STOCK LAW

S. M. Wyatt Presents Splendid Argument in Behalf of Proposition of Interest.

Editor Ledger: If you will allow me space in your valuable paper, I will jot a few items for the consideration of those under whose gaze they may chance to come.

1st. Living as we are in such a progressive age, an age of such high living and high thinking, an age in which there is more intelligence, energy and prosperity among the farmers than ever before. Such being the case, would it not be in keeping with the times, would it not be an onward and an upward move, to have a law compelling every man to keep his stock on his own premises? I think that it would, and entertaining this view, I submit the following reasons:

1st. It is the indispensable duty of every man to provide for his own. This duty is made imperative by laws both human and divine. This being the case, then has any man the moral right to fence up his own land (as many do) and turn his stock out to forage upon his neighbor? You can see at once that this is not business, neither is it right.

2nd. Is it not easier for any man to fence against his own stock only, than it is to fence against everybody's? Now I admit that a large percent of the stock of Calloway county is kept up. But while that is true, there is enough turned out to run at large in every community to necessitate every man fencing to secure his crops. Just think of the thousands and thousands of dollars that are expended annually for wire to keep up the fences, that ought to remain in the hands of the farmers. And this coupled to the fact, too, that timber is getting scarcer every year. It is true that every man would have to do more or less fencing to secure his own stock, but this would be a much smaller item than it now is. The thing to do would be to select the most suitable place upon the farm for a pasture upon which to run young stock. Of course the stock law would not deprive any man from fencing his entire farm, if he chose, but it would give to others the right to fence as little as they saw fit. There is comparatively few stock that run at large in Calloway county, except cattle and hogs, and would not a few acres of pasture be better for these than to roam the roads and few acres of wood lands that are unfenced? Would it not improve the grade of stock? Would we not try to secure the best results from the smallest number, instead of our razorbacks squealing up and down the road with a knot tied in their tail to prevent them from crawling through the cracks of the fence, we won't put rings in their noses and turn them in the pasture. Will not our milk cows do better on just a few acres of tame grass for pasture than they would on a square mile of out side land? But some claim that it would be detrimental to people of the east side of the county who have large belts of timber land where stock could do well to run at large. Of course it would be difficult to conceive of any man who would not seem to be in convenience, some one, in some way, but our policy should be to do that which brings the greatest amount of good to the greatest est number of people. Those with large belts of timber land are better prepared to do fencing than those whose timber is scarce and can thus utilize their range for their stock.

Again it is asserted by some that the stock law would work a hardship upon renters, that the land lord could charge them extra prices for pasturing their stock. In reply to this I would say that the renters of Calloway county, I think are greatly in the minority, that a large majority of the farmers of Calloway county own farms and are able to look after their fences. But as to its affording the land lord a better opportunity to extort from him now has, because if a man needs a tenant on his farm without the stock law he would need him just the same with the law. Cannot the land lord authoritatively say to his tenant now, you must not keep any stock, they are in the way, or to his wife, your fowls are a nuisance, hence you must dispose of them? What would be the result? The tenant would only have to say, Sir, I am looking out for another job, and so under the stock law, he would have no more authority over him than now, would need his service just the same that he does now, would be as humane as he now is and would make as much provision for his tenants comfort as he now makes. It does seem to me that this question should engage the attention of the farmers of Calloway county to-day as it never has before, and that this is the most opportune time for its agitation, because of the fact that there has been so much destruction of fences recently by the high waters, and that their reconstruction will be such an enormous expense to the farmers throughout the entire county. I am greatly surprised that some one has not written upon the subject before. Now Mr. Editor, I wish to appeal to you, whose efforts were so potent in removing "Old Pide" from the streets and sidewalks of Murray, to have suitable and comfortable quarters on the grassy hillsides and valleys adjacent to your town. We would earnestly solicit your influence in having her country cousin likewise remove from the public roads and fence corners to some cozy meadow by the shady brook, where she could feed to her heart's content, and slake her thirst from its sparkling waters, and then gently lie down upon her soft grassy bed and contemplate the her progeny of her experience as it now exists, in a better recollection of the past. And lost this should find an extra place in the waste basket I will desist.

Farmers speak out on the subject, express your sentiments and assign your names to your articles so that we may know who is talking and how you are talking.

I submit these thoughts for candid consideration of a wise and judicious public. S. M. Wyatt, Murray Route 7.

Notice to Debtors.

I have written personal letters to parties whose postoffice could be ascertained, whose names I found in A. L. Barker's papers, but so far have not had any responses. This, however, is final notice before putting these matters in the courts for judgment and collection. W. E. Lytton, Administrator A. L. Barker, deceased.

Flagged Train With Shirt

Tearing his shirt from his back an Ohio man flagged a train and saved it from a wreck, but H. T. Alston, Raleigh, N. C., once prevented a wreck with Electric Bitters. "I was in a terrible plight when I began to use them," he writes, "my stomach, head, back and kidneys were all badly affected and my liver was in bad condition, but four bottles of Electric Bitters made me feel like a new man." A trial will convince you of their matchless merit for any stomach, liver or kidney trouble. Price 25 cents at Dale & Stubblefield.

Building Collapsed

The concrete building recently erected on the A. D. Thompson lot on the east side of the square place in the waste basket I will desist.

