ON TO THE BLUFF

Good Roads Enthusiasts Subscribe Liberally to Build Highway to the River.

In the language of the rather suggestive ditty, "Everybody is doing it, don't it now?" can well be applied to working the roads in old Calloway. The citizens are thoroughly aroused to the necessity of good roads, and the good work commenced by the construction of the Calloway section of the Murray-Benton-Paducah highway is extending throughout the county. During this week the road from Daniel McKee's toward Cherry has been worked by citizens along the route, and the Paris road from the city limits to Tom Fair's has received the attention of a large force of hands. Two more days, November 5th and 6th, will be devoted to the Murray-Benton-Paducah road, and a large force is expected to be on the road these dates.

As splendid evidence that "everybody is doing it" we publish this week the large list of labor, teams and funds subscribed for the construction of the Pine Bluff road. This work is to be done November 5th, 6th and 7th.

The Ledger would again admonish these citizens to equip themselves for the work to be done. Tools, wagons, etc., must be ready for work when they go on the road, and overseers should be selected, the best men possible for the places, and their sections assigned them before hand and the proper number of men and teams placed at their command. Without such an organization but little will be accomplished. "Too many cooks spoil the broth," applies very well to road work. Too many bosses prevent the accomplishment of much labor. Everybody can't act as overseer, but every man can work and should work under the direction of the man in charge, and if this is done on the Pine Bluff road for three days a different road will result. Following is the list to date:

SUDDEN DEATH

Jas. Hudspeth Passes Away After Only a Few Moments' Illness.

Jas. H. Hudspeth, of Brown's Grove, died very suddenly last Saturday morning. Mr. Hudspeth was one of the best men in Calloway county and his sudden taking away was one of the saddest deaths ever recorded in Calloway county. He had been engaged in the mercantile business for the past two years and was associated with Bud Brown. He was at the store when taken suddenly ill and walked to his home across the road and within ten minutes was dead. He was a large man physically and just as large in splendid character. He is survived by a wife and many relatives. The Ledger joins his many friends in extending sincere sympathy to the bereaved ones.

As luck would have it I had a large bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house. After following the directions for an hour and twenty minutes he was through all danger." ## SEVEN MONTHS'

Extension of Rural School Term Is Assured, Says Superintendent Hamlett.

Frankfort, Ky., Oct. 28.—Seven months' school term in the rural districts this year is assured, in the opinion of Superintendent of Public Instruction Barksdale Hamlett, who said he has talked over the situation with State Treasurer Thomas Rhea and can talk confidently. There was a surplus of $280,000 to the credit of the school fund at the close of the last fiscal year. It will require about $500,000 to pay the teachers for the additional month, but the money will be forthcoming.

Superintendent Hamlett said Monday: "The lengthening of the rural school year from six to seven months, which we had hoped for next year, will be realized this year, I feel sure. We had a surplus of $280,000 in the fund June 30 last, the close of the fiscal year. We started out this year by making the October distribution of the school fund promptly, and this in spite of the fact that some of the States' revenues from the railroad franchise taxes are tied up in the court. I have talked over the situation with State Treasurer Rhea and am assured the money will be paid the schools promptly this year as the installments fall due and that the money for the seventh month will be in the treasury by the time it is needed.

"I have worked to this end ever since assuming office. We have husbanded our resources—in the first place to pay out a deficit we did not incur—and did not permit ourselves to make the mistake of unwarrantly increasing the per capita, which, of course, would have made a fine showing, but would not have resulted in the benefit that will be realized by extending the school year one month longer."

This is the first extension of the school year since the term of H. V. McChesney as State Superintendent, when it was extended from five to six months.

Chronic Dyspepsia.

The following unsolicited testimonial should certainly be sufficient to give hope and courage to persons afflicted with chronic dyspepsia: "I have been a chronic dyspeptic for years, and of all the medicine I have taken, Chamberlain's Tablets have done me more good than anything else," says W. G. Mattison, No. 7 Sherman St., Hornellsville, N. Y. For sale by Dale & Stubblefield.

Music Sinful Claims Pastor.

"The Use of Instruments of music in the Worship of the Church of Jesus Christ is Sin."

The Rev. C. M. Stubblefield, pastor of the Goebel Avenue Christian church says it is: the Rev. William Savage, pastor of the Tenth St. Christian church, says it isn't; so the two ministers of the Gospel will meet in a joint debate on the subject beginning tonight at the Goebel Avenue church.

The debate will continue for four nights, each speaker having one hour each every night to support his claim. The debate will begin promptly at 7:30 o'clock tonight. The Rev. Mr. Stubblefield leading off with a 30 minute speech. He will be answered by the Rev. Mr. Savage. The debate will continue for two hours each night.

There will be no judges. The decision will be left to the audience.

ences. No instruments of music are used in the Goebel Avenue church. It is the only church in Paducah where instruments are barred. The church was established by former members of the Tenth Street church because they did not believe in music in church worship.

It is expected that the Goebel Avenue church will be packed every night during the debate. Everybody is invited to attend. Paducah Sun.

Celebrates 68th Anniversary.

Mrs. J. C. Denham, of near Harris Grove, was 60 years of age last Tuesday and she will long remember the date. Her family, friends and neighbors to the number of several hundred gathered at her home to observe the day and one of the most elaborate dinners ever spread in this county was spread to about five hundred guests. It is stated to the Ledger that fully enough dinner was spread to serve one thousand people. Mrs. Denham is one of the county's most prominent Christian women and numbers her friends by the score. The dinner was a surprise to her but will long be remembered, and the Ledger joins her many friends in hoping that she will live many years and enjoy many similar occasions.

WATSON IS FREED ON TECHNICALITY

ARTICLES SENT THROUGH MAILS INCOMPLETE, SAYS JURIST.

THE INDICTMENT IS QUASHED

Government Not Entitled to Pick Out Paragraphs at Pleas, Declares Jurist—Reindictment Said to Be Impossible.

Augusta, Ga.,—Holding that the indictment charging Thomas E. Watson, editor-author and former presidential candidate, with sending obscene matter through the mails, was illegal, Federal Judge Rufus E. Foster ordered the case thrown out of court.

In sustaining the motion of the defense, asking that the indictment be quashed, Judge Foster brought the trial to an abrupt and unexpected close. The largest audience ever assembled in the federal courtroom here attended, and when the judge announced his ruling dismissing the charges against the Georgia editor the spectators broke into cheers. Judge Foster paid no attention to this demonstration, which quickly subsided.

It was solely upon the contention raised by Watson himself that under the federal statute the entire alleged obscene article, and not a portion of it, must be included in the indictment, that the court ordered the case dismissed. Extended argument on the motion had been made by S. G. McLenahan, Watson's principal attorney, and at the close of this the defendant asked permission to present what he described as "other phases" of the matter.

This being granted, Watson addressed the court briefly, laying stress upon his claim that the indictment should not select certain passages of the article written by him, but should include the entire matter. Mr. Watson, before leaving Augusta for his home at Thomas, Ga., expressed himself as satisfied with the outcome of the trial. He apparently was greatly pleased.

