIMPLES

R. F. D. No. 2, Box 46, Matthews, Ga.—For three years or more I was troubled with pimples and blackheads. At first my face would itch and burn and then the pimples would break out. They looked almost as if I had measles, causing great disfigurement. They would make my face very red and sore. Then they feasted and came on a head and large boils would come on my chin and nose. It itched and burned so that I had to scratch it until it was irritated. The dandruff scaled off and showed plainly in my hair. It also caused my hair to break off and become very thin. I used several remedies which did not cure and gave but little relief. After I received a free sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment I began using them according to directions. I secured two cakes of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment, which cured me perfectly. (Signed) Miss Willie M. Walker, July 31, 1912.

MAN'S LUCKY FIND

Will Interest Readers of the Ledger

Those having the misfortune to suffer from backache, urinary disorders, gravel, dropsical swellings, rheumatic pains, or other kidney and bladder disorders will read with gratification this encouraging statement by a Murray man.

A. P. Overby, Murray, says: "I was troubled with disordered kidneys. I had dull pains in the small of my back and whenever I stooped or lifted, sharp twinges caused me much misery. At night the backache greatly disturbed my rest. I got up in the morning feeling tired and languid and nervous spells bothered me. Sediment in the kidney secretions proved that my kidneys needed attention. Learning of Doan's Kidney Pills, I began using them. I took but one-half a box to make a complete cure."

Price 50c. at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Overby had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props. Buffalo, N. Y.

Finds Buried Gold

Hickman, Ky., May 22.—To make a jump from poverty to a fortune is quite an unusual thing, but this happened to George Betts, a former Hickman man, born and reared here, who found a fortune a few days ago. Mr. Betts, who has resided in Mound City for years, purchased a lot there a short time ago and on last Saturday started digging post holes to fence the lot in, and in digging a post hole struck a hard object, which he found to be a pot sealed up, and upon opening it, found it to contain $40,000 in gold. The money was evidently buried before the war, the coins being very old ones, some of them being old gold Tennessee coins. Mr. Betts immediately took the gold down to a bank in Cairo for safe-keeping. Mr. Betts was so overjoyed that he telephoned his brother, John Betts, who was at work, to stop work—that he had found a fortune and they wouldn't have to work so hard now.

City Teachers Must Have Certificates

All teachers in city schools must have certificates from the State, county or the city, before they will be allowed to draw their pay from State funds hereafter said Assistant State Superintendent V. O. Gilbert. Inspector M. F. Pogue has been looking into the situation and he finds a large number of teachers, particularly in fourth class cities, who have no certificates. The State Department will keep a close check hereafter. The teachers may draw pay out of local school funds regardless of whether they have certificates; but these funds usually are confused with the State apportionment, and as the latter can be used for no purpose other than payment of teachers' salaries, it is the fund principally looked to for this purpose. One of the objects sought is to prevent the placing of incompetent teachers through favoritism or political influence on the payroll to the detriment of the school system. —Frankfort State Journal.

Barbed wire cuts, ragged wounds, collar and harness galls heal up quickly when BAL-LARD'S SNOW LINIMENT is applied. It is both healing and antiseptic. Price 25c, 50c and $1.00 per bottle. Sold by Dale & Stubblefield.

Great Crop to be Put Into Winter Crop Has Not Been Hurt.

Work, June 2.—The count-out to begin to turn one grain crops into cash. 60,000 bushels of wheat after crop of 1914 are secured in the fields and Oklahoma. In the state, harvesting is now completed, and by June 15 Kansas will begin implement trades. There are so many harvesters and the enormous penning in the south than a week earlier. South and west of there is no extension from the Hessian throughout Missouri, in parts of Iowa and east Mississippi, in Illinois and numerous localities to be adversely affected. The damage at present is not generally re-implementing the bumper winter wheat.

Oakland touring car of County Clerk Lee Mason, and besides Mr. Mason, was composed of Sam Carrico, of the firm of Adair & Farris, City Attorney Seth Boaz and C. G. Lemon, of the Messenger.

The ride was grand, smooth and a pleasure, the machine certainly being a bird. Not a stop was made between Murray and here.

Sam Carrico (or O'd Bow, as he says) was the chief entertainer and he does that stunt to perfection. He provided a delightful supper at the McDaniel House, where the party had the pleasure of the company of two former citizens of Mayfield, Mr. and Mrs. Daddy Trail, who are very popular there, and also the party had the pleasure of the charming acquaintance of meeting the "apple of Bow's eye" while there.

Hon. Clay Erwin, ex-county attorney, took the party in charge for a while and showed them the town, and, in fact, a good time. He seems to have a good law practice and many friends, although he is a Republican from head to toe.

The court house was visited and there is no doubt about it being one of the ideal beauty spots of West Kentucky. Throughout the interior and exterior it is a marvel of exceptional beauty, and when the court yard is covered with grass what a picturesque dream it will be.

Incidentally it might not be amiss to state that it is no surprise that such a beautiful and attractive young lady as Miss Grogan was re-elected as County School Superintendent.

Henry Theobald, was formerly in the shoemaking and repairing business in Mayfield, is happily located and enjoying a lucrative business. He is a good man, an expert workman and deserves a large patronage.

Frank Boyd, a former citizen of Graves county, is a rural route carrier out of Murray, has been writing a series of poetic effusions about "his horse," but declares that he will be silent on that line for some time.

As to the prince of entertainers and one who is known by everybody, more or less, is the original "Scraper" Carrico. In other words he is a peach from start to finish. If a fellow could be treated that nice all the time it is worth while to sorter encourage Sam to take one along with him.—Mayfield Messenger.

SALUTE THE FLAG.

FOR many years American citizenship has not been held in very high esteem by foreign nations. Mexico is not the only country that has committed outrages upon American citizenship, although it has been by far more flagrant in those offenses than any other country. The Stars and Stripes should at all times envelope the American citizen abroad with its protection, providing, of course, that no laws of this foreign nation are being violated. Too often in the past we have heard of cases of Americans mistreated in foreign countries, and too often there have been cases that we have never heard of. It is the duty of our State Department to see that instant reparation is made in these cases, and to see that adequate protection follows the American citizen at all times. His interests and the interests of the flag are identical and an insult to him is just as grave an offense as an insult to an American marine. Our State Department for many years has become so infatuated with diplomacy that they deal with it as a delicious morsel to be fingeringly partaken of and to be exhausted with a sigh. War is abhorant, but peace with dishonor is far more so and an American citizen, who, in private life, accepts peace with dishonor is considered a coward and is held in contemptuous scorn. Why should not the same result attach to the nation, and it undoubtedly does, besides, it only averts war, for this is finally forced on us by the contemptuous scorn in which we are held by the foreign people at large. Of course, the governments of larger foreign nations, such as England, France, Germany and Russia, are fully aware of the fighting strength and fighting ability of the United States, but their people are not possessed of this knowledge, nor have they the least idea that no people in the wide world are quicker to respond to the call of arms than the citizens of the United States. We are regarded by them as a money making, peace at any price people. They are too prone to forget the lessons that we have taught several times when our government was finally forced into war. The eloquent and fearless Patrick Henry, delivering his immortal address stood before his audience with bowed head and bent shoulders depicting the attitude of slavery, in low and trembling tones scarcely audible, he began that wonderful speech. The voice became firm and louder, his form straightened up as he cast off the shackles and in a splendid and fearless manner said, "Give me liberty or give me death." He hurled defiance at the then greatest nation on earth. We are today the same people as he addressed a hundred and fifty years ago. Let us protect the citizenship that these noble patriots gave us. The spirit that inspired the American soldier at Bunker Hill and Valley Forge is the same spirit that inspired the deeds of daring at Gettysburg, at San Juan and in the Philippines. It is with this selfsame spirit that our Government should and must say to the whole world, "Thou shalt honor our flag and our people."