"DEMOCRAT"

Says Ollie Has Fallen Into Bad Company and Reminds Him of Fate of Old Dog Tray.

The following communication sent to the Paducah News-Democrat for publication contains so much wholesome advice and good common sense that we reproduce it for the benefit of Calloway voters:

Paducah, Ky., April 30, 1912. To The News-Democrat: "Our Ollie James" is a great figure in Democracy just now. In fact, the greatest figure in Kentucky Democracy. He is "ours" of the first district. We are justly proud of him. He is the greatest figure ever produced by West Kentucky. We have voted for him for anything he has asked. We shall vote for him for anything he asks in the future for himself, but every fond mother is forced to think her idolized son occasionally, and while we have not even a remote idea of ever having to spank Ollie, still we may find it at least necessary to point to the switch and say, "Be careful, son."

Ollie has fallen into bad company. He has joined hands with Watterson. The latter is the black sheep of the Democratic family. It is thoroughly understood throughout Kentucky that he is against everything the people are for or that is for the people against corporate and organized greed. He bolted a Democratic nominee for president. He helped elect a Republican United States senator over a Democrat. He tried to ruin Kentucky Democracy in 1911. While he claimed to "limp in the rear," every step he took he tried to block other Democrats with his crutch.

Now, he is deliberately trying to ruin the one candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination for whom the people are clamoring - Woodrow Wilson. No one doubts that three-fourths of the Democracy of the country is solid for Wilson. Every one knows the money interests will block his nomination if possible. Watterson has no one fooled. No one doubts his motives. The state of Kentucky has repudiated him time out of mind, and shown it knows him.

But it is not Watterson of whom we are thinking. We have no tears for him. He has long ago traded away his birthright for pottage, but it is for one far dearer to us than we are grieving. We hate to see our Ollie join hands with Democracy's Benedict Arnold and try to thwart the people's will. For he knows the great mass of his party wants Wilson and wants him badly, and we are at a loss to understand, therefore, his attitude. We are for you, Ollie, for whatever you want, but you cannot tell us how to vote for somebody else. You need not expect us to support you in this. The first district is for Woodrow Wilson and will so vote. Don't try to tell us how to vote. Ollie. Our eyes are open. And "this above all," get out of bad company. You know what happened to Old Tray.

A Democrat.

WORK STARTED

Contracts Let for Water Tower and Work was Commenced Last Monday.

Not later than July 11th is the date set for the completion of the large steel tank to be used to supply Murray with water. The city council has let the contract for the construction of the big tank to the Memphis Steel & Construction Co., and work was commenced Monday morning. The tank is to be of 70,000 gallon capacity and will stand 100 feet in the air and is located on the high point just east of the county jail. Mr. P. H. Porter, of Clinton, is in charge of the construction with McAlley, of Memphis, supervising the work. The water mains have also been purchased and a survey of the city made and contract let for the laying. The principal mains will be eight inch and will cover the city like a net work. The city has purchased of the City Light Co., the lot on which is located the deep well, and has also let the contract for a second deep well. These wells will furnish the supply of water, the one already in use is one of the finest and deepest wells in Western Kentucky. The price paid for this property, including track privileges, was only $1,000.

When completed Murray will boast of one of the most complete systems of water works of any city of similar size in the state. The town will be supplied with 47 fire plugs of modern type for protection in cases of fire.

Sch. of Trustees Elected Saturday.

Two trustees for the Murray district will be elected Saturday of this week to succeed R. T. Wells and O. T. Hale, whose terms expire this year. This election will attract attention it deserves and good men should be elected. Women will not be entitled to participate in this election, but under the new school suffrage law passed by the last legislature, will participate in all future school elections.

WOODROW WILSON or W. J. BRYAN

Calloway County democrats are called to meet in mass convention in the city of Murray on Tuesday, May 27th, for the purpose of electing 15 delegates to attend the state convention which meets in the city of Louisville May 29th, at which time the state of Kentucky will express its choice for the nominee for the presidency.

The Ledger believes Calloway democrats as a whole would rather cast their votes for William Jennings Bryan than any other living democrat, and we believe further that second choice to Mr. Bryan with the masses is Governor Woodrow Wilson, of New Jersey. All democrats are urged to attend this meeting and place old Calloway on record for progressive measures and a progressive candidate. Instruct the delegates for Bryan, in case his name should be presented before the state convention, and if not then for Woodrow Wilson, of New Jersey. Gov. Wilson is a Georgian by birth, spent a great part of his life as a citizen of the grand commonwealth of Virginia, a genuine southerner, and towers above other aspirants for the nomination like the giant oak does above the black jack. Democrats attend this convention and place yourself on record for Wilson or Bryan.

SYNOPSIS.

Blackstock interposed hastily. "That fourth blade of yours certainly did lead him up to slaughter." He reached over and took up the deck at Trux's elbow, spreading the cards with a dextrous sweep of his strong, blunt fingers. "Now game. Cut, you fellows."

"The invitation tempta, but there are some skins too thick," Van Tui said. "Trux pushed back his chair, nodding cheerfully to Coast. But for a heightened tint of color he showed no trace of being aware of Van Tui's insolence. "Unless," he added, "I want to drop for one."