KING CONSTANTINE.

When Constantine is crowned king of Greece next May the old diadem of the Byzantine emperors will be used and he will be hailed as "Augustus."

ENGLAND KEEPS HANDS OFF

Differs From United States Toward Mexican Situation.

London.—In his discussion of Mexican affairs with the American ambassador, Walter H. Page, Sir Edward Grey declined to bind the British government to any particular policy after the elections in Mexico. In this respect, therefore, the policy of the British government differs from that of the United States.

The British attitude, according to Sir Edward Grey, is that matters should be left alone until after the elections and that future action should be based on their result.

Italy Will Participate. San Francisco.—The Italian government will participate in the Panama-Pacific exposition.

Want Race Segregation. New York.—A heated debate over the negro question in the South ended the deliberations of the house of deputies at the session of the Protestant Episcopal church, which is being held here.

A majority report by the committee on racial episcopate, with recommendations against the proposal to establish separate churches, dioceses, clergy and bishops for colored negroes, was presented. A minority report advocating separation of the churches was presented.

Sulzer Leaves Albany. Albany, N. Y.—William Sulzer departed from Albany in silence. "I have no regrets," were his last words. What will be the outcome of William Sulzer's race for the legislature was foremost in the minds of politicians about the capital.

Retreat Plan Ends. Washington.—All records show, as the house is concerned, went glimmering when Major Leader Underwood announced he had been unable to reach an agreement with the minority.

EUROPE IS WARNED NOT TO INTERFERE

MONROE DOCTRINE TO BE STRONGLY REAFFIRMED BY WILSON.

PROCLAMATION TO BE ISSUED

The Situation Between the United States and European Countries Is Said to Be Somewhat Strained—Steamer Morro Is Released.

Washington.—The United States government is preparing to notify the nations of the world generally that any interference in Mexican affairs will be regarded as unfriendly to this government.

President Wilson, Secretary Bryan and Counselor John Bassett Moore of the state department have been discussing the idea of what the proclamation to the world should express. It will be communicated to foreign governments everywhere in line with the policy established earlier of keeping other nations informed of every step taken in its handling of the Mexican problem.

The proclamation, or note, also will serve, it is understood, as an explicit definition of the policy of the United States toward the de facto authorities in Mexico, reiterating the principle that recognition only can be given to governments on this hemisphere founded on law and order.

Another incident that was regarded with significance in connection with the coming of Ambassador Gifford Pinchot to the state department was the French government, in sending a warship to Mexican waters, did not intend in any way to embarrass the United States.

There is a possibility that if the powers indicate further unwillingness to embarrass the United States, that this government may withdraw its promise, but some officials were of the opinion that sooner or later such a declaration, which they regarded as tantamount to a reaffirmation of the principles of the Monroe doctrine, would be required.

Administration officials generally maintained a severe reticence in connection with Mexican affairs. They admitted that an acute and delicate situation existed early in the day, when word was received that the American vessel, the Morro Castle, had been detained at Vera Cruz. It was not revealed what orders were in preparation, but there was a noticeable relief in official circles when cablegrams announced the release of the ship.

MINE EXPLOSION ENTOMBS 266 MEN

CAUSE OF ACCIDENT NEAR DAWSON, N. M., NOT KNOWN.

14 MINERS ARE RESCUED

Rescuers Are Hopeful of Saving Those Entombed—Government Rescue Cars Being Rushed to Scene of Accident.

Denver, Colo.—Between 230 and 280 miners were entombed by an explosion in Mine No. 2 of the Sag Canon Fuel Company at Dawson, N. M. The entombed men included General Superintendent Frank McDermott of the mine and several other American miners. The cause of the explosion is unknown.

Meager advices received were that only fourteen miners had been taken alive from the upper level. These reports stated that most of the day shift were entombed below the second level, where the shaft was blocked with debris resulting from the explosion.

Accounts from Dawson and Raton were uncertain as to the possibility of rescuing any of the men alive, while a statement from El Paso, Texas, expressed hope that most of the entombed men would be found alive. This belief was based on the fact that the workings of No. 2 mine are connected by a tunnel with mine No. 5, while an air shaft is said to furnish another means of exit.

Immediate relief work was undertaken by men from the neighboring mines. Appeals for aid started scores of experienced miners from Trinidad and the surrounding coal camps.

J. C. Roberts, superintendent of federal mine rescue stations in the Rocky mountain division, began immediate preparations to leave for Dawson with the rescue car. He also telegraphed the burg, Kas., and Rocky Springs, Wyo., for the rescue cars stationed at those points. Fire has not broken out, though smoke was seen issuing from the second level of the shaft. It was believed by rescuers that the smoke came from the explosion and not from fire.

Immediately after the explosion all the shifts were called to the work of rescue, and those miners who were employed in other shafts were put to work drilling through the debris, which was said to have blocked the mine below the second level.

The United States rescue car stationed at Trinidad was summoned and every available man in Dawson is aiding in the attempt to reach the entombed miners.

Rescuers worked heroically to supply air to the men. Reports from the mine did not state at which level the explosion occurred, but simply that the mine shaft was blocked from the second level. The mine property is owned by the Phelps-Dodge Company of New York.

Those under indictment include a former mayor, a former city treasurer, two former comptrollers, two former heads of city departments, 12 former aldermen and the present chief of detectives.

SEVEN FIREMEN DIE IN MILWAUKEE FIRE

FOUR OTHERS MISSING, THOUGHT BURIED UNDER FALLEN WALL.

PRIEST PROVES SELF HERO

Goes Into Building to Administer Absolution to Men Imprisoned Under Debris—Loss of Property Said to Be $500,000.

Milwaukee, Wis.—Six firemen were killed and many others seriously injured in a fire which destroyed the local main store of the Goodyear Rubber Company. Six bodies have been recovered and at least three others were known to be under a fallen wall in an alley.

Known dead: CHARLES FENSKE, truck No. 4; MICHAEL McGUIRE, truck No. 4; BERNARD ZANOWSKI, engine No. 25; MAX FLETCHER, driver, chemical No. 2; WILLIAM GRAF, engine No. 4; WILLIAM FREIBAG, engine No. 29 (fireboat).

The missing: Three members of truck company No. 4; Charles C. Newton, lieutenant insurance patrol; Probably fatally injured: Tony Barrow, truck No. 2, skull fractured, leg broken; Gust Paget, engine No. 10, fractured skull.

The fire was one of the most spectacular of years, occurring in the very heart of the downtown district. Explosions which followed just as a third alarm had brought most of the fire fighting force of the city to the scene wrecked the burning building, scattering fire to buildings in an entire city block and buried 20 men in debris, but a rush of rescuers saved many of the buried men from death.

The estimates of the loss range up to half a million dollars. A notable instance of heroism was that of Father Murphy of St. John's Cathedral, who crept into the ruins and gave absolution to the dying firemen at the risk of his own life.