Our National Pastime

The Cincinnati Baseball Club of the National League

By A. Bart. Horton

NEARLY a half century ago the Cincinnati Red Stockings won the first baseball championship. In those days there were no leagues, and but few ball clubs. They traveled throughout the East, met nearly every ball team in existence and came home without a single defeat. This record, of course, will never be equaled again. Since those days baseball has grown rapidly in public favor, and in Cincinnati alone there are several ball teams, and nearly a dozen organized leagues, and the fairly good ball clubs in the United States run up into the hundreds of thousands. Imagine crowding the population of a town of thirty thousand people into a space of about one thousand feet square, every one of them intensely interested, enthusiastically cheering some particularly good play, and one can gain a fair conception of what happens frequently at some of the big league parks. The attendance at the major leagues on opening day has been more than a quarter of a million.

We are indeed fortunate in our national pastime for baseball has every qualification necessary to make it the greatest outdoor sport. The youthful school-boy equips himself with a baseball outfit at a small outlay, organizes a club among his especial friends and hurls defiance at the rest of the school boy world, always, however, qualifying his challenge as to weight and age. Vacant lots are sought with avidity and more than often these bits of school boy paradise are retained by might of superior physical prowess. Neighboring windows are smashed, neighboring gardens are trampled down, but what matters these minor incidents, for the youthful Mathewson is started on his career. Rare in number indeed is the American boy, who would not prefer being a Walter Johnson than to be the president of the United States. Crowned heads, Rothschilds, Rockefellers, sink into puny insignificance when compared with McGraw or Connie Mack. As he grows into manhood this point of view undoubtedly changes considerably, but his enthusiasm and love for the sport remains. It is healthy, invigorating, clean and necessarily honest, excepting for the occasional straying from the paths of rectitude on the part of the umpire. An honest baseball umpire never existed, that is judging honesty from the view point of the player or spectator, who is displeased at his decision.

Long ago the wise heads that presided over the destinies of baseball foresaw the absolute necessity for maintaining the integrity of the game. Stringent rules against gambling were adopted, thus removing the temptation that might be thrown in the way of the ball player, and thus possibly cause the defeat of his club. Every possible safeguard has been added and new rules adopted so that the game of baseball today is as perfect as human ingenuity can make it. The press of the country has undoubtedly been the largest factor in the success and popularity of the game. Column after column is devoted to baseball news, that, if paid for at the ordinary advertising rates, would run up into the millions of dollars. The amount of capital invested in the big ball clubs of this country is tremendous, and that the returns are proportionately large is only just and right. In some instances, especially in the case of clubs who play in the world's championship series, where the receipts are probably as large as during the rest of the entire year, the profits are very great. The public, however, is too prone to over estimate the profits from baseball. It is impossible for the ordinary laymen to properly estimate the enormous expenses attached to the conducting of a big baseball club. The cost of maintaining and operating the grandstands and grounds alone is very great, but is small compared with the salary list and the traveling expenses of the players. In a number of the clubs this latter item exceeds one hundred thousand dollars yearly. In order to properly protect the financial interests that are willing to make this outlay to provide for the great national pastime, and to properly protect the players themselves, organized baseball became a necessity. A further step was the creation of the National Commission in whom was vested the authority to settle all disputes relating to the rights of the players and clubs. At their hands both players and clubs have invariably received justice. There has been much criticism as to the reserve clause in baseball contracts, but it is undoubtedly due to this very clause that great benefit has accrued to the players themselves. Were it not for some provision of this kind the clubs could not afford to buy and draft nearly as many players as they do, nor could they afford to carry them on their payrolls for several seasons, teaching them real baseball and developing them for future use. There have been a great many instances of ball players carried on the pay roll of the club and only playing one or two games a season. It is a surprising fact that but few ball players who come into the big leagues know but little of real baseball. It is also an undoubted fact that most of the habitual "fans" know more about real inside baseball than do a great majority of ball players who have never been in the big leagues, nor witnessed big league games. It is, therefore, only just and proper that the club which has spent much time and money in developing these players into a valuable asset should have the first claim to their services and an estimate of the amount of money paid when their services were of little value to the club should be taken into consideration in the salary they receive when they become of real value. The making of a great ball club and its consequential financial condition is due almost entirely to the playing management.

Redland Park, the Home of the Cincinnati Reds.

On the day this photograph was taken there were twenty-eight thousand people in attendance.

Two men preeminent as managers in baseball are John McGraw, of the New York Nationals, and Connie Mack, of the Philadelphia Americans, yet probably there are no two men in all baseball that are more unlike in personal characteristics. McGraw has won championship after championship, with a team whose individual ability was hardly above a second division team. Aggressive and domineering, ruling his men with an iron hand, he instills into them a frenzied enthusiasm to win. What McGraw cannot teach a man in baseball is not worth knowing, and he has infused into them that indomitable spirit of fighting to the last moment that has brought so many a pennant to New York.

Connie Mack is a man of lovable personality and great quiet force. His ability in the selection of young players is remarkable. He seems to possess an intuitive knowledge of their real ability and his judgment in selecting them has seldom erred. He has inspired his men with so much respect and affection for him that they play ball with a do or die spirit, more to gain his commendation than for anything else.

The lack of a proper manager has undoubtedly been the cause for the poor showing made by the Reds for so many years. Since the days when Comiskey left the club there has not been a manager with sufficient ability to make a winning team of the Reds. There have been managers who knew baseball in the highest degree, but who were sadly lacking in tact and diplomacy in handling their men. "Buck" Ewing succeeded Comiskey; a magnificent ball player but who had absolutely no control over his men and who left a heritage of lack of harmony, jealousy, and factional interests to those who succeeded him. Kelley, Griffith, O'Day and Tinker. Not one of these men had the ability to cure this defect, to weld the factional interests into a harmonious whole, and to infuse into them the winning spirit. The lack of managerial success has often been blamed upon the club ownership by reason of interference, but this is scarcely credible. For years this ownership has been vested in men of large affairs, whose business training has taught them that the real successful business policy is to give those in charge of their interests a free hand and hold them responsible for results. The present ownership of the Cincinnati club has never spared expense in endeavoring to give Cincinnati good baseball and a winning team. They realize fully that an expenditure of even a hundred thousand dollars for the purchase of high-class players would be a splendid financial investment if it would gain for them a winning team. They have given the Cincinnati public the finest grandstand in the country and one of the finest and largest parks. The grandstand was finished in May, 1912, and cost the Cincinnati ownership nearly a half million dollars. The grandstand proper seats about twelve thousand people, while the other stands and bleachers seat some ten thousand more, making a total seating capacity of about twenty two thousand. When this stand was dedicated in May, 1912, there were twenty-eight thousand people in attendance.

Notwithstanding the expensive failures that the playing managers of the past have been to the Cincinnati Ball Club the club management has never hesitated to make any financial sacrifice to secure a high-class manager. They weighed most carefully the qualifications of every available man for this position and finally decided on Charles L. Herzog. He is a ball player of high standing with several years training under McGraw, and a man of irreproachable private character. He is clean straight forward and unflinching, and already has infused into his men who have learned to admire him and respect him, a winning spirit. "Home Sweet Home"

A History of John Howard Payne's Ever-living Master-piece

By Rebecca R. Laughlin

IT IS indeed strange that the most precious popular inheritance the English-speaking world possesses—"Home, Sweet Home," was written by the "homeless bard of home."

