Hopkinsville is the seat of Christian County of Kentucky. Its area exceeds seven hundred and thirty square miles; it produces more wheat than any other county in the state, and with good roads this makes it accessible and attractive for settlers. The county lies within easy reach of her flourishing cities, the finest quality of coal which is extensively mined, and possesses a large amount of fair agricultural land. The result will be an increase in population, public improvements and business. By this you will have a large amount of corn, hay, fruits, live stock and other industries, which will support a large number of families. And do not forget that in the production of corn, hay, fruits, live stock and manufacturing industry, Hopkinsville is justly proud of its success.

Hopkinsville is the capital of the county of Christian. The county of Christian is divided into departments, which are as follows: Agriculture, Industry, Manufacturing, Education, and Public Improvement. The county is divided into departments—

- Agriculture: This department is divided into sections, one of which is devoted to the production of corn, hay, fruits, live stock, and other agricultural products. The county has a large amount of fair agricultural land, which is extensively cultivated.