"Drop," said Van Tui sweetly, "and be damned."
"What do you mean by that?" Trux, on his feet, turned upon his tormentor with an imperceptible tremor in his voice.

Prudence in the better part of bridge, Van Tui explained carefully. "He's a prudent man—who he comes consisting of chilled extremities when ahead of the game."
Crinson, with resentment, Trux hesitated, the report on the tip of his tongue only withheld because of Coast's appealing and sympathetic look. Then with a lift of his plump shoulders he turned away, nodding to his host, Dundas and Coast.

"Good night," he said brusquely, and so betrayed the effort his self-control cost him. "You can send your checks if I am anything ahead."
"We'll try not to forget, thanks." A satiric smile on Van Tui's thin lips winged the parting dart.

Trux did not reply, but left the room abruptly. Blackstock accompanying him to the door. In his absence Coast cut in as Van Tui's partner and took the chair Trux had just vacated.

"Lead," he inquired.
"Years," Dundas told him.
"And," Van Tui interjected as Coast took up the cards, "let us trust you're more bridge sense than that professional dummy." He nodded to indicate the departing Trux. "I carefully told him, early in the evening, that when I doubled I wanted not his highest hand, but the highest card of his weakest suit. Do you think you can remember that?"

"Yes," said Coast shortly, annoyed by the other's offensive manner.
"I sincerely trust so. I didn't come here to be fooled by everybody, by incompetent partners included."
Coast quietly put down the cards without completing the deal. "Aren't you straining something in your attempt to be insolent, Van?" he inquired as Blackstock reappeared. "It happens I've been your partner this evening more frequently than anybody else."

"Directly."
"And you think yourself justified in suggesting that I've played against you?"
Van Tui's dark eyes met his steadily in a sardonic stare. "I'm the heavy, lesser here," he said. "You've played like a raw amateur every time you've played with me. Interpret that to your liking."

"I shall," Coast got up, white to the lips. "It spells good night to me." Blackstock struck in with a heavy note of insinuating suavity. "Oh, come now! It's early yet. Van doesn't know what he's saying."
It was Van Tui's turn to rise; he accomplished the action with surprising dexterity. "When did I appoint a hourer like you to read my meaning?" he asked crisply.

Blackstock hesitated, swaying a little as his tempo strained at the leash. "I'll take that from you in your present condition, Van Tui," he said slowly.
In his nervous anxiety to avert the quarrel, little Dundas blundered and precipitated it. "Oh, say now! We're all good friends; there's no sign of any another. Come on, Van Tui, let's have a drink and make up."

At the suggestion Van Tui's wrath evanesced. "All right," he assented, "that listens like sense." He turned to the buffet, Dundas with him.
"Good night, Blackstock," Coast of- fered his hand. "I'm off now."

"Why, good night," Blackstock's mouth smiled, but his speech was mechanical and his eyes, slightly prominent and magnified by thick lenses, met Coast's with "an opaque look singularly suggesting a cat." "I'm sorry our party has to break up so early."

"Look here!" Van Tui swung round with a glass half-full of raw Scotch in his hand. "Aren't you going to join us?"
"Thank you, no," said Coast dryly. "No," said Blackstock. "And," he added, "if I were you, Van, I'd chop that drink. It won't do you a world of good."

"Oh," Van Tui smiled apologetically. "Don't you know I reserve the privilege of acting as my own wet nurse?" "I advised you as a friend, but I'm willing to push the trespass and tell you something you evidently don't know," Van Tui; drink makes you ugly."

Coast, lingering in anxiety, detected suddenly the gleam of drink insanity in Van Tui's eyes. Alarmed, he moved to place himself between the men, and in the act received full in the face what had been intended for Blackstock's contents of Van Tui's glass.

Half-blinded and choking, he stepped back, groping for his handkerchief. The alcohol burned his eyes like liquid fire, and the fumes of it in his throat and nostrils almost strangled him for a moment, preventing his clear understanding of what was taking place. Dimly he heard Van Tui raving in his agonously clear and incisive accents, heard him stigmatize Blackstock cardsharp and blackguard. More vaguely he heard him name Katherine Thaxter—in what connection he did not know. On the heels of that something backed hideously; Dundas screamed like a rat. Van Tui said: "Oh, God!" thickly.

Dazed with horror, Coast managed to clear his vision.
Blackstock had moved to the other side of the room, where he stood at a small table, the drawer of which he had evidently jerked open the instant before he fired. His feet were well apart and he leaned a little forward, his large head lowered upon his heavy neck. His lips were compressed to the loss of their sensual fullness, his eyes blazed beneath knotted, intent brows. One hand was clenched by his side; the other held an automatic pistol from whose muzzle a faint vapor lifted in the still hot air.

In a corner, little Dundas was huddled with a face of parchment, mouth kapling, eyes astare.
Both men were watching Van Tui. Both saw the tall, graceful figure away like a pendulum gathering momentum. An expression of strained surprise clouded the man's face. He lurched a step forward and caught himself with a hand on the card table, while his blank gaze, falling, comprehended the neat black puncture with its widening stain upon the bosom of his shirt.

"God," he said again in a voice of pitiful inquiry.
Then he fell, dragging the table over with him.
On the sound of that, Blackstock moved for the first time. He drew himself up, relaxed, and dropped the weapon upon the table beside him. His glance encountered Coast's, wavered and turned away. He moistened his lips nervously.