On the evening of May 8, 1823, at the Theater Royal, Convent Garden, London, Miss Maria Tree, who was a sister of the famous actress, Ellen Tree, gave voice to "Home, Sweet Home" in the first performance of "Clari, the Maid of Milan". Both the song and the opera are the work of John Howard Payne. It was in this opera that one song was found that melted the heart of London, and the entire world. Besides, Payne's lyric won for the prima donna of this opera, Miss Tree, a wealthy husband, and enriched all who handled it, while the author was left little or no better off than he had been before.

John Howard Payne was born in New York

City, June 9, 1792, and was one of a large group of brothers and sisters. The Paynes are of old American stock. John Howard Payne's direct ancestors were among the earliest settlers at Eastham, Mass. The name can be traced as far back as 1622, when Robert Treat Payne, among others, signed the Declaration of Independence. In spite of the slight difference in the spelling of the name Robert Treat Paine belonged to the same family. William Payne, the poet's father, was a tutor in several wealthy Boston families. He married twice. His first wife, who died soon after marriage, was a Miss Lucy Taylor, whom he met at Barnstable. Then he married Sarah Isaacs, whose father was a convert from the Jewish faith and who resided in Easthampton, New York. John Howard was born of this second marriage and while he was a little fellow, his parents moved to Easthampton, the most easterly town in Long Island, situated upon its jutting southern fork. It was a romantic place, settled by fine New England families, who lived in amicable relations with the red men who still linger about this ancient home of the Montauk tribe. Here the author's father was made principal of Clinton Academy, then a flourishing school, one of the earliest upon the island. The greater part of Payne's childhood was spent in this picturesque Long Island town, which made an indelible imprint upon his memory. The house in which the Paynes lived and which the poet immortalized in "Home, Sweet Home" is still kept intact by the inhabitants of the quaint old place. The Payne family held a high position, and their children had the advantage of cultured society among their friends as well as at home. The family moved to Boston, where the father became an eminent teacher. John Howard ex-

Kentuckians of Today

He, of the Clan of McGregor

IN Kentucky, politics is a serious occupation. It is not a mere distraction. In fact the three in-born qualities of a native Kentuckian are chivalry, oratory and politics. In the fall of 1911 there was a hotly contested campaign on for state officers, and it happened that on a number of occasions the nominees of the two predominant parties met in the same town and counties to fill speaking engagements. The two candidates for attorney general were men that resembled each other very much, and they wore the same type of clothes and hats. On one of these occasions in the eastern section of Kentucky a strapping, big individual, in typical farmer mountaineer attire approached one of these candidates for attorney general, and said: "My name is Williams; I'm from Boyd County. I'm usually on the other side of the fence, and a great many of the boys up our way are for McGregor, but I am going to jump in and see if I can't help you out."

"So you don't like McGregor?" queried the candidate. "What's the matter, personal or political?"

"It ain't politics, as I got a sort of a bending his way myself. It's special reasons. You see when he was in the attorney general's office I had some folks down in Central Kentucky that got in trouble with the state and he beat them."

"Maybe it was because he was a better lawyer than the one you had," said the candidate.

"Maybe so. They tell me he's a cracking good lawyer, but I'm agin him."

At this point a mutual friend of the two stepped up and said, "Tom, I am glad to see you and Williams are evidently getting matters straightened out. I have heard that Williams was against you."

"No," said Williams. "I ain't against Mr. Garrett, I am for him."

The candidate turned to his friend and said, "Tim, Mr. Williams evidently thinks he is talking to Mr. Garrett, so I want you to introduce us, and I am going to try to show him that if he could make a mistake in this way perhaps he is also mistaken about that case."

And Williams went back to Boyd County swearing allegiance to McGregor.

The Blue Grass state has the faculty of turning out big men at an early age. Most of her able men have arrived at bigness, both mentally and physically early in life. Tom McGregor is no exception to this general rule. He has been in politics ever since he could spell the word, and he was an orator before that. He has never held public office for the simple reason that he is a Republican, and unfortunately the few times that he has been a candidate was not on those rare occasions when his party was successful in Kentucky. He was born near Benton, Marshall County, September 14, 1881, and a consideration of this date will convince one that he has arrived at his present state of usefulness and high trust at an unusually early age. He bears his ancestral derivation self-evident in his name and he is indeed descended from the celebrated Highland "Clan MacGregor," which figures so prominently in Scottish history and romance. Rob Roy MacGregor, being well known through the writings of Sir Walter Scott.

Thomas Burnett McGregor.

His great-grandfather's great-grandfather was Duncan MacGregor, a son of Rob Roy. His great-grandfather's grandfather, a son of Duncan, was named John, and participated with other members of the Clan MacGregor in the battle of Preston, fighting under the banner of Bonnie Prince Charlie. There is still living a great-uncle of our subject—Preston MacGregor, who was named in honor of this battle by John MacGregor, who was Preston's great-grandfather. Duncan MacGregor was tried and acquitted for taking part in a raid made by the MacGregors in stealing away Jean Krey. Because of their participation in the rebellion of 1745 and the carrying off of Jean Krey the immediate family fled from Scotland to the Carolinas. The MacGregors were proscribed and hunted like foxes on many occasions in Scotland, although their proud motto was "My race is loyal." Tom MacGregor may well take pride in the fact that he is descended direct from these intrepid Highlanders.

William N. MacGregor, his father, a hardware merchant of Benton, was also born in Marshall County. The grandfather was William Casey MacGregor and the great-grandfather likewise rejoined in the name of William, which appears to have been a favorite in the family. It was the last named William who founded the family in the land of the Stars and Stripes. His forebears were Scotch Covenanters and since his day the spelling of the name has been changed from MacGregor to McGregor. The mother of Thomas B. McGregor bore the maiden name of Mary J. Reeves. She was born in Graves county, Kentucky, the daughter of Alp Reeves, a brave Confederate soldier who was killed in a battle of the Civil War.

The canny McGregor whose name initiates this sketch was reared in Marshall County and within its pleasant limits obtained that education which has since served him in such good stead. After finishing in the common schools he entered the Marshall County Seminary at Benton and when seventeen years old he obtained license to teach and for several years served in the capacity of common school pedagogue. In 1901 he graduated from the law department of the Cumberland University at Lebanon, Tennessee, and in the same year was admitted to the bar at Eddyville, Kentucky. Not long thereafter he entered into a law partnership, the firm being known as Oliver, Oliver & McGregor, and the above mentioned young attorneys enjoyed a large and lucrative practice at Paducah and Benton where offices were maintained. In this firm Mr. McGregor remained until he was appointed in January of 1908 assistant attorney general of Kentucky.

In politics Mr. McGregor is a militant Republican. He began his political career at the age of sixteen, when chosen secretary of the Marshall County Republican Committee. From early manhood he has been recognized as one of the strongest Republican campaign speakers of Kentucky.

In 1905 he was his party's nominee for county attorney of Marshall County and in 1907 made the race on the Republican ticket for representative in the legislature from the Sixth district, reducing a Democratic majority of more than twelve hundred to sixty-two votes. He was appointed assistant attorney general by Attorney General James Breathitt in 1908, and in this official capacity, conducted in a little over two years, two hundred and forty-five cases for the state before the court of appeals, with gratifying result. He became nominee of the Republican party for Attorney General at its state convention in Louisville in July, 1911. Being an advocate of good roads, better schools and better conditions for the farmers, from which class he sprang, Mr. McGregor, as assistant attorney, had charge of the department of schools and agriculture.