In the rear in an alley, a more pitiful scene was enacted. Here the suddenness of the dynamic explosion raised the wall for the fractional part of a second and then it crumbled up in a smoking heap of wood and bricks. Beneath it were carried six firemen, who, backed up against the rear building, were directing a stream of water on the blazing structure. Silently and without being able to make an outcry, they were buried in a living death.

At their elbows their fellowworkers stood helpless. Several of them were struck by flying debris and knocked unconscious. The shock of the explosion was followed by a veritable shower of splintered glass.

MEXICAN ELECTIONS FARCE

Huerta Will Likely Remain President Ad Interim.

Mexico City.—The Mexican elections have been an absolute farce. Hardly any votes have been cast, and in some precincts there was not a single vote cast. The expectation is that, in the absence of enough votes to make an election, Gen. Huerta will remain in the presidential chair ad interim, or until he deems it proper to call for new elections.

As a whole, there was little disturbance reported throughout the country after the opening of the polls. A few patrols were on the streets, but neither police nor troops had any but their usual duties to perform. No official announcement was made, but it was unofficially estimated, judging from the results in the capital, where it was expected the vote would be up to the average, that less than 10,000 of the 80,000 eligible voters in the republic went to the polls. It would be no surprise if congress, the members of which also were voted for, declared the elections void when that body is organized and revises the returns. The leaders of the Catholic party claimed a long lead, although they were unable to estimate the number of votes polled for their candidates—Frederico Gamboa and Gen. Rascón. If this claim is correct, it is generally thought that Gen. Felix Diaz and Senor Reguena ran second.

Snowstorm in Oklahoma.

Oklahoma City, Okla.—Snow fell throughout Oklahoma, ranging from three inches at Bartlesville, one inch in the Panhandle country, to a slight flurry in the southeast portion of the state. A bitter north wind accompanied the snow. Temperatures are reported near freezing.

Kaiser Visits Austria.

Vienna.—Emperor William of Germany arrived here on a visit to Emperor Francis Joseph, who warmly welcomed him at the station.

Money Won't Free Thaw.

Albany, N. Y.—The determination that the lavish and ingenious use of the Thaw millions shall not triumph over justice, is declared by Attorney General Carmody to be the sole reason for the state in having an indictment returned against Harry K. Thaw in New York county.

John C. Underwood Dies.

New York.—John C. Underwood, 77 years old, former lieutenant governor of Kentucky, died at the Habemann hospital of hardening of the arteries.

ELECTRIC "SPANKER" MAKES BOYS BEHAVE

No Unruly Pupils Since Reputation of the "Persuader" Became Generally Known.

Huntington, W. Va.—Two small schools in this city where discipline has always been a matter of the instructors' strength of arm, have been transformed by means of an electric "spanker" into institutions of learning with the best average deportment of all the schools in the city, according to Superintendent Wilson, M. Foulke. Both schools known for years as unruly, had so exhausted the patience of the school board as to force that Delivers Five Sharp Blows a Second.

A day or so after the school season opened a carpenter and an electrician appeared at one of the schools and began the installation of a "spanker" in a small ante room where the children had access at all times. When the school sessions were not on, the "spanker" gradually assumed shape, and the electric connections were made, the unruly pupils began to ask question and finally they were given a demonstration of its ability to administer punishment. Working on the same system as an electric vibratory massage machine the "spanker" delivers about five sharp blows a second. After several of the boys had allowed themselves to be used as subjects for a test of the spanker they had some stories to tell of its punishing powers.

Immediately the spanker was completed in one school, it was installed in the other institution where rules were rarely obeyed. The reputation of the machine, however, had gone before it and no one cared to test its corrective powers. According to Superintendent Foulke, since the "persuaders" have been installed and their abilities become known, not one unruly pupil can be found in either school, and better still, the average of both schools for the first school month will be the highest of all the schools in the city, something hitherto unheard of.

HE TORE DOWN TOMBSTONES

Insane man, Denied Death and Resurrection, Tears Down Scores of Gravestones.

Shreveport, La.—"I wanted to see if the Saviour was a man of his word," was the only explanation Abraham Walchansky gave the police for wrecking Oakland cemetery.

Oakland contains the bodies of many of the leading families of Shreveport and more than twenty graves were torn up and tombstones of many others overturned.

Walchansky is a young man of good family. Recently he is said to have manifested symptoms of being unbalanced mentally. Previous to that he had attracted attention by his peculiar religious beliefs.

One morning he visited the cemetery and laid himself at full length in a grave, expecting, he explained, to die peacefully and have the Saviour resurrect him.

Death did not arrive as per expectations, and in a fit of rage Walchansky rose and began his work of destruction.

He tore down headstones, and when the police arrived they found a score of these scattered over the walks and in the pathways.

Walchansky was released from the parish prison after having telephoned a merchant that he intended to kill him. The authorities gathered him in to time to prevent bloodshed.

HER STATEMENTS DESERVE NOTICE

Mrs. Walls Makes Public Some Interesting Facts Which Should Interest All Women.

Leimart, Tenn.—Mrs. Martha Walls, of this town, makes the following statements for publication: "I feel it my duty to tell you what your medicine, Cardui, the woman's tonic, has done for me.

For four (4) years I suffered terribly with womanly troubles, and I found no relief in different medicines which I took. Finally, I began to take Cardui, the woman's tonic, and after taking six bottles I am completely cured. I feel like a different person altogether. All the pains are gone, and I am in better health than I have been in for four years. Have gained a great deal in weight.

I still take Cardui as a tonic. My husband, as well as myself, cannot praise it too highly.

I hope this letter will induce other poor, suffering women to try Cardui, for it is the best medicine in the world for women."

If you suffer from any of the numerous ailments so common to all women, why not take this lady's advice, and try Cardui? It has helped her, as well as a million other women in the past half century. It should help you, do the same for you? We feel sure it will.

Reading of Mrs. Walls' helpful experience should encourage you to try what this medicine will do for you. Get a bottle of Cardui from your druggist today. You won't regret it. M. R. ### Unconquerable Cat.

There is just one animal man has never conquered, never can conquer. Centuries ago every other beast became the slave of man or else fled far from human habitation. One and only one refused to flee or to submit. This only exception to a world of servants and of scared enemies is the domestic cat. When some animals came man's slaves and others, fled from him, the cat did neither. It simply took all the favors and advantages man had to offer, and refused to do one lick of work in exchange. Beat a dog and he will fawn on you. Beat a cat and it will attack you and then desert you. You can't conquer the cat. You can't make it work.

DIZZY, HEADACHY, SICK, "CASCARETS"

Gently cleanse your liver and sluggish bowels while you sleep.

Get a 10-cent box.

Sick headache, biliousness, dizziness, coated tongue, foul taste and foul breath—always trace them to torpid liver; delayed, fermenting food in the bowels or sour, fatty stomach. Poisonous matter clogged in the intestines, instead of being cast out of the system is re-absorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue it causes congestion and that dull, throbbing, sickening headache.