Coast, with a little cry, dropped to his knees beside Van Tui. Already the man's eyes were glazing, the movements of the hand that tore at the buttons were becoming feebly convulsive. While Coast watched he shuddered and died.

"Well!" Blackstock's voice boomed in his ears as the man's hand gripped his shoulder. Coast shook off the grain and rose.
"You're done for him," he said, wondering at the steadiness of his own voice.

Blackstock shook his head, blinking like a man waking from evil dreams. "Why," he said huskily.

He turned away as if to lose sight of the figure huddled at his feet. Dundas in his corner whimpered. "Shut up, damn you! D'you want—" He clicked his strong white teeth, jumping as the bell of the house telephone interrupted. Then he went heavily to the instrument in the short hallway that led to the entrance to the apartment. Coast heard him jerk down the receiver.

"Well!" he demanded savagely. "Yes. An accident." "One of my guests. Yes, badly. You'd better call up police headquarters and tell them to send an ambulance." "And don't let anybody up here until they come. Understand?"

He hung up the receiver with a bang and tramped back into the dining room. "That damn hallway!" He heard the racket in the flat below and called him up. "I have made a pretty mess of things!" He went to the buffet, carefully avoiding the body, and poured himself a stiff drink, which he swallowed at a gulp.

Blackstock strode restlessly back to the other end of the room and threw himself, a dead weight, into a chair, facing the wall. In the silence that followed Coast could hear his deep and regular respirations, unburied, unchecked. After a moment, however, he swung round, dug his elbows into his knees and buried his face in his hands.

"Good God!" he said. "Why did I do that?" Dundas roughed nervously and moved toward the door. Blackstock looked up with the face of a thundercloud. "Where are you going?" Dundas stammered as incoherent as a child.

"Well, you stop where you are. Get back to that window-seat—and try to keep your miserable teeth still, can't you? D'you think I'm going to let you desert me now, after all I've done for you, you ungrateful rat?" Without a protest Dundas sidled fearfully between him and what had been Van Tui, and returned to Blackstock's glowing window seat. A sour grimace twisted his mouth.

"You're not a bad fellow, Coast," he said. "I stick to you."
Exerting himself, Coast tried to master his aversion and contempt for the man as well as his blind horror of the crime.

"What are you going to do?" "Do?" Blackstock jumped up and began to pace to and fro. "What the hell can I do but give myself up?" "You mean that?"

The question was involuntarily of Coast's part, wrong from him by surprise, so difficult he found it to credit the man's sincerity.

"Of course," Blackstock explained, simply. "It's too late now to make a getaway. If I had, I'd been for that racket. They'd been before I could get out of town." He paused, questioning Coast with his intent stare. "You wouldn't let me off, would you? You'd tell the police, of course?"

"Of course," Blackstock nodded as if he found the reply anything but surprising. "Of course. He was your friend." "Yours, too. Why did you do it?"

"This damnable temper of mine! He didn't you hear?—threatened to tell Kate Thaxter." Blackstock resumed his walk. "What?"

"Never mind—something to prevent our marriage." "And you killed him for that?" Blackstock stopped, staring down at the body. "Yes," he said, in a subdued voice.

"If that's your way, you'd have murdered me also, you know, before you could have married Miss Thaxter."

U. S. DESTROYERS SENT TO MEXICO

GO UNDER SEALED ORDERS

Orisco's Force Has Diminished to 7,000, and Men Are Fast Deserting. In Report—Home American Consular Agent Sacked.

San Francisco, Cal.—The transport Buford, under orders to sail as a transport ship for Americans in distress on the west coast of Mexico, received supplementary orders to sail at once.

It is rumored that the Buford will put in at San Diego for a convoy. Although no official confirmation of this information could be had, it is supported by a dispatch from San Diego stating that two of the torpedo boat destroyers in port there would sail under sealed orders within twenty-four hours.

Torpedo Boats Sail. San Diego, Cal.—With all lights masked, their decks piled high with coal and every effort made at secrecy, the torpedo boat destroyers Pringle and Perry left for the south at midnight.

So well was the movement concealed that not until the arrival of a dispatch from the south was the fact of their departure known. Magdalena Bay, 500 miles to the south, is the objective point of the two boats.

It is reported on good authority here that the cruiser Maryland, equipped for a cruise of 5,000 miles, will leave here some time Tuesday to act as a convoy for the transport Buford, which left San Francisco and possibly prepared to put in at San Diego.

That means invasion; don't make it public for the present at least, said a naval officer. But both naval and army men predict, "It is possible the Mexican territory within the present week and that Magdalena Bay will be the first point selected."

ARMIES FACE TO FACE

Situation in North Purling—Orisco Force Dwindling.
Mexico City.—With two armies face to face in the north, and neither seemingly willing to back down, there appeared to be little change in the status of the revolution over that of a week ago.

Reports reaching this capital from the two camps are conflicting as to their relative strength.
A person who made his way from Escalante to Toluca reported that Orisco's strength was now less than 7,000, of which only about 5,000 were armed, the rest being divided into foraging parties which scour the territory within a radius of many miles for provisions and horses.