EDITOR'S NOTE This is the seventh of a series of articles on The Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station and its Work

The Rearing of Jacks and Mules

By J. J. Hooper,

Kentucky Experiment Station, Head of Animal Husbandry—Horses, Dairy Cattle and Poultry

THE Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station has issued bulletin 176 by J. J. Hooper and W. S. Anderson which deals with the breeding, care and management of jacks and jennets. There is very little information obtainable in regard to these animals. Jacks have been imported to Kentucky in considerable numbers and they have been brought to a state of perfection in this commonwealth to which they have never before attained, and yet the average Kentuckian knows very little about jack stock. The remote ancestors of the jack may be traced to the wilds of Asia and Africa. The wild animals were brought to a high state of perfection in Spain and the islands near Spain which are located in the Mediterranean Sea. These Spanish jacks vary in color from gray to black and in height from 14 to 15 hands. There are six distinct breeds which have been imported to America. In the hands of American breeders they have been fused into a new breed.

A FINE JACK COLT.

This represents the highest art of jack breeding. This colt was the outstanding individual in a class of ten colts of the same age at the Blue Grass Fair in 1913. His ears are large. He has a straight back, a deep flank, well set legs and large bones.

Imported Mammoth was used exclusively as a jennet jack and so great was the demand for his services that his owners placed his service at $100. At that time this was an unheard of price, and even today the usual charge is $25. This serves to prove the value of the old jack as a breeder.

In Bourbon County close to that section of Montgomery in which this famous Mammoth jack lived, there were brought two noted jacks, Alvarado and Moro Castle. The latter is said to have cost $5,000. From Alvarado sprang the Yelvertons and from both came many offspring which aided the Mammoth blood to go on producing better individuals during each succeeding year. Lee's Napoleon by Imp. Napoleon was also a valuable jack in the early history of jack stock in this state.

From these few jacks has sprung the great jack stock industry which has made Kentucky, Missouri, Tennessee and to a lesser extent, Indiana and Illinois famous as mule producing states.

The tendency to coarseness which the imported jacks of early days possessed, has in the hands of American breeders, been greatly refined. An army of intelligent live stock breeders deserve credit for having expended great energy and intelligence in the perfection of the jack stock. Many men of wealth and fame have devoted much of their energy and genius to the improvement of the jack stock of the blue grass state. Today these animals are as large as ever and possess much greater smoothness and finish than jacks from any other section of the United States or from Spain. It is widely known that the best jack stock in the world is to be found in Kentucky and states adjoining.

A good jack should possess large pointed ears, which should measure about 33 inches from tip to tip. The preferred color is black, with white points. Standard height should be 15 to 16 hands and weight from 1,050 to 1,150 pounds. The girth measurement of a real good jack should be 70 inches and the measurement around the hind flank about the same. The cannon bone below the knee should measure approximately 9 inches. The hock should measure about 10 inches in circumference.

In purchasing a jack one should be careful to learn the pedigree of the animal before closing the deal. Any animal possesses and passes on the characteristics of his race. If inferior animals are included in his pedigree some of their inferior characteristics will appear in the offspring. No cross-bred animal can breed according to his personality. He can show in the conformation of his body only a few of the characteristics which he carries in his blood and can transmit. It would be better to use an animal of only fair individuality who comes from a good family than to use a superior jack from a common family.

Remarks in Regard to Rearing of Jacks.

The appetite of the jack must be studied, and he must be supplied the best of feed. Most Kentucky jack breeders use clover and alfalfa hay and shael oats. Occasional use is made of timothy hay, but it is considered rather coarse and woody. During August and September many stockmen use green corn which is often run through a cutting box before being fed to the jack. Green sorghum is also fed in this manner. Bran and oats are standard feeds and corn is often used, but it is considered that too much corn is heating and causes jack sores. The jack should be allowed a paddock in which he may secure considerable exercise and also some grazing. His stall should open into a paddock and he should be allowed to run in and out at will in winter and summer. Green rye, wheat or clover pasture is useful for young jacks.

This two-year-old Jack is of extra high class. His greatest defects are that his eyes are a trifle small, and he is somewhat depressed in his back line from withers to rump. However, his ears are large, and he has lots of bone in the head and jaw, and he is heavily muscled in the neck, has a deep body, large knees and hocks and stands well on his legs. His sire is a large jack, and he is out of the splendid jennet shown in Fig. 2. This jack sold for $1,500.00 to go to Mexico.

MULE MARE.

This saddle-bred mare is eight years old. She stands 15 hands, 1 1/2 inches high, and the bay mule colt is 41 inches high. The mare has been used for driving purposes, and she weighs 1,050 pounds. Both the mare and the colt are light in bone. While the colt has good head and ears, yet he has an objectionable Roman nose and because of a tendency to crooked hocks, a drooping rump, a straight shoulder and light bone, the colt is considered as being rather second class.

A young jack should be fed two ears of corn, one quart of bran, two quarts of oats and he should be allowed to run in a one-acre pasture during the day. At night he should be supplied five pounds of clover hay.

For yearlings use four ears of corn, two and one-half quarts of oats, two and one-half quarts of bran and seven pounds of clover hay.

For two-year-olds, one gallon of oats, two quarts of bran, and seven to ten pounds of clover hay. If the jack is poor add four ears of corn per day.

Aged jacks will eat about the same as two-year-olds. Have the feed trough as high as the body as feeding from the ground causes low carriage and ewe necks.

During the winter the jack, as pictured in the next column is fed one bundle of cut-up sheaf oats at 5 p. m., one-half gallon of clean shelled oats twice a day every other day, one quart of bran or ground barley is mixed with one of his feeds. This jack also has a two-acre pasture to run in at will.

Jack Sores.

Jack sores are caused by a bad condition of the blood and heavy feeding of corn. Green grass cools the system and prevents sores to a certain extent. An excellent remedy is to dust the sores with a mixture of one-half slacked lime part, and one-half part flour. For bad raw sores the stockmen should mix verdigris and sweet milk together to form a paste which he should apply to the sore with a wooden paddle twice a day. This will dry up the worst sores.

A PICTURE OF FOUR JACKS.

These four jacks were purchased by a Mexican stockman. Numbering from the right, the first and third jacks cost $1,500 each; the one on the extreme left cost $1,400, and the little jack standing in position number two is of medium size, and cost $750. It was only after considerable intelligent searching that three jacks of this quality were secured.

Rearing of Jacks.

A jack colt should be allowed to run in a pasture with a horse colt or filly, the former being preferred because the young jacks are so rough in their play. If a young jack associates only with young jacks or jennets during early life, he will not ordinarily serve mares later on.

The jennet colts are allowed to run with their dams in pasture from spring to fall. In October the foals are brought to the barn and weaned. Then they are fed cut sheaf oats and sorghum and one ear of corn a day. In the spring they are placed on pasture and are fed nothing else unless the grass becomes very short. In the winter they are again taken to the barn and provided roughage with a small amount of grain during the winter. When three years old they are bred. Aged jennets are maintained on pasture in winter and summer, but during cold weather they are supplied corn stover and occasionally some hay.

This jack has won many championship ribbons in Kentucky. He was sold to his present owner for $1,800.00. He is of splendid size and has a commanding appearance, and is a sire of large mules. However, he is slightly calf-kneed and crooked in the hocks.

The work animals of the southern farm is the mule. The number of mules in Kentucky was established by the statisticians of the United States Government on January 1, 1913, at 229,000, with a value of $120 per head or total value of $27,480,000. The farmers in the agricultural states of the south raise very few mules and they are, therefore, dependent on Kentucky and adjacent states to supply their work stock.

Brood Mares for Producing Mules.

Every one agrees that the small mare is unfit for mule breeding. There are many cold-blooded, light-bodied, frail and unsound mares which are not deemed of sufficient merit to breed to stallions and so they are used to produce mules. A first-class jack will beget only second-class mules from such inferior dams. There is little demand for inferior mule colts, while there is an unlimited market for those of size and quality. The best mules are produced by mares possessing sufficient draft blood to give them weight and sufficient fine horse blood to give them finish. The colts from pure bred draft mares are apt to be coarse and sluggish. The mules from pure bred mares of the light horse type sometimes lack scale. The Kentucky farmer is beginning to use 1,200 to 1,400 pound mares in his farm work. He finds that these mares more than pay for their keep in the work that they are able to do, and besides they furnish a $100 mule colt.