Cascarets immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret tonight will surely straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist means your liver clear, stomach sweet and your liver and bowels regular for months. Adv.

GRANDMA USED SAGE TEA TO DARKEN HER GRAY HAIR

She Made Up a Mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to Bring Back Color, Gloss, Thickness.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is messy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe for about 50 cents.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell if you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy. ## Too Many Subjects in Public Schools who believe that a child develops judgment and initiative by coming into contact with many subjects, that in this way he acquires adaptability, a requisite very necessary to the success of an American.

The second group of educators maintain that after eight or ten years in our public schools a pupil should have the mental habits of accuracy, thoroughness and concentration, plus a mastery of certain tools which he can use with absolute ease. The tools are the three R's. These educators say the curriculum must, of course, make some provision for the development of judgment and initiative, but it must also provide that the very initiative shall be supported by power to do well certain elementary things.

First, we have a right to expect children to write easily and legibly, and yet how often they write a clumsy or slovenly hand. Second, the simplest processes of arithmetic should have become absolutely mechanically accurate, so that when a child has to add the grocer's bill or to estimate the cost of a carpet he may not complicate the difficulty by errors in the simple fundamental processes of addition or multiplication. Third, the pupils should have the power to read and that means much. It means the power to get ideas from the printed page and to visualize the events or the scene one is reading about; in short, it means to read in such a way that a lively mental reaction occurs.

If we attempt to teach a little French before the child can read ordinary English intelligently, a little physics before he knows any geography, and then add a little botany and a little music, a little cooking, a little dressmaking, a little drawing, and a little American history, should we be surprised that our young people lack accuracy and concentration? With all the many demands made upon their attention outside of school, in the way of amusements, music lessons, athletic associations and home duties, plus the demands of many subjects in the school program, it is not strange that boys and girls are restless and superficial.

Our schools reflect the spirit of the times—they do not lead it. In Germany, where thoroughness is admitted above initiative, where a child usually adopts the work of his father, the emphasis of the schools is laid upon habits of thoroughness and accuracy, which can only be obtained by much drill. Some critics of the American public schools deplore the seeming inferiority of power in the boy of fourteen, compared with that of the German boy of the same age. But we must remember that many influences in America are educating the child "to play the game of bluff," to be superficial and restless, and that the schools cannot in justice be held responsible for all these undesirable qualities.

If a slight familiarity with many subjects does develop the much-desired quality of good judgment, then we should be willing to pay the price of the defects of this excellence. If the tree has borne the fruit for which the public schools have been working and the boys of today show better judgment than the boys of twenty or thirty years ago, when the curriculum was simpler, then the schools are not attempting to teach too many subjects.

Why Do Young Women Laugh So Easily?

By H. O. WILLIAMS, Yankton, S. D.

It has been a matter of wonder with me for some time that young women are easily moved to mirth (and some to hysteria) by the feeble witticisms of the average young man. Very lately a concrete case came under my observation.

I frequent the society of young women very little, but the other evening a friend of mine persuaded me to offer myself up as the sacrificial complement of a party of four. He provided the time, the place and the girls.

During the course of the evening he continually unloaded a stream of asinine and obvious puns, at which the young woman he accompanied shook with uncontrollable laughter. On recovering from these sustained attacks, if I had not caught the scintillating remark, she would lean over and repeat it for my especial benefit.

At first I greeted these repetitions with a look of pained surprise, but as the evening wore away I steeled myself and at her later retellings of the hilariously funny observations I mustered up a respectable amount of appreciation. I laughed!

I have always considered it an unmanly thing to construct jokes in the presence of women, having an idea that they feel bound to laugh out of politeness and that it is cruel and unnatural to ask them to make the sacrifice.

On the evening I speak of I violated my principles and allowed my wit to gambol, with the result that she laughed at most of my jests. Some were either too deep or not funny at all. Sharp twinges of remorse have racked me ever since for my conduct.

Yet, why do they laugh? Against the young lady in this particular instance I would be extremely reluctant to make any complaint whatsoever, for in addition to being a charming dancer and also wonderfully easy to look at, she has a rosebud mouth. I simply ask to know.

Low Cost of Living in Regular Army

By William H. Macchal, Chicago

The United States allows 21.53 cents a day to each soldier in the army for food. Out of this amount the soldiers live well and save enough money to buy many extras. Many persons who are constantly complaining about the high cost of living should study the system in vogue in the United States army.

The American soldier lives in many respects better than the average laboring man. He is allowed butter, jam and milk. The government gives him the best beef that can be purchased, and he gets good, fresh vegetables. This all comes out of the 21.53 cents a day. On holidays soldiers are allowed either chicken or turkey.

The American soldier does not find fault with the food he receives, but what he does want is better cooking. There are schools for army cooks in this country. Each year a large number of soldiers are given instruction. How to handle the government rations, vary the bill of fare and at the same time make a saving on the food allowance is one of the arts that is taught the army cooks.

The war department publishes a cook book that is supplied each company of soldiers in the service. The book contains many useful recipes that have been collected from old army cooks. Nothing outside of the army ration is used in the recipes.

It would be a good idea for the government to issue these cook books to the general public, for they would greatly help the average housewife in cutting down her expenses.

COUNT ON SUBSIDIES

Demoralizing Effect of Protection on Senators.

Men High in Government Councils Seem to Think They Have a Right to Fatten on the Rest of the Country.

Tariff debate in the senate proved that there are still many senators who think it right and proper to vote themselves subsidies out of the pockets of American consumers. Senator Warren of Wyoming counts his sheep by the hundred thousand, if not by the million. He has been called the "greatest shepherd since Abraham." Senator Lippitt of Rhode Island is one of the biggest cotton manufacturers of New England. A tariff on wool is a direct subsidy to Warren, a duty on cotton goods is a grant in aid to Lippitt. One would think that the most elementary sense of delicacy would make these men decline to vote on a matter touching their own interest so closely.

But even an elementary sense of delicacy is not common in official champions of the Aldrich tariff. Senator Warren worked and voted for the duty on wool. Senator Lippitt put up a strenuous fight against reducing the tariff on cotton goods. These two men, both millionaires, did not hesitate to vote themselves a tax on the clothing of every human being in the United States. Nor did they stand alone. Probably half the senators who rallied to the support of the Aldrich tariff derive direct financial benefit from that piece of trust legislation.

Who Did It?

Who stole, surreptitiously and maliciously, blotted the fair page whereon Prof. Charles McCarthy, of the University of Chicago, wrote the anti-trust plank of the Bull Moose platform? Prof. McCarthy says it was a good plank, which resulted from a night-long conference between himself, Herbert Knox Smith and George Record. It had been in it. It was the La Follette-Brandeis proposition done over into the best English that the University of Chicago could make. The bureau of corporations had on hand, but after it had been placed in the platform and sent to the telegraph office, somebody crossed it out.

Who did it? Who was the dentist that pulled the large and molars and made the anti-trust plank of the Bull Moose party as a new-born baby?