MORE MONEY FOR LEVEES

$1,500,000 Ready for Mississippi and Tributaries.
Washington.—An immediate appropriation of $1,500,000 for the rebuilding and repair of levees on the Mississippi and its tributaries was made certain Saturday when the house passed the senate's joint resolution authorizing the expenditure. Representative Humphreys of Mississippi called for the resolution in the house, and it passed without objection. It was understood by members of the house that the fund will be available to repair on the Missouri river and other important streams where breaks have occurred at some distance from the Mississippi.

BANDITS KILLED IN BATTLE

Their Lair Was First Dynamited by Police Squad.
Paris.—After their lair had been wrecked by two terrific charges of dynamite, the bullets of police, detectives and gendarmes advancing under cover of machine guns, having failed to dislodge them, Dubois, the world-famous anarchist, and Bonnot, the "demon clown" of the "phantom death car" of the automobile bandits, who have terrorized Paris for two years, were shot dead in a hand-to-hand encounter in a small garage at Chateaufort on the outskirts of Paris.

The battle, which was the most sensational ever fought in Paris between police and armed criminals, was witnessed by a crowd of more than 10,000 persons. The entire case has been thrown into an uproar of excitement by the conflict.

SO BLUE ALMOST CRAZY

Mineral Point Lady Tells About An Experience That Almost Drove Her Insane.

Mineral Point, Mo.—Mrs. Clara Cluff, of this place, says: "I had a pain in my left side and back, and suffered a great deal with womanly troubles."

"I would take spells that lasted two or three days, when it seemed like I was uneasy all the time, and didn't feel like doing anything. I couldn't sleep good at night. I felt as though I had just done a hard day's work."

"I had suffered for six years, and I can't tell you just how I did feel. I felt so bad. The doctors' treatment didn't seem to help, and I was so blue I was almost crazy."

"I tried Cardui, and before I had taken two bottles I felt much better. I took 12 bottles in all. Now, though I haven't taken any for a good while, I still feel all right—better than I have for years."

"I would have been crazy if Cardui hadn't helped me." "Cardui will help you, just as it helped Mrs. Cluff."

Why not try it? It may be just the very thing your system has long been craving. See if it isn't so.

Caution.

A commercial traveler at a railway restaurant in one of our southern towns included in his order for breakfast two boiled eggs. The old darkey who served him brought three.

"Uncle," said the traveling man, "why in the world did you bring me three boiled eggs? I only ordered two."

"Yes, sir," said the old darkey, bowing and smiling, "I know you did order two, sir, but I brought three because I just naturally felt that one of dem might fall you, sir."—Harper's Weekly.

JEALOUS.

"My wife is awfully jealous." "Is that so?" "Yes; she wouldn't speak to me for three days after I hugged that hunk-er."

A Sad Handicap. "Sad case of the fellow on the fourth floor?" "What's that?" "He plays the cornet for his own amusement, but he got so hard up lately that he had to pawn the instrument."

"Well?" "Now he can't borrow a dollar in the entire building because everybody is afraid he'll get the blamed tooler out of pawn."

FACTS

Local Evidence

Evidence that can be verified. Facts is what we want. Opinion is not enough. Opinions differ.

Here's a Murray fact.

You can test it.

J. A. Ellison, Murray, Ky., says:

"I have had no occasion to use and kidney remedy since Doan's Kidney Pills cured me some years ago. My cure has remained permanent. You are at liberty to use my statement as heretofore." (Statement given January 30, 1912.)

The statement to which Mr. Ellison refers was given in January 1908 and was in substance as follows: "I have found Doan's Kidney Pills to be effective in relieving backache and other symptoms of kidney trouble. I suffered a long time with lame back and often was hardly able to stoop. The trouble was to get out of bed. I took a great many remedies in an effort to get relief, but received no benefit until I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. Before I had finished the contents of two boxes, I was feeling like a different man and all symptoms of my trouble disappeared. For sale by all dealers. Price 50c. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's and take no other.

The time was just previous to the second battle of Cold Harbor. General Grant was advancing on Richmond. His plan of campaign was known to Lee in the main outline, and he began his preparations for the activity he began. He was approaching Lee from the direction of Culpepper Courthouse and Fredericksburg, and his plan was either to crush Lee's army with overwhelming forces or at least to detain the southern army at a convenience distance from Richmond until an army under Grant could be sent to take up in the rear of Lee and seize Richmond. "The boldness of Grant and the skill of Lee," says Mr. Stringfellow, "resulted in a loss to the Union army, in killed, wounded and captured, of a number of men exceeding the entire army of Lee, and when the movement had been completed, the army of Lee was found within McClellan had formerly stood almost without the loss of a man."

"Company Q," says the venerable ex-scout, "was made up of cavalymen with broken-down horses, or who had lost their horses in action, and was composed of about sixty men and commanded by a sergeant. Lee's eyes twinkled with mirth at the suggestion. 'I wonder what Baldy Smith would think if he knew that I was sending Company Q to resist his advance,' he said, and laughed more heartily than I ever heard him during the four years of the war."