A MEDIUM JACK.

This four-year-old jack is fifteen hands high. He has rather a small jaw and is small in the bone below the knee. Also the muscling in the arm should be much larger. His body is well proportioned. He has a deep flank and his legs are straight and well set. Estimated weight 850 pounds. Especially commendable is his strong back. This animal sold for $750.

Our work among the farmers of Kentucky leads us to make the statement that it costs about $169 to raise a mule to the age of a three-year-old. It is poor economy to be stingy with a mule colt in regard to feed. Size is one of the most valuable attributes possessed by this type of work stock, and if they are stunted while young they will never attain to a useful size.

Types of Mules.

The most valuable mules belong to the draft class. Such mules stand 16 to 16 1/2 hands high; are heavily muscled throughout and weigh over 1,300 pounds. The plantation mules weigh from 1,000 to 1,500 pounds and are 15 to 16 hands high. The sugar mules possess considerable quality. The smallest class of market mules is that known as mining mules. In as much as some mines can only accommodate an animal of about 13 hands, a lack of size constitutes a virtue and these mules are usually cheap and plentiful.

—MULE MARES.

These two mares and their colts present a striking lesson. The mare on the right is a thoroughbred, and she stands 15 hands, 3 inches high, and the colt was 41 inches high at birth. Because of the length of barrel and the length of quarters and general capacity, this mare is considered an excellent mule mare. The topiest mules that are nervous and active and weigh from 900 to 1,000 pounds, are bred from thoroughbred mares, of which both the colt and mother are typical animals. The mare is slightly light and calf-kneed. The Southern farmer desires a mule that is active and energetic, and we have an illustration of such a mule in this picture. The mare to the left is of an opposite type. She is light boned, is short in the barrel, is leggy and has short quarters. The male stands 16 hands, 2 inches, but the colt was only 40 inches high at birth. This is an inferior mule mare.

Th Raise More Swine In Kentucky and Protect Them With Anti-Hog Cholera Serum

By J. J. Hooper,

College of Agriculture, State University, Lexington, Ky.

ONE of the controlling factors in swine production in every state in the last few years has been the dreaded scourge of hog cholera. In Iowa last year the loss was estimated at between $30,000 and $40,000, and the state and national authorities are making a strenuous fight to prevent the spread of this disease, for, no doubt, the loss from hog cholera is one of the controlling factors in the high cost of living. Kentucky has been more fortunate and the loss this year will, in all probability, be less than last year. This does not mean that Kentucky has not suffered a preventable loss through the ravages of this disease. The outbreaks this fall have been mostly confined to the mountain counties in Kentucky, but the infection is well scattered in every county of the state. In the mountain territory it has been very hard to control, as a comparatively small quantity of protective serum was used, and practically no precautions regarding the destruction of carcasses were observed.

The value of serum as a preventive of hog cholera is generally known throughout the state as evidenced by the demand for serum by the farmers and for immune sires and dams in different herds. In Kentucky during the year 1911 approximately 6,000 hogs were vaccinated; in 1912 17,000, and during the first eleven months of 1913 35,000 hogs were inoculated, with a saving of 91 to 92 per cent. of the animals treated.

The county agents have brought the problem of hog cholera eradication to the attention of the farmer in many instances and through the initiative of these men great service has been rendered the farmers in the saving of many herds. Heretofore when a farmer had an outbreak of hog cholera, he was forced to discontinue feeding or raising hogs for six months to a year. At present this is not necessary as he can restock immediately and protect his hogs from cholera by the use of serum. This is being done successfully every day by the farmer. The county agent has served as a medium through which the farmer gets in close and immediate touch with the Experiment Station.

The Serum Laboratory at the Experiment Station is providing for more immune hogs in Kentucky by producing approximately each week 250,000 cubic centimeters of anti-hog cholera serum for the protection of Kentucky's swine industry; an amount of serum sufficient to vaccinate 5,000 pigs weighing 125 pounds each. Serum is sold to the farmers of this state at approximately the cost of production, which is one cent per cubic centimeter. Every farmer should favor more efficient laws controlling the spread of this disease, and the hearty co-operation of all interested is essential in the enforcement of the law already existing as quoted herewith:

1. That in all cases where pig, shoat, or hog shall die of the disease commonly called "Hog Cholera" or any other disease, it shall be the duty of the owner or owners of such pig, shoat or hog, or the person or persons having the care and custody of same, having knowledge of the fact or upon receiving notice thereof, to cause the carcass of same to be burned within twelve hours or securely buried two and one-half feet deep.

2. Any person or persons failing and refusing to comply with the above provisions shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be fined a sum of not less than ten nor more than fifty dollars.

Approved by the Governor, March 14th, 1912.

The burying of hogs that have died of cholera is a dangerous practice and should be discouraged. Virulent outbreaks of hog cholera have developed from carcasses that have been buried for several years, therefore, the man who buries cholera hogs on his farm is in constant danger of hog cholera. Burning is greatly to be preferred.

There is no reason why hog cholera can not be eradicated from this state in a reasonable length of time if proper precautions are observed by the men interested in swine production. We should not be satisfied to vaccinate and save individual herds here and there and allow the infection to live, thrive and scatter on adjacent farms. Our aim should be the ultimate eradication of this deadly virus from every farm in the state. The Experiment Station is fully equipped to do valuable work along this line, and is offering assistance and advice to all farmers of the state.

HEALTHY HOGS ARE A PAYING PROPOSITION.

Method of Vaccinating Hogs.

There are three methods of vaccinating hogs, namely: (a) The Serum Alone Method, (b) the Serum Simultaneous Method, (c) The Combination Method.

Serum Alone Method.

As the name suggests, this method consists in injecting serum alone into the animal. Hog cholera can not possibly be introduced or transmitted by serum alone. This method immunizes hogs from a few weeks to two months and is best for suspicious or infected herds.

Serum Simultaneous Method.

This method consists in injecting the same amount of serum as recommended in the Serum Alone Method, but in addition a small amount of hog cholera virus, (blood of a hog suffering from cholera), is injected, before the hog is released, in the opposite thigh or opposite side of the neck from which the serum was injected. Severe transitory effects may follow the use of this method and occasionally a very susceptible pig develops the disease from the inoculation and dies. The average loss is about one or two per cent. Hogs vaccinated by this method are immune to the disease of cholera from six months to life, usually for life. Hogs to be treated by this method must be in the pink condition or irregular results will follow.

The Combination Method.

The combination method consists in first using serum alone, followed by the injection of serum and virus in ten or twelve days. This method has the advantage of preparing the animal for the serum-simultaneous treatment. It should be used especially in valuable herds where the loss of one or two animals would more than pay the entire cost of the vaccination. This method will not take the place of proper sanitary precautions or correct any other ailment of swine, but merely insures greater protection subsequent to the inoculation.

Specific information on this subject will be gladly furnished on request. Write for bulletin. All communications relative to hog cholera eradication should be addressed to Dr. Robert Graham, in Charge, Serum Laboratory, Experiment Station, Lexington, Ky.

Jim Treadway's Price

A Political Story of Today

By A. Bart Horton

THE I. X. L. Railroad maintained its usual lobby that winter at the Legislature. Tom Gordon, good fellow and prince of lobbyists was in charge, and it was, no doubt, due to his influence that any pending legislation adverse to the railroad interests had failed of passage for the past four or five years. It was also undoubtedly due to the same influence that a number of measures favored by the railroads had passed. The I. X. L. Railroad had become the clearing house for the other railroads where their interests were identical. A two-cent-a-mile rate bill had been introduced early in that session and had been in the hands of the committee for several weeks. It had just been reported to the House favorably.