According to the story as told in Chicago, one O. K. Davis was the man who told the telegraph company to suppress it. But Mr. Davis was secretary of the Bull Moose convention and as such must have carried out the orders of the convention. This raises a query as to who was the convention. There are those who maintain that the convention was George W. Perkins. Others think Col. Roosevelt was the convention and still others take a middle course and think it was both of them. Since one is chairman of the board of the Harvester company and the other a man who has a constitutional objection to following any rules not of his own making, there is ground for suspicion that if Prof. McCarthy wants to know what became of his plank he had better ask them about it.

Increased Cost of Living.

It will be important for the Democratic leaders to make a careful analysis of the situation and enlighten the country upon true conditions, otherwise the relief to be had through tariff reduction will be very disappointing to the country. The cost of living is rising throughout the world. This is especially true of foodstuffs. It is also true that the tendency of wages through the war has been upward. With the cost of production gradually rising, the cost of living can not be very much reduced until there is a better adjustment of industry.

In the United States the flow of population from the farms to the cities is having a profound effect in an economic sense. There are too many people buying food and a wholly inadequate number producing it.

Means to Do His Duty.

Evidently the president has no notion of drifting through his term of office with the minimum of exertion, leaving on congress all the responsibility for inaction. Before the tariff bill had got through one branch of congress his plans for a banking and currency bill were well advanced. While the currency bill was sticking in the senate he began planning a campaign against the trusts. He takes his election seriously, not as a tribute to his individuality, nor as a mere piece of personal good luck, but as a call from the country to accomplish certain things. They will be accomplished before March 4, 1917.

Safe in Democratic Hands.

Senator La Follette did all one man could to write his own views into the new tariff law. He failed, as it was foreordained he should. The country had committed the work of writing the tariff to the Democratic party, and it was just and proper that Democratic ideas should control the first honest revision attempted in half a century. When the bill came up for final passage, La Follette voted for it, saying emphatically that it was better than the Aldrich abomination which it superseded.

ENGLAND'S NOTED OLD BANK

Many Curiosities Are Owned by "The Old Lady of Threadneedle Street."

London.—The greatest bank in the world—the Bank of England—is known as the "Old Lady of Threadneedle street." The bank has issued millions of pounds in notes, and if each could speak what tales of history would be told. For instance, there is preserved in the bank of England library a £5 note with these words written upon it: "If this note gets to the hands of John Dear of Longhill, near Carlisle, his brother Andrew is a prisoner in Algiers." This notification was copied into a Carlisle newspaper.

World's Most Famous Bank.

paper, and John Dear thus became aware of the whereabouts of his long lost brother.

Among other curiosities in the bank library there is a bank note dated "18th Xber, 1699," for £555. This is the oldest bank note known to be in existence. In appearance and design it is very similar to the present-day notes. Another interesting note is one for £1,000 which Lord Copehorne paid as a fine, imposed upon him for his erroneously supposed connection with a fraud for raising the public mind to robbery to protect myself from murder, in the hope that I shall live to bring the delinquents to justice. Cochrane. Grated chamber. King's Bench prison, 3 July, 1815.

The greatest amount for which a bank of England note has been issued is £1,000,000. There are only four of these million pounds notes in existence. One is preserved in the library of the bank, another in the possession of the Rothschild family, a third is owned by Messrs. Gouss, the famous bankers, and the fourth is in the hands of the descendants of Samuel Rogers, the poet.

The printing is done on the bank premises. "The notes are printed in pairs and come off the machines pressed and dried. Stock notes of different values from £5 to £1,000 are kept in iron safes in one large room and the average value of the stock is between £25,000,000 and £30,000,000. Over 80,000 notes of various values are paid into the bank every day. On their return the notes are sorted, first into their respective values, then according to their dates, and finally into their numerical order. Every note has a place of its own in the bank registers, and immediately the notes are sorted their return is registered. Special examining clerks devote their attention to detecting forgeries. Of late years there have not been many cases of forged notes, but during the eighteenth and early part of the nineteenth centuries the banks suffered severe losses from counterfeit notes. The story of the first recorded forgery forms a unique chapter in the book of romance. A certain linen draper named Vaughan was passionately in love with a fair maiden whose father was a man of considerable wealth. The love-sick swain knew that the quickest way to win the girl was to give some proof that he was a man of means. To this end he employed several men to engrave for him a Bank of England note for £20. When twelve of the notes had been worked off he presented them to his lady fair. Unluckily the imposture was soon discovered and poor Vaughan was hanged.

Thrilling Rescue of Boy

Engineer Picks Lad Up as Locomotive Rushes Toward Him on High Trestle.

Clarksburg, W. Va.—Hubert L. McHenry, an engineer on the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, saved the life of William Allen, five years old, whom he discovered in the middle of a 66-foot trestle near this city. As soon as the engineer saw the boy he climbed over the coal-pit of the locomotive and by hanging on the rear end of the tender picked up young Allen in one arm. The boy remained cool when he saw his danger and held up his arms to McHenry as the locomotive bore down upon him.

POLITICS IN AUSTRIA

After Much Toil a New Party Is Formed in Dual Empire.

Count Julius Andrássy Has Succeeded in Forming a Formidable Political Group in Hungary Called the Constitutional Party.

Vienna.—After months of toil, Count Julius Andrássy, the able son of a great father, has succeeded in forming a new and formidable political party in Hungary, the so-called Constitutional party. It starts with a strength of 54 in the Hungarian parliament. There are also political leaders of experience and capacity within its ranks, outside of its illustrious founder. But there are, nevertheless, some peculiar features about this new organization. Political life in Hungary runs in two main currents; represented by the 46ers and the 48ers, so-called.

The first-named base their convictions and their action on the constitutional compromise effected with the emperor (as their king) and with Austria proper in 1867, giving Hungary virtual autonomy and independence save in a few stipulated points. The 48ers, on the other hand, otherwise known as the Kossuthers, remain irreconcilable and demand a republic and complete independence. At present and for many years past the 48ers are in the minority.

Now the platform of Count Andrássy's new party has just been published, and in all but non-essential points it is identical with the declared principles of the party now in power, at whose head stands the Hungarian premier, Count Stephan Tisza, and who is in great favor with the emperor and is doing excellent work for his country.

The new party, it is true, has taken some paragraphs from the radicals, the 48ers, such as a general grant of the franchise and a thorough reform in the election laws, and in this respect Count Stephan Tisza does not go so far. But in the main Andrássy's aims seem to be the same, notably in foreign politics, in tax and educational questions and in the handling of the nationality problems in Hungary, and the chief ambition of Andrássy and his followers appears to be rather of a personal nature, i. e., the ousting from power of the present government and the winning of such power for themselves. But inasmuch as this new movement practically means a split in the dominant party, it might be quite possible that the radicals, the 48ers, would eventually be the winners in this game and enter parliament with long columns, where in the majority Count Tisza, however, who is a very shrewd and foresees this dilemma, will shortly confer with the emperor on this very point, and try to head off his opponents.