Mr. Stringfellow then urged upon the sergeant his duty to lead the way by offering his own service, and when the officer said that he was in command at the camp and could not leave his men, the scout showed him the authority from Lee, which he could not evade. He stepped across the line and at once became a very efficient recruiting agent, and at last found sixteen men, including himself, who were willing to make the attempt to keep back an army. This gave the scout nineteen men altogether, as he had three scouts under him.

"As we stood in that lonely swamp," he says, "we could hear on the opposite side, on a road running parallel with the stream, the rattle of wagon wheels and the cluck of the artillery, and the shouts of the drivers as they were urging teams on a forced march. These were a good many thousand cavalry, under the command of General Sherman. They were leading Grant's army, and had a twofold object in the movement: first, to secure supplies for men and horses by establishing a base on the James river, and second, to draw a line across the advance of the enemy to hide the movements of Butler's army."

Mr. Stringfellow planned his crossing through this line of march, telling his men to fall in between the wagons one by one, and at a certain point where the woods came down on the other side to fall out again in the same manner. As he had foreseen, however, it was not his men, who followed by him, who were to follow him, who told him to come back or if he would not have a man left, as the sergeant was using all his eloquence to make them retreat. He stole back to the line and paused long enough to see that they were following. This reminds me of one of Aesop's fables. Once upon a time there was a deer which was walking quietly through the woods when he came upon a lion—under a great oak tree. The lion, with a growl, said on his hind legs, "The deer replied, I would like to go home, but I observe that there are a great many tracks leading into your den, and none coming out." That's what's happening now. We hear a great deal about the brave men who volunteer to go into the line, but no pack-train brought

"Upon this," Mr. Stringfellow relates, "made my second speech. It was short, branded him a coward, and ordered him back to his camp. Then I made a plain statement of the difficulties and dangers of this trip."

Then followed the most extraordinary feat, which brave men sometimes perform when inspired by the full flood of martial ardor. The little band crept near the road under cover of the darkness. Four of them had horses, but the others were afoot. As had been planned by their leader and explained to them, they fell in with the advancing line, one by one, as they came riding silently side by side with Union officers; and at the appointed place they dropped out, and drew quietly off into the woods. This first step in their under-taking had been accomplished without disaster.

Then they marched on as rapidly as they could, the men afoot holding to the manes and tails of the horses to help them on. At day-break they crossed the main road and pushed forward to a hill, on the summit of which towered an enormous pine tree. Mr. Stringfellow says that he always thinks of that road as "the trail of the lonesome pine."

To climb this tree was the next enterprise. In order to see the country around and decide on the movements of the enemy. A small party was organized up from the ground and supported against the trunk of the tree and it was Mr. Stringfellow himself—the dignified and earnest minister of today—who made the ascent. He climbed to the top of the slanting trunk, and then began the heavier and more dangerous work of making his painful way down. He was now in the fork of the trunk of the pine. While he was still ten or fifteen feet below the lowest limb his strength gave out, and he relates reverently that he hung there and prayed. After a little he rallied and went on, dragging himself inch by inch down the trunk. He was now within five feet of it, and threw his arm over it, and finally climbed a little higher and sat upon it.

