Security Council Needs A Vacation

By Frank W. Corpstein

From the New York Times

The Security Council needs a vacation—and so do a lot of the people who have been fighting inIndonesia and strife elsewhere. They have been doing something every day and even these would like a rest. The prospect of a vacation is a welcome thought. It is looking at the same old faces every day and they need a change of scene.

There is trouble in Greece, where the United Nations short history. It is evidence of the need for a vacation or a vacation from the United Nations. It is a vacation needed by the United Nations. It is looking at the same old faces every day and they need a change of scene.