It will be seen from the foregoing that the bubonic plague—first imported from the Balkan battlefields—will have been completely stamped out in Austria-Hungary, and this despite the excellent sanitary measures taken by the authorities here. As a matter of fact, the plague spreads more and more. In the western half of the empire, in Austria proper, there have so far been only isolated cases reported, as in Vienna and in Marienbad, where by dint of stringent measures further infection appears to have been prevented. But in the other half, in Hungary and its dependencies, these have not been so successful, although there, too, severe precautions are being taken.

Robin on a Jag.

Fort Collins, Col.—A robin with a joyful jag, making a frantic attempt to light-up top of a fence post, was discovered by Mrs. A. J. Baker of West Mountain avenue. The bird was so drunk it was evidently seeing several posts and tried to light on a post that wasn't there. It finally crawled off under a tree, where it stood with one eye shut until the jag wore off. A can of cherries which had "worked" and which had been dumped in the backyard was responsible for the jag.

Surgeon General Blue, of the United States Army, says there is great danger in the slit skirt. Of course there is. There is always from 120 to 150 pounds of danger in each one of 'em. After 150 pounds is reached, she's too fat to be dangerous.—Glasgow Times.

The Ledger cannot agree with Surgeon General Blue or friend Richardson either. The 120 to 150 pounds partly concealed in a slit skirt is very seldom a dangerous package. A wink or a nod is generally all that is necessary to subdue it. Try and see.

If it is not out of place, we desire to remind those women who have adopted the fad of printing monkey on their stockings near their knees, then displaying the exhibit through the refining medium of the slit skirt, that the trick will not divert any sane man's mind from the suspicion that the inside of the sock is decorated by pretty much the same kind of animal.—Lexington Herald.

Why not leave off the paint-socks and slit the skirts just a little higher. Same effect.

It is possible that this slit skirt, no skirt, proposition will be thoroughly settled in his mind.

and the following contribution took second prize: "The thing for which I am most thankful in all the world is my home. I have had it for two years, but it took me forty years to get it."

"I am a trained nurse—was a homeless child, boarded out on farms until I was eighteen; then I trained for a nurse. I dreamed and planned for a home, but I never expected to get one. Then I took care of old Mrs. McPherson for a year, and when she died she left me two thousand dollars. God bless her!" "I came to Seattle, bought a half acre for five hundred dollars, and built a bungalow for fifteen hundred more. It has five rooms, a living room with a fireplace, a dining room, two bedrooms, and a bathroom. The porch is covered with honeysuckle and pink ramblers. I rented it for a year while I nursed, until I had saved enough to go to housekeeping."

But I wanted something more than furniture, and I got it. I adopted two boys, one ten, and one two. They call me "Mother." Then the boys adopted a dog and a homeless cat. John, the oldest one, has ten hens and two roosters; he sells me his eggs. He has a paper route out in our neighborhood, and sometimes he works in gardens. He has twenty-five dollars in the bank. He is so proud of our home, I took him out of an orphan asylum.

"Baby Ned's mother committed suicide because his father had run away with another woman. The police were coming for him when I took him home. He was a dear baby. When the boys came I got Maggie to live with us, she has had trouble and had a baby, but it died. She is not very strong but she can do our work and loves the boys and the garden."

"We have a fine garden with all the vegetables we can eat, and lots of old-fashioned flowers. We have hollyhocks that grow ten feet high out here, bushels of roses, sweet peas, foxgloves, lilies, stocks, and lots of other things."

"When I come home at night and see the smoke coming of my chimney and my boys waiting for me at the gate, I tell you I am pretty thankful."

All you who have torpid liver, weak digestion or constipated bowels look out for chills. The germ is here and the air is full of disease germs. The best remedy is to get your liver in good order and purify the blood. Herbine does this. It answers the purpose completely. Price Sold by Dale & Stubblefield.

TAX LAWS NEEDED

Constitutional Amendment
To Be Voted On In November

EQUITABLE SYSTEM DEMANDED

Last General Assembly Passed an Amendment to the State Constitution Relating to Revenue and Taxation.

Frankfort, Ky. (Special).—The last General Assembly in Kentucky passed an amendment to the State Constitution relating to revenue and taxation. It is a scheme of abolishing the antiquated general property tax and substituting a more flexible system known to be more equitable and productive of greater revenue in other states.

The tax commission appointed under another act at the same session made a thorough investigation and reported unanimously in condemnation of the present law and strongly urged the adoption of the amendment by the voters at the November election.

It is a significant fact that since the adoption of the present Constitution in 1892, which provided that "taxes should be uniform on all property," a large volume of personal property has disappeared from the assessors' rolls for the simple reason that such property was taxed out of existence or at least out of sight.

The owner of a bond, for instance, who received 4% interest, and was called upon to pay in some instances 2 1/2% or more in taxes either sold his bond or failed to return it for taxation and cash notes, bonds, stocks in foreign corporations and such like investments are apparently no longer owned by Kentuckians.

Burden of Taxes Transferred.—This has had a tendency to transfer the burden of taxation to real estate and other property in sight and is not only unequal but unjust.

The real estate owner has sought to diminish its value and in order to protect himself transfers of property for one dollar and other valuable considerations has demoralized the true values and leaves the assessor no guide to follow.

Our citizens have unblushingly omitted such items in their returns for assessment and have felt justified in doing so.

The finances of the state have fallen into confusion and revenue agents and arbitrary boards of so-called "Equalization" have failed to discover such property and secure their assessment.

Under the present law every man is practically his own assessor and the courts have sustained the practice, as the law permits no other course.

General Property Tax Desirable.—Other states have long ago recognized the inefficiency of the "General Property Tax" and in these states we see enterprise and other wealth accumulating, while the tendency in Kentucky has been to hide our light and incidentally our valuables for fear of the tax collector's discovery.

Our progress has been retarded. Our production diminished and aside from the land owners and some merchants we do not seem to have much wealth left in the state.

Money like water flows along the lines of least resistance, and if we throw up a dam, however slight, it will be diverted.

Such a trifling obstacle as taxes, if unequally distributed, may prove to be a barrier of insurmountable proportions, however insignificant it may seem from a casual view.

No one desires willingly to become a law breaker, a deceiver or an evader, and yet he must be all of these if he follows the old maxim, "When in Rome you must do as the Romans do." In this regard, the look of the assessors' books and see where men who are known to be wealthy get off by paying little or no taxes on personal property assessed by themselves.

Do self respecting men care to follow this example?

A shrewd business man may have large investments in bonds and fail to return them for taxation by many well known practices of evasion. He receives the full return on his investment.

A widow or orphan may be left bonds and the estate may have to be settled in court. The revenue agent finds it out and sues for omitted assessments of former years and the assessor puts them on the tax list. The widow and orphan are compelled to pay two or three per cent in taxes and live on the remainder.

Is such a system fair? Taxes, in a free self-governed country, should be the least matter to worry about and yet they can be made so unfair and irksome they drive people away and keep others from coming in. This is happening all the time in Kentucky.

We have a chance to remedy this evil and if disregarded now we will have to wait another five years before it presents itself again.