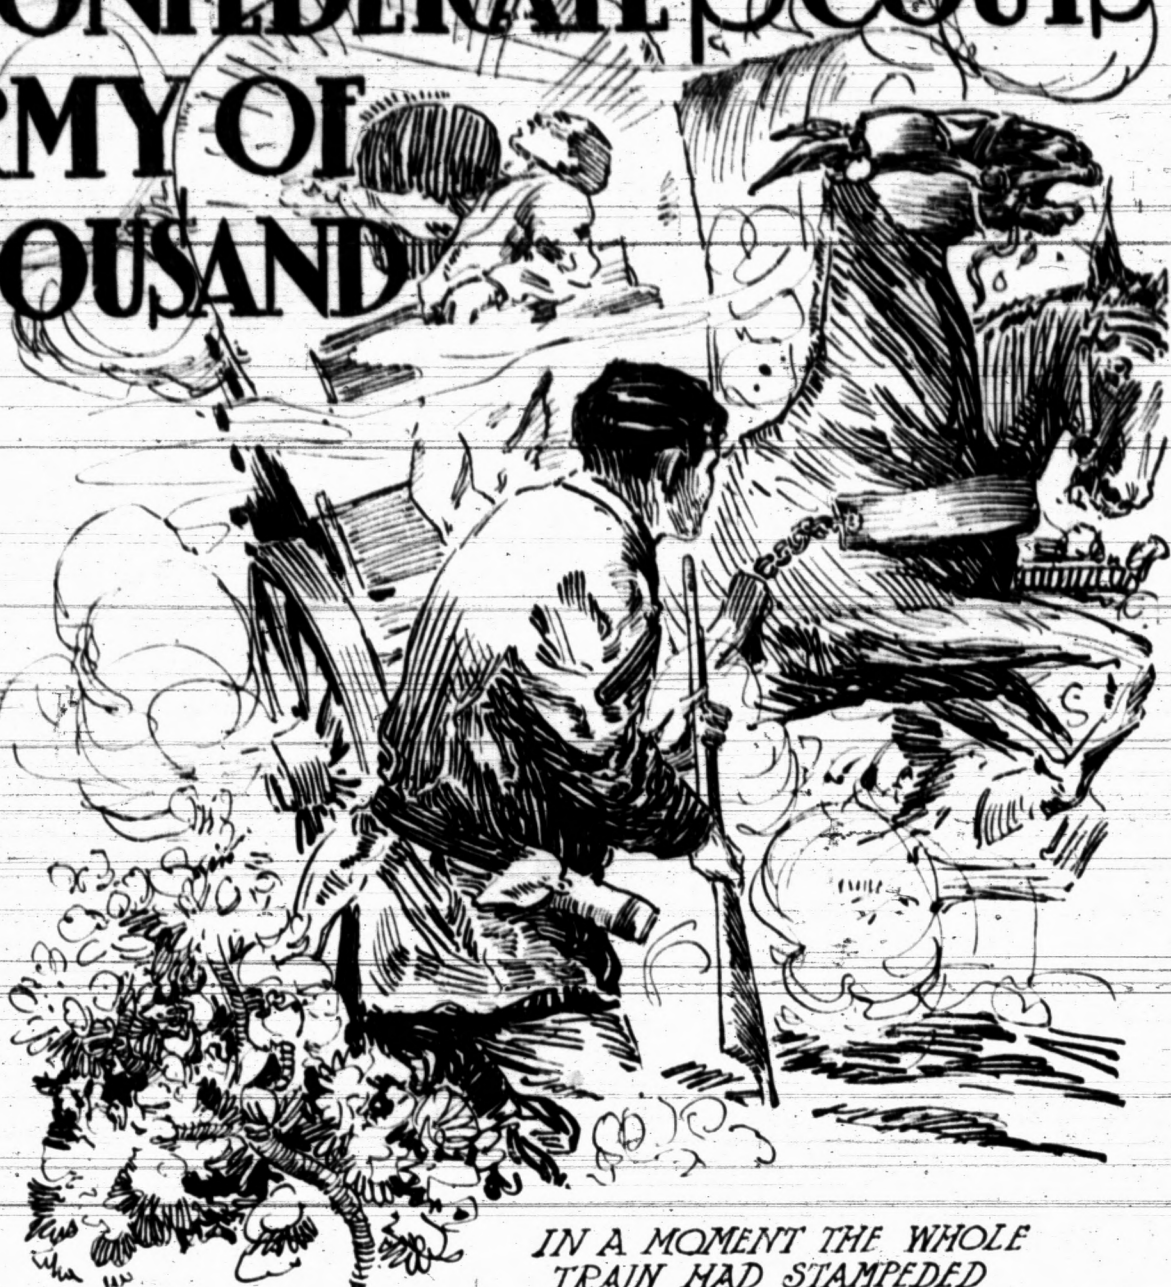

"From that lofty perch he saw what he had climbed so far to see. About a quarter of a mile away came the slow column of about five hundred men, moving toward the foot of Gold Butte. The first of the men in this force amounted to about fifteen hundred men, and the fifteen men at the foot of the pine tree were expected to keep them back.

"I went down that tree a good deal faster than I was up," says the old scout. "As the force approached, I saw that they were executing his plans. They would approach the head of the wagon line from the woods along side of the road, his men were to do as he directed. He would seize the lead horses of the wagon train, and then, with his men, turn to the right; the next man was to be turned to the left, the next to the right, and so on, in order to block the road, and they were to uncouple teams as fast as possible, so that the men could be taken as prisoners; they might take what was mounted.

The scheme worked well, but not in the way agreed upon. The negro driver of the first team was about to shoot Mr. Stringfellow in the back, when one of the scouts killed him. He fell under the feet of the mules. This frightened them, and in a moment the whole train had stampeded. Horses and mules ran up the train road, and men took to the woods for safety and kept running.

"I entered the zone promptly," says the time scout, "and confronted my wife to keep her from firing her pistol, and the scattering shots of the enemy, they seemed to think we had attacked them in force. Having none as much as we did at that time, I was quickly instructed to rally and wait for me at the phone on the hill. I saw a captain who was running with my direction, with a loaded musket, and his wife, he lied to me and said, 'I am not a tone, I want to surrender! I want to surrender!' With a smile I suggested that he surrender to me, and he said, 'I am not a tone, I want to surrender!' To whom?' I said, 'You can surrender to me.' The comedy of the situation helped him to recover his wits and he said, 'I am not a tone, I want to surrender!' There was a big oak tree within 100 feet of me and he sprang behind it and put his head and gun around the side. 'Now you can surrender, he said, 'I am not a tone, I want to surrender!' I then thousand for my life. I am afraid that at that moment I did not really love my neighbor as myself. I prayed hard for some plan by which I could save my wife even with him, but he got the advantage of me."

"I decided that I would have to play the same game he had played with me. Looking at him steadily in the eyes, I said, 'This isn't being snide; it isn't even being a gentle man. You wished to surrender to me, so I gave you the opportunity when I could have killed you.' Now you have the advantage of the first and demand my surrender.' And I began to unbutton my pistol belt in order to deliver up the pistols. As I did so I put my hand behind me to hand him the pistols and took advantage of this opportunity to draw one of them which was not buckled down to the holster.

FEDERAL STATISTICS OF MANUFACTURERS TELL STORY.

Had 4,776 Establishments, Employing 79,060 People—Ranks First in Tobasco and Second in Liquors.