At the headquarters of the I. X. L. lobby at the Nevill House, which was ostensibly Tom Gordon's suite of rooms, there was an atmosphere of exceeding jubilation. This particular suite of rooms had been selected with the utmost care, and possessed features peculiarly advantageous for his particular purpose. There were four rooms to the suite, which was on the second floor, and the first room was a corner room with two entrances. This room and the adjoining room were reception rooms. The third room was Tom Gordon's private bedroom, and the last room was his sanctum, to which only the extreme elect were ever admitted. As this room had a private staircase entrance but few people knew that it belonged to that suite.

The newly elected Vice-President and General Manager of the I. X. L. Railroad and Tom Gordon were in consultation in this room. The General Manager was regarded in the railroad world as the coming man. He had been secured from one of the big western railroads and although comparatively young in years, undoubtedly possessed extraordinary executive ability.

"I am expecting George Wells, one of the political bosses and big men in the state, in a few moments," said Tom Gordon. "He has worked hand in hand with us for some time."

Just then there was a tap at the door leading to the private entrance, and Tom Gordon went over and opened it, and George Wells entered the room.

Large of frame, with power and determination written in every line of his features, George Wells had become a leader of his party in state politics. His face was flushed with anger, as he strode into the room, nodding curtly to Gordon as he caught sight of the stranger seated at the table.

"Mr. Wells," said Tom, "permit me the pleasure of introducing to you Mr. White, our new General Manager. I have been outlining some of the work we have to do this winter in the Legislature in order to protect our interests."

George Wells shook hands with the General Manager, then turning to Gordon said, "Yes, and it is because of some of that very work that I am here tonight to talk with you," as he spoke, his face grew redder, and his tones displayed intense anger. "Damn it, man! Didn't I tell you that I had reasons of my own for not attempting to reach Jim Treadway in any manner at all?"

Tom Gordon's face reddened at the tones used to him, but there was exultation in his voice when he said, "Have we got him? I was not certain as I have not heard from Meyers yet."

"Got him? Yes, you have got him," replied Wells. "You have not only got him, but you have broken the heart of one of the squarest men I ever knew; the man I had in mind for Governor. In fact, the only man that we could have won with next fall." Turning to Mr. White, he said, "They talk about politicians being grafters and being crooked. Why, the most crooked politician that ever lived is a piker compared with your big men in railroads. I have been in politics a great many years, and have been successful mainly, I believe, because I have been a man of my word and have tried to be square. In all that time I have never yet bought a man. Men have done my bidding because of some favor they expected or because of some favor that I had done for them. I have sold my influence, but this influence has been my stock in trade; just as the merchant has a stock in trade. I have never yet, however, sold that influence where I thought that it would really cause distress to any single individual or to the public. There are times when the public demanded or thought they demanded certain measures that might prove beneficial to them. As a practical man, I have always weighed the question, and have found out in most cases that those benefits did not actually exist. It has been my experience that a practical politician, well versed in municipal and public affairs, who is comparatively honest, can give the people a far better administration than the average business man. Why, who would make the politician dishonest, if it were not for the temptations thrown in his path by the business man or corporation who desires some special measure and who, to save time and trouble, goes to the political leader to gain his end."

"This is quite a dissertation on politics, Mr. White, but I am good and sore. Jim Treadway has been one of the few men that I have admired and respected, and he has ability sufficient to make him one of the big men in our country, and yet a dirty crook, the tool of you, Gordon, gets him. I just left Jim Treadway's room, over at the Northern Hotel. He called me by phone and told me that he wanted to see me. When I went into the room I scarcely knew him. His face plainly showed that he had passed through an ordeal of the most severe manner. When he shook hands with me I was shocked. That firm, manly Jim Treadway grig, so well known, which always makes it a pleasure to shake hands with him, was gone. He threw his hand over my shoulder and said in tones that trembled with agitation: 'They have reached me at last, George.'"

"What are you talking about, Jim? What's the matter with you?"

"The I. X. L. people have gotten me. You know I have fought for this two-cent bill both in committee and in every other way, despite their overtures and their threats. They could not reach me personally, but the dirty crooks went after my boy. I sent for you to tell you this much, George, but I am too upset to talk any more about it. Go over and ask Tom Gordon the story, he will tell it to you."

"I saw that it was best to leave him alone, and I am over here now to hear the details."

The General Manager, who had been a silent auditor to these remarks, said, "Mr. Wells, ever since I left college I have been a railroad man and have had little to do with politics. We Western railroad men have had about all that we could attend to in building up and managing our roads, without paying much attention to the political end of it. We have had our legislative fights, but that end of it was usually looked after by our Eastern capitalists. I went to college with your Jim Treadway, in fact he was one of my chums there, and he had the reputation of being one of the squarest men in college. I knew him to be the soul of honor. I have not heard directly from him or seen him for years. I knew that he was in your Legislature here. What's the story of this deal, Gordon?"

Gordon answered: "Meyers is probably outside. I'll send for him, and he can tell you all. Of course, you know, Mr. White, that we sometimes have a pretty rocky road to travel, men come here opposed to railroads and corporations, without any good reason for it, excepting a stubborn prejudice, and it has been up to us to overcome this prejudice. Sometimes we are able to do it through argument, more often through financial consideration, once in a while we are compelled to adopt other means."

White nodded. "I understand. Get Meyers." Gordon went out and returned with a short, heavy-set man, whose frank and open countenance was somewhat marred by eyes that were small and fox-like. "Meyers this is Mr. White, the new General Manager of our road. Mr. Wells you know Mr. Meyers is one of my assistants. Joe, I want to tell these gentlemen the complete history of this Treadway deal."

"All right, Mr. Gordon, you will remember that after you had failed to reach Treadway here you told me to go over to his home town, and see if I could dig up anything of his past, or find any other possible way of getting him. He owns a nice farm and is a lawyer of exceptional ability, as you all know. He was a man of exceptional honesty, well fitted to take a high place at the bar, but he has devoted his talents towards aiding his friends and neighbors and consequently has not gotten very rich at it. He is married and has two children, a girl and boy. The boy's education was finished at an agricultural college, with the idea of putting him in charge of the farm. Treadway's idea, however, was to give him a couple of years in commercial work, so that he would be a fairly well equipped business man when he went on the farm, and could apply business methods to farm life. Before Treadway's nomination to the Legislature the boy secured a position at our station at home, with the idea of acquiring some knowledge of shipping and of railroad work. I found him to be a bright and manly fellow who had been kept at home pretty closely. I was there ostensibly as a man of means and I sent for a man named Johnson in our employ, who was about thirty-five years old and who had a reputation for being adept at cards. I instructed Johnson to make the acquaintance of young Treadway and to show him a good time generally, that he was not to know me, and he was to manage an introduction as strangers, that if possible he was to arrange to get young Treadway to playing cards. My scheme worked out in great shape. Young Treadway refused Johnson's proposition for a game of cards once or twice, but finally one evening when he was not quite sober he fell for it, and we had several games with one or two other men in the town participating and young Treadway won. A little more than a week ago I saw to it that the cashier of the I. X. L. Railroad there was promoted to another station and young Treadway was given the job. You can imagine the rest of the story, gentlemen. On last Saturday night we played and young Treadway lost over a hundred dollars, and I was one of the principal winners. He asked me to wait until Monday and stated that he had some money in the building association, which he would try to draw out then, or that Tuesday was his monthly pay day, when he could pay it from his wages. I told him that I must have my money as I was leaving town Sunday morning and intimated that if he did not have the money to lose that he did not have any business playing cards and that it would not be a good thing for the company to know that he had been playing. My talk was of such a nature that it had the effect I desired and he met me, just before train time the next morning at the station and gave me the money. Early Monday morning our auditor came in unexpectedly, of course, to him, but not to me, checked up his accounts and found him short just the amount he had paid me. The auditor who had had his instructions, at first threatened the boy with arrest, although he told him that he had more than enough in the building association, of his own to cover up the amount. The matter was finally settled by the boy agreeing to come to the State Capitol with the auditor and explain the matter to his father. When they reached here they went direct to Jim Treadway's room and the story was told him. Treadway offered to make good at once, but, of course, that wasn't what we were after, and the final result was that the auditor agreed not to prosecute the boy if Jim Treadway would vote against the bill, that he said was his only alternative. It seems, however, that the boy told his father the whole story in full and my name was mentioned. When the boy described me to Treadway he saw through the whole thing at once. At any rate he has promised to vote against the bill." And Meyer beamed on his audience, for he felt that he had landed a big thing for his road.