It is our clear duty to vote for this constitutional amendment at the November election and every citizen in the state should vote himself and urge his neighbor to do the same. If Kentucky is ever to be dragged out of its lassitude and kept in the front rank of progress, prosperity and peace.

SYNOPSIS.

John Rawn is born in Texas. Early in life he shows signs of misanthropy and morbidness. He marries Laura Johnson. He is a clerk in a St. Louis railway office when his daughter Grace is born. Years later he hears Grace's lover, a young engineer named Charles Halsey, speak of a scheme to utilize the last current of electricity.

"Charles," said John Rawn one evening, "I have been thinking over some scientific problems."

"In my belief," went on Rawn, "I am upon the eve of a great success, Charles."

"What sort of success, Mr. Rawn?" inquired Halsey.

Rawn smiled largely. "You will hardly credit me when I tell you, at least at first, that I have formed a power company—a concern for the cheap generation and general transmission of power. In the course of a few months we'll proceed in the manufacture of electrical transmitters and receivers for what I call the lost current of electricity."

Halsey stood cold for a moment, and looked at him in amazement.

"You don't mean to say—why, that's precisely what I've been thinking of for so long."

"I don't doubt many have been thinking of it," rejoined Rawn. "It had to come. These things seem to happen in cycles."

"Moreover, I've got the company formed."

"You, Mr. Rawn? How did you manage that?" inquired Halsey.

"A great many haven't known about a great many things," said Rawn, walking up and down, his hands in his pockets, his air gloomily dignified.

"Is it a big company?" queried Halsey.

"Twenty-five million dollars," answered John Rawn calmly.

"We are going to dam the Mississippi river, a couple of hundred miles above here at the ledges. For the time, that will be our central power plant. We will contract for a million and a half dollars' worth of power each year in St. Louis alone. That comes down by regular wire transmission. That is nothing, it's only a drop in the bucket. Our big killing is going to be with the other scheme—the second current—the same idea you've been trifling with. We'll go east with that."

Young Halsey's little capital of five hundred dollars was as important as young Halsey's original scheme. The latter Mr. Rawn had also appropriated.

So now these two brought very considerable bundles of copper wire and other things, and made several machines of it, and the other things, and tried divers experiments. In all this work young Halsey's manual skill and technical training continually was in quest. John Rawn for the most part standing by and freewheeling heavily, watching Jacob labor for the earning of Rachel; for Halsey knew this surrender of his idea was the price of Grace. Halsey had little hope of ultimate success in his appliances. Not so Rawn. He had something akin to a feeling of certainty.

Differing thus—yet who shall say they were not partners, after all, since all these things were true regarding them—they at last emerged from the wilderness in Kelly Row, after many long weeks. They carried into the front room of the Rawn house in Kelly Row a small machine which presently was to do large things. This novel and mysterious little machine, with a glass jar underneath, many coils and wheels within, and an odd toothed wheel of little upreaching metal fingers, had been produced only at great cost, great sacrifice. It had seemed wholly right and reasonable that all of young Halsey's five hundred dollars should disappear little by little, and it had done so, long ago. It seemed proper that the small savings which Grace had deposited in a tin baking-powder can—for she was like her mother, part ground-squirrel, and secretive—should also disappear little by little, and they also had gone. In some ways, only the women knew how they all had had enough to eat, so far as that meant actually necessary food; but the entire Rawn family were a pauper and haggard, as well as a worried and anxious quartette, when finally they gathered about the little machine out of the wilderness. Their play was on one card and the card was turned. What was it?

In the most commonplace way in the world, and quite as though he had always done this very thing, Mr. Henry Warfield Standley, president of the St. & D. A. Railway Co., warned in advance by Mr. Rawn's telephone, came to the door himself. Presently the three, Rawn, Halsey and the president of the company for which both so long had worked, sat at the long glass-covered table, where lay many papers. The president pushed a button and ordered the attendance of Mr. Theodore Sims, like man, the general traffic manager; so that now they made four in company.

Very little was said, but after a time young Halsey nervously removed the newspaper from his little machine, and displayed it uncovered on the table, a ribbed and coiled and toothed little model, showing file marks here and there, and resembling nothing in particular in the world. Young Halsey, tacitly elected spokesman by Rawn, cleared his throat as he addressed the president of the road, for whom he still felt naught but awe.

"We have put our receiver in tune with the dynamo in the basement of this building, Mr. Standley," began he, finally.

"And now you can see right here, on the table before you, about all the rest of it that we have. It isn't at all a matter of anything at all. There is no wired connection of any sort whatever. Now if we can run that electric fan over there with 'juice' that we can take right out of the air—just the second current which we take out of the motor in the basement—just as well as the primary current wired to the fan will run it, why, then, it looks to me as though our receiver here ought to be accepted as a working device."

The room was silent now. They sat looking at him. He resumed: "Besides, this receiver is more powerful than you think. I suppose I could burst that fan wide open with it, by just wiring the two, after disconnecting the original wiring of the fan to the house dynamo."

Halsey spoke very calmly, yet the hands of the president of the road, resting on the edge of the table, trembled slightly. The fighting red had disappeared from the face of the G. T. M. He was bluish gray, as though deathly ill. He was, however, the first to recover. "Well, why don't you burst it, then?" he exclaimed savagely, mopping at his forehead.

Every man present sprang back from the little instrument on the table. There came a glowing increasing purr of the motor, a series of intense blue sparks showing at the toothed points of reception. The blades of the fan began to revolve faster and faster; so fast that at length both eye and ear ceased to record their doings. Then, after eight and sound had failed to serve, there came a crash!

There was no fan on the shelf where it had stood. Fragments of metal were buried in the woodwork, in the wall. John Rawn wiped the blood from a cut on his cheek. No one said anything. It was quite common, place, after all.

"You wished to see what it would do," said Halsey grimly. "The power seems to be there. Any time you like, any amount you like. And you saw it. It didn't come in here, by wire, it was only transmitted from the receiver, not to it. The fan is broken, but the receiver is just the way we left it. Well, it looks as though we had settled a few questions, doesn't it?"

Standley turned an averted eye upon John Rawn. "Mr. Rawn," said he, "referring to the tenor of our earlier conversation, I desire to say that we are not in the habit of giving the lion's share to anybody."

"Suit yourself," said John Rawn, smiling.

"But in this case, as I said to you at first, there's so much in this that there's nothing at all that there's no use splitting hairs over it. It's received rapidly from the position he coveted but saw he could not hold."

"We ought to begin work at once. Mr. Rawn, do you happen to have any present need for any money—personally?"

"No," answered John Rawn calmly. "I am in no need of funds. When the organization is completed, and I begin my work as president of the power company, I shall be glad to go on the payroll, of course. I should add now that I expect Mr. Halsey to be my general manager in the mechanical department."

"In regard to salaries," said the president, hesitating, "we might roughly sketch out something—"

"My own salary will be a hundred thousand dollars a year," said Mr. Rawn quietly. "I don't think we should ask Mr. Halsey to work for less than five thousand. Do you, gentlemen?"