Washington. - In an advance bulletin, giving statistics of manufactures for the state of Kentucky for the calendar year 1909, made public by the director of the census, a notable industrial growth in the Blue Grass State is shown.

From 1849 to 1900 the total value of the manufacture of the state increased ten times, or from only $21,10,000 in 1849, including the products of neighborhood and hand industries, to $221,754,000 in 1900, exclusive of the products of neighborhood and hand industries.

During 1849 an average of 21.4% wage-earners, representing 3.2 per cent of the total population, were engaged in manufactures; in 1900 an average of 65,000 wage earners, or 2.9 per cent of the total population, were so engaged. In the sixty years indicated, the gross value of products, per capita, of the total population of the state increased from $33 to $98.

From 1849 to 1909, however, the proportion which the manufactures of the state represent of the total value of the products of manufacturing industries in the United States, decreased somewhat. This proportion was 2.1 per cent in 1855 and but 1.1 per cent in 1901. In 1899 and in 1904 Kentucky ranked nineteenth among the states, in gross value of manufactured products, but in 1909 it occupied twentieth place.

In 1929 Kentucky had 4,726 manufacturing establishments, which gave employment to an average of 29,000 persons during the year, and paid out $22,491,000 in salaries and wages. Of the persons employed 65,100 were wage earners.

During the period from 1901 to 1929 Kentucky advanced from fourth place among the states of the Union in the manufacture of distilled liquors to second place. In 1909 the value of the products for the industry was $14,366,000, or 21.7 per cent of the total manufacturing output.

Kentucky is the leading tobacco-growing state in the Union and was one of the first states to engage in tobacco manufactures on a factory basis. From 1890 to 1901 the industry showed decreases, both in value of products and value added by manufacturer, but from 1901 to 1909 there was an increase of 21.7 per cent in value of products, and of 13 per cent in value added by manufacturer.

Farm Train Completes Tour.

Lexington. After traveling about 2,450 miles and making more than 200 on-farm demonstrations and lectures to audiences aggregating 75,000 people, the State Farm train completed its tour when it arrived here. The train was operated by the College of Agriculture and Kootenay Experiment Station at the State Department of Agriculture and traveled over seven railroads. The train left here on March 25 and has been continuously on the road ever since. It proved a success far beyond the highest anticipations of those who had planned it.

Moore has filed suit against her husband for divorce, which she seeks to recover $6,000. Alimony and has caused a writ of attachment to issue against all his property.

Old "Skullbuster" to Go.

Georgetown. One of the historic landmarks of Scott county is being torn down to make room for a more modern structure. It is the Corinthian Christian Church, one of the oldest institutions in this section of the state. It has long been known as the "Skullbuster" and said by the old inhabitant to have derived its unusual name from the fact that the doors of the quaint old house built of logs, were so low that only the taller members of the congregation stooped on entering they were sure to bump their heads.

Big Boys' Corn Club.

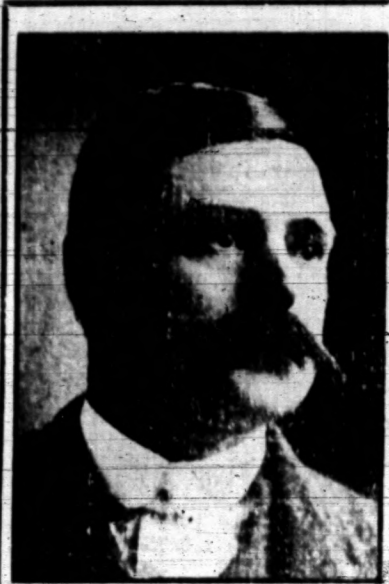

Bowling Green.—The Boys' Corn Club of Warren county for 1912 comprise eight hundred boys, who work eight hundred acres of corn. The crop has been distributed to the juvenile farmers. Last year eighty-eight bushels were in the contest and they averaged twenty-two bushels to the acre. One boy made 99.7 bushels. As the average for Kentucky is only twenty-nine bushels the boys made a wonderful record.

We wish to thank our friends and patrons for their liberal patronage for the season of 1911 and we cordially invite continuance for 1912. We are prepared to take care of mares from a distance. Why not breed to the best? We claim for our horses and jacks that they are the best bred in America, and we believe people who spend their money for breeding purposes are entitled to the best their money can buy. We do not claim for our stock more than they are entitled to and we know that breeders make money when they breed to them. It may cost you a few dollars more but the result is worth many times the expenditure. Breed to the best stock available, and we know we have the best blood in Western Kentucky.

"By the way, what do you think of those songs without words?" "With a little alteration," replied the matter-of-fact young man in the parlor scene, "they would make a bit with me."

"How could they be improved?" queried the long-distance key pounder.

Stimulate Children?

Ask your doctor how often he prescribes an alcoholic stimulant for children. He will probably say, "Very, very rarely." Ask him how often he prescribes a tonic for them. "He will probably answer, "Very, very frequently." Then ask him about Ayer's Sarsaparilla as a strong and safe tonic for the young. Not a drop of alcohol in it.

Always keep a box of Ayer's Pills in the house. Just one pill at bedtime, now and then, will ward off many an attack of biliousness, indigestion, sick-headache, and many other troubles. Your doctor knows these pills. Ask him to give you them. Manufactured by J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.