Wells looked at him for a moment and then said: "Meyers, you are a contemptible cur, in all my dealings in politics I have never condescended to such a trick as that, but I want to tell both you and Gordon that if in the future the I. X. L. Railroad wants to have any dealings with me they will have to cut both of you out. You have my promise in this particular matter, and I have always prided myself that my word was as good as my bond. I have been with you principally for the reason that I didn't believe this two cent bill was doing justice to the roads at this time. There is one thing that I shall absolutely demand of you. Mr. White, that is that you furnish me with a receipt of the amount of the money this boy took, which I shall pay you myself, and with a statement from your road that his accounts are in good shape. This I am going to take to Jim Treadway. I don't believe that it will change his agreement to vote against the bill, but I am going to give him the opportunity."

The General Manager answered Mr. Wells. "I am more than glad to meet a man of your caliber. You can rest assured that under no circumstances will I countenance such actions as this. You will understand Mr. Gordon, that as long as I am manager of this road that at the first inkling that I get of any such contemptible work as this going on in the future that we will not wait for your resignation. You can go over to Jim Treadway's room tonight and tell him what I have said."

George Wells had aptly described Jim Treadway's condition. He was almost broken-hearted over his son's conduct and the shame that had been brought upon him. He did not blame the boy so much, for in his mind he had pictured the whole devilish scheme and knew how easily a young fellow just entering manhood, even of the best principles can be influenced by the wiles of such men as Meyers and his kind. His mind was fully made up, he would vote as he had agreed to do and immediately resign from the Legislature. His son exhausted from the severe ordeal through which he had just been passing, had gone to bed, and Jim Treadway was sitting alone bowed in grief when someone knocked at the door. He went to the door and opening it saw Harry Wilson, a fellow member of the Legislature.

"Hello, Jim," said Wilson. "I have just had something told me in absolute confidence. I want to talk to you about it."

"All right, Harry," said Jim. "My boy is in here asleep, so we will walk up to the end of the hall."

"Wilson noticed Treadway's condition and said: 'Good God man, what's the matter with you, you look as though you were seriously ill?'"

"I am," said Jim. "Ill in mind and body." And as they reached the end of the hall he said: "What is it you want to tell me?"

"I have just heard, Jim, that you were to vote against the railroad bill."

"It is true, Harry, but I can't see their object in telling it to anybody now. They have got me and that is the reason you found me looking and feeling as I do." And Jim proceeded to tell Harry the history of the affair.

"Fine lot of crooks we Legislators have to deal with," said Wilson when he had finished. "I have had a confession to make to you for sometime, Jim. You and I have been the closest of friends, and have almost always been together when it came to voting. They got me about three weeks ago. Matters have been going against me financially of late, and I have hardly known which way to turn, after fighting the thing off for several days, I sold out to them for three thousand dollars, one thousand in cash and the other thousand after the vote was delivered. After I had agreed and accepted the money it worried me so that I would not use it as badly as I needed it, and I practically have determined to return it to them. You can bet that after what you told me that they will get it all back."

"Send it back by all means, Harry. I will be more than glad to help you financially, for I can realize what that sort of thing means now. I must say good night to you, old fellow, as I am all in." And they walked back down the hall.

While they were saying good night, George Wells walked up to them and greeting them said: "I want to talk to you just a minute, Jim."

"All right, George, come in."

Wells then told Jim of White's offer.

"That's mighty good of him," said Jim. "But I propose to stick to my word, and you can depend upon it that they will be sorry when I get through for what I have done."

"But, Jim, I want to run you for Governor next fall, and I want this thing kept quiet," replied Wells.

"Not for mine, George, I am absolutely through with state politics. I will try to do some good at home and give my boy a little more of my attention in the future."

No measure before the Legislature that winter had created such intense, State-wide interest, as the two-cent bill. In the house the bill had been passed by the narrow margin of one vote. Harry Wilson, advised by Jim Treadway, had returned the money paid him by the railroad company, and had voted for the bill. This had been an unexpected blow to the railroad people, who had strained every nerve to defeat the measure, and, upon actual count, had figured upon Harry Wilson's vote. The interview between him and Gordon had been full of excitement. He had waited until the night before the day upon which the final vote was taken before he had his interview with Gordon. When he entered Gordon's sanctum, by appointment, he said to him: "Mr. Gordon, I and also insurance. He is possessed of characteristic energy and ambition and has a fine literary taste, owning an unusually fine private library.

On December 19, 1906, Mr. McGregor joined the ranks of the Benedicts by his marriage to Miss Nell Palmer, of Benton, Kentucky. They have one child, a daughter named Eleanor Palmer McGregor.

Mr. McGregor resides in Frankfort, where he has a beautiful home in The South Side. He has been very successful in general law practice. He is director and executive officer in the Henry Clay Fire Insurance Company, of Lexington, Kentucky; vice-president and director of the United American Fire Insurance Company, of Frankfort; director in R. Rogers & Sons Company, Frankfort Motor Car Company, Kinney-Manford Company, and others. He is also interested in some of the banks and represents a number of large foreign concerns.

Mr. McGregor has had a number of interesting experiences in his campaign work. Once the train was held up for an hour and fifteen minutes, without special authority from the management of the railroad, while he made a speech from the rear end of the train. The story is typical of a Kentucky campaign.

WHEN THE COW-CATCHER GOT OUT OF FIX.

He was called to the mountains of eastern Kentucky to make some campaign speeches during a hotly contested congressional case in 1910, and after making several counties on horseback reached the railroad which traversed several counties in that district. It was the day before the election and everybody was intensely excited. He was down for two speeches at different county seats on this day situated on the railroad but not in contiguous counties. In order to make them both he spoke at one county seat during the morning and caught the 1 p. m. regular passenger train down the valley to make his night appointment. At one of the intervening county seats an ex-congressman from Ohio had been extensively advertised for an afternoon speech, a great crowd was in town and at the last moment word was received that he could not come. The conductor on Mr. McGregor's train, who was an intense partisan, received the news up the line of the failure of the ex-congressman to arrive and knowing that he was on his train he wired ahead that he had a speaker with him and for the crowd to be gathered at the depot when our train arrived. They arrived amid a mountain of humanity with flag-flying, bands playing and for an hour and fifteen minutes he addressed the crowd from the rear of the day coach and the train proceeded in time for him to meet his night engagement. He afterwards saw the conductor and asked him how he did it. He said that he reported to his division superintendent at the end of his run that the mail train had been delayed an hour and a quarter because the cow-catcher had gotten out of fix. Anyhow the election went their way next day and the conductor is still on his run.