"There shall be no hagglings, gentlemen, no hagglings," said the president blandly. "It shall be as Mr. Rawn suggests."

"That's this talk," drawled Ackerman. "I'll tell you, Rawn, come in to-morrow. We'll get the patent lawyers and our corporation counsel, and begin work on this thing."

That was all there was about it. The proceeding being wholly prosaic and commonplace, Mr. Halsey found again his newspaper, again wrapped up his machine therein, took it under his arm, and hesitatingly turned toward the door, the palest now, and most unhappy of them all. He had denied his own first-born.

CHAPTER III.

The New Mr. Rawn.

It was a wholly different John Rawn who, at forty-eight, found himself seated at the vast and shining desk of the president of the International Power Company, in the city of Chicago. The past was so far behind him that he could not with the utmost striving reconstruct the picture of it. He was a wholly new, distinct and different man. He had not as yet ever worked a week with a tool.

With little more speech after the evening meal than they had had before, an hour, perhaps, was passed in the room which the architect called the library. Mrs. Rawn called the parlor, and Mr. Rawn called the gold room. Then Laura Rawn, as was her wont, passed silently upstairs to her own apartments—or her bedroom, as she called it—widely approved in the architect's plans, from those of her husband. One room, one couch, had served for both in Kelly Row.

In appearance Virginia Delaware might have won approval from a closer critic than John Rawn. Her face really was almost classical in its lines, her poise and dignity now might have been that of some young, clean-lined, sleek goddess of old. She, at least, was a woman of the world.

"We have some letters this morning," Miss Delaware, began Rawn. "You couldn't quite take care of them all."

"We handled all we could," Mr. Rawn. I have referred a large number to proper department heads, and answered quite a number. It seemed better to refer these for your own action."

"Business growing, eh?" said Rawn, turning around to his desk. The girl's reply was just properly enthusiastic for the business.

"It's wonderful the mail we get. I'm sure every day it grows. I was about to say, Miss Delaware, 'We must of—ahem!'—of affairs are little better than slaves."

"Yes, Mr. Rawn," she said, and then, "I can understand that."

"For instance, I don't even know, as I have been here in Chicago, the names of the best firms of decorators, house furnishers, that sort of thing."

"Does Mrs. Rawn get about very much, sir?"

"Mrs. Rawn unfortunately is not very well. Also she has the habit of delaying in such matters. Then, as I don't myself have the time to take care of everything—why, you see—"

"Her eyebrows were a trifle raised by now."

"So I was just wondering whether I couldn't avail myself of your—your very possible knowledge of these stores—shops, I mean."

"Certainly, Mr. Rawn. I'll be very glad to do it. If I can be spared from the office."

"That's all, Miss Delaware."

HOW HE ACQUIRED BLACK EYE

Humiliating Mark of Personal Conflict Made Automobile Something of a Hero.

"You, sir," he said to the man with the black eye who sat down beside him in the street car, "are an automobile!"

"You were out on the road the other day speeding at the rate of 40 miles an hour?"

"No, I was only going to 10."

"You got yourself out to run over someone, and you steered the machine into a lamp post to prevent that?"

"Oh, it came easier than that. I was passing a farmhouse at 10 miles an hour when I saw that I was about to run over a chicken. I kept on, and the chicken was killed. I came back that way an hour later and the farmer and his two sons held me up and blacked my eye."

"But you didn't pay for the chicken?"

"No, sir. I took a $10 bill and rather than pay 30 cents for a chicken."

"A difference of $9.70. Sir, your honor, you are a hero. A halo of romance surrounds, but why the devil don't you put beefsteak on your eye and take the black out?"

Emily Bronte.

G. K. Chesterton has added his meed of praise to Emily Bronte, the woman writer, who of all others has perhaps won most unstinted praise from men. A splendid creature, Chesterton calls the author of "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" and "The Secret Garden," and the book itself he finds "likewise splendid." But there is nothing human about it. It might have been written by an eagle.

"I should say it is grand! Anyhow, there's nothing grander around Chicago. There's not very much here in the way of scenery. Of course, in New York—"

"Oh, don't let us talk of New York, John."

"I don't see how I could stand anything bigger or grander than this."

It could not have been called a wholly happy family gathering, this at Graystone Hall. Indeed, it lacked the "three" generations, possibly three acres, of being happy.

With little more speech after the evening meal than they had had before, an hour, perhaps, was passed in the room which the architect called the library. Mrs. Rawn called the parlor, and Mr. Rawn called the gold room. Then Laura Rawn, as was her wont, passed silently upstairs to her own apartments—or her bedroom, as she called it—widely approved in the architect's plans, from those of her husband. #### A Country Pot Roast.

In a hot frying pan melt a lump of butter or fry out a small piece of pork. While very hot put in the roast, browning all sides. Roll it over. Do not lower the fork so as to keep all the juice in. When browned put in a pot which has been heated; put water in the frying pan to get any juice that may have escaped and pour over the meat. Cover closely and cook slowly for three hours, turning occasionally. Keep about a cupful of water under the meat and sprinkle a little flour and salt over it fifteen minutes before taking out. Turn several times.

Potato Mangle.

Take six medium sized, freshly baked, meaty potatoes, scoop out in a chafing dish, breaking them slightly. Season in taste with salt and pepper. Take off the under pan of the chafing dish and place the under pan directly on the flame; add a good lump of fresh butter. When the butter is incorporated and sweet cream has been added, add then paprika till the potatoes have attained a light brick color; leave over the flame till fairly dry. When about to serve, add a drink of Madeira; stir and serve.

To Clean a Light Cloth Suit.

Buy two large blocks of magnesia. Lay suit or white felt hat on sheet on flat surface; and rub into the garment as much magnesia as it will hold. Do both sides. Lay article away in sheet for a week or more. Then take up, shake and brush, and the suit will be much cleaner and fresher. Especially good for white felt hats and baby coats.

Mock Apple Pie.

One and one-half cups of crackers rolled, juice of one lemon, one cup sugar, two-thirds cup water, little salt and nutmeg. Mix and bake with two crusts.

Mend Before Washing.

A great advantage is found by the thrifty housekeeper, if all rents or worn places are mended in clothing before being sent to the weekly wash.

POLITENESS OF VALUE

IS CONSTANT HELP AND BENEFIT TO OTHERS.

No Greater Good in This World Than Love, Kindness and the Consideration of Others in the Home.

Politeness that is bred in the bone and is in constant use creates in the character a resemblance to a flower whose beauty and perfume pervades the atmosphere in which it develops, and is a constant help and benefit to others.

Stopping the Wind. In the village church during the morning service the organist was annoyed because the organ-blower kept working the lever noisily after he had finished playing. A famous preacher had come down from London to preach. The organist scribbled a note to the blower, and sent it round by a choir boy, who, misunderstanding his instructions, put it into the hands of the preacher. The note was as follows: "Perhaps you will kindly stop when I tell you. The people have come here to hear my music, not your noise."