THIS is not a "treatise" on the scientific principles of spraying. We all know that, in order to have better fruit, we must spray more. How, when and with what to spray is fully explained in dozens of spraying calendars and guides that may be had free for the asking from any advertiser. But there is one phase that is seldom, if ever, treated thoroughly in articles on spraying, and that is the necessity of getting the best sprayer money can buy.

You may have absolutely the best spraying solution and the time at which you apply it may be just right; but if the apparatus with which you spray does the work poorly, all your labor will be in vain. A poor spray pump simply cannot do satisfactory work. Sometimes the pressure is not strong enough; at other times the nozzle does not work right; again, just when you need the pump most, it gets out of order, and finally you give up in disgust.

In selecting a spray pump, let the catalogue of a reliable manufacturer come to your aid. Remember that there are many styles and sizes of sprayers, and among them there is surely one that will do the work you require. There are small bucket sprayers, knapsack sprayers, "Aerosprays" and lots of other spraying apparatuses, from simple barrel sprayers to strong power sprayers for the man who has a large orchard.

Always put quality before price. When a manufacturer claims that his sprayers cost more because they are worth more and backs up that claim with thirty years' experience, you can safely take his word for the truth of such statements. Good sprayers cannot be made or sold cheaply. You can buy a "gold-filled" ring that is guaranteed for twenty years. But if you yourself expect to wear it that long, you usually buy a 14-karat gold ring. Why not apply the same principle to spray pumps?

A good spray pump will last a lifetime. The man who puts out a good one does not have to guarantee it—he knows what it'll do and how long it will do the work. There are several grades of brass—just as there are several grades of everything—and it is only logical that you won't find the best brass in a cheap spray pump. So here is my final advice—spray with the right spray pump at the right time, in the right way. Spray with the "World's Best" pumps right now.

Two Baskets of Apples!

Both grown in the same orchard, on two trees that had the same natural advantages. But we sprayed the tree that yielded the apples above and the apples below came from the tree that wasn't sprayed. In the "Deming Experiment Orchard" we take our own medicine. We study spraying right among the trees to find out what is needed in the way of sprayers, nozzles, solutions, etc., etc. We prefer to do the experimenting for our customers rather than let them do the experimenting for us. MAN'S LUCKY FIND

Will Interest Readers of the Ledger

Those having the misfortune to suffer from backache, urinary disorders, gravel, dropsical swellings, rheumatic pains, or other kidney and bladder disorders will read with gratification this encouraging statement by a Murray man.

A. P. Overby, Murray, says: "I was troubled with disordered kidneys. I had dull pains in the small of my back and whenever I stooped or lifted, sharp twinges caused me much misery. At night the backache greatly disturbed my rest. I got up in the morning feeling tired and languid and nervous spells bothered me. Sediment in the kidney secretions proved that my kidneys needed attention. Learning of Doan's Kidney Pills, I began using them. I took but one-half a box to make a complete cure."

Finds Buried Gold

Hickman, Ky., May 22.—To make a jump from poverty to a fortune is quite an unusual thing, but this George Betts, a farmer, born and reared in Mound City for years, found a lot there a while ago and on last Saturday digging post holes for a lot in, and in the hole struck a hard one and upon opening it contained $40,000 in money was evidence for the war, the very old ones, so Mr. Betts immediately sold them for safe-keeping and was so overjoyed he phoned his brother who was at work—that he had found them and they would be so hard now.

have a little envelope that I desire to return to you with its original contents intact."

For a moment, Gordon's usual complacent self-possession forsook him. He had worked for weeks to accomplish the defeat of this measure, and now knowing how close the vote was going to be, he saw defeat staring him in the face, when victory was almost within his grasp.

"Won't stay bought, Wilson?" he queried. "What's the matter? Ain't the price high enough? Think you got us in a hole now and going to make us come across with more? We'll have to pay if I guess, if your price ain't too high."

"There is no question of price, Mr. Gordon, and there is no use discussing it for the moment. I am going to vote for the bill."

"You infernal crook!" almost shouted Gordon, as he jumped from his chair. "Do you think that we are going to stand for being played with in this manner. You vote for that bill after what has passed, and we'll get you. We'll drive you out of the State. We will break you financially."

Wilson's face paled, as he answered in a quiet voice. "Mr. Gordon, until I came to this Legislature I was an honest man, and I valued my reputation for honesty very deeply. I was driven by desperate need and I allowed your smooth talk to induce me to accept your bribe. Perhaps I am a crook; but I want to tell you that the paths of life are strewn with moral wrecks that you have made. Many a man has come to this Legislature with honor and came away with dishonor. Crooks, all of them, but each one of them the tool of a master crook, and there is not a prison in this broad land of ours that contains a greater or viler criminal than you are. You have done me the greatest wrong that any man ever did me, but I am passing that up, and I am going to tell you right here and now, I take solemn oath before my Maker that if I ever suffer physically or financially any harm through you, or your people, that I will kill you." And his voice, cold, cutting, arose for the first time. "I will kill you in cold blood, with the same mercy that you have shown to other men's consciences, and I will go before my Maker fully satisfied that I have conferred the greatest possible benefit upon the men of my State, and that I have rid them of the biggest scoundrel within its boundaries. When I have done that I will have made some reparation for having been a crook." And he turned and left the room.

Test votes in the Senate had shown that the vote there would be almost as close as in the House. In the introduction of the bill in the Senate and its reference to the Committee and in the Committee itself, and to each of the members it had been known that Jim Treadway had avored the bill. There had been much speculation as to why he had taken no part in the test votes or in the debate itself. He was by far the most popular member of the Senate, a powerful debater, and an orator of exceptional ability. Members of the Senate and the public in general had regarded this as an opportunity in which Jim Treadway's talents would shine pre-eminently, and yet not a word had been spoken by him. The roll-call had been ordered and the interest was intense when his name was called by the clerk, Jim Treadway arose and said, "Since I have been a member of this body, I have never asked for any special privilege. I ask now, as a personal privilege, to explain my vote."

The privilege having been given, he proceeded: "Mr. Speaker and Fellow Senators, this is the last time that I shall meet with you, and this is the last vote that I shall cast in this august body. I have spent many happy moments here, and I believe I have made many friends. It has been my endeavor here as it has been through all my life to do right and to be right. In casting my vote today I am doing absolutely wrong. Therefore, I am laying my case before you as a jury of my peers." And then in a few brief words he told the story of the corruption of his boy, and then concluded with these words: "Mr. Speaker and Fellow Members of the Senate, for the sake of the future of that boy, whose life's record that I either as a man or a father could not bear to see marred by prison stripes, for the sake of the mother, who has stood so nobly beside me in my fight through life, I have betrayed my duty to my constituents, and have cast into the mire of disgrace those most prized of all possessions—conscience and honor. I vote 'No,' and against the bill. Mr. Clerk, and I thank you Mr. Speaker and Fellow Members for your courtesy and consideration."

Weak and exhausted by his efforts Jim Treadway sank into his seat, and bowed his head in his hands. His words, uttered in low, thrilling tones, reached out over the Senate Chamber into the farthest depths of the crowded galleries beyond, and touched the hearts of every listener. The story of the shame of a good man brought tears to the eyes of many. The applause that met his speech was the silent applause of loving sympathy.

The roll-call went on. There were several of Jim Treadway's friends among the Senators, yet to vote, who with wavering minds and for reasons of policy had practically decided to vote against the bill. The intense indignation aroused in their hearts caused a change in their minds and the final roll-call showed that the bill was passed.

Jim Treadway took his boy home and made a man of him, and a few years later exceeding to the call of his party, and even supported by

General Manager White and the railroad interests, who felt that they would receive justice at his hands became Governor Treadway
