Kentucky Windage

(By P. W.)

A Christmas Story

The well-lit, clean room was deserted and quiet, save for the chattering of the steam radiators. Eight long benches, with seats back-to-back capable of accommodating 60 people, were empty; they had been empty all morning. Most of them would be empty all day. Every day.

As I sat in front of one of the radiators, lost in contemplation, pleasantly engulfed in waves of warm air, the quiet waiting room silently reverberated with echoes of thousands who had occupied this same room, in the past fifty years. Waiting quietly, in bustling crowds. Waiting for a train to arrive that would return a son or daughter home from school for the holidays; waiting for a family to arrive from a far-away city for the holidays; waiting for a son to arrive on furlough or leave from the Service, perhaps for his first visit home since going overseas. Or perhaps waiting for relatives to arrive that had been suddenly called home because of sickness or tragedy, or a final wait before boarding a train for a new home and a new job away from one's hometown.

The chattering radiator told a thousand stories. Of happiness, of sadness, of tragedy, of anticipation; of busy people on business, of carefree vacation trips; of fur coats mingling with overalls; of all strata of society using this waiting room as a temporary, intermediate stop in their travel to and from everywhere in the nation.

It was almost unbelievable that this forlorn place was the passenger station in Fulton, Kentucky.

Fulton, Kentucky . . . a name known up and down the Illinois Central as well as Chicago, or Memphis, or New Orleans. A busy transfer point, a junction point where whole sections of trains were switched for Louisville, for St. Louis, for Chicago, for Birmingham, for Memphis, for New Orleans. Where three ticket windows served the passengers; where four busy passenger tracks often held as many passenger trains at once, where loaded express carts were pulled up and down the blacktop platforms by busy little tractors manned by a score of workers; where the busy mail transfer clerk manned a round-the-clock office receiving and shipping all mail; where the express office operated its own round-the-clock offices and shipping department, with its corral full of big-wheel wagons filled with all manner of boxes, packages, barrels, crates of merchandise, animals, baby chicks, even honeybees in well-sealed hives.

Fulton, Kentucky . . . where, a scant five years ago, fourteen daily passenger trains arrived and departed nearly every hour of the day; where, twenty years ago, there were double that number; where, forty years ago, there were redouble that number.

But this was December, 1970, now. In the ticket office no telegraph key chattered, no telephone rang. The lone agent moved quietly around the room, undisturbed by clanging bells, or waiting customers. Two of the three ticket windows were boarded up. Outside, the long passenger platforms were deserted and forlorn in the wintry cold; no loaded mail carts or express carts were awaiting any incoming train. The express office, now torn down, was only a lifeless concrete foundation pattern of what used to be; the mail transfer clerk's busy corner at the end of the station was long since closed and unused. The passenger track nearest the station bore a thin coating of rust.

Inside the waiting room, the "train bulletin" board, announcing the arrival and departure of trains, now shrunk in size from its former greatness, was, even now, much larger than needed to note arrival and departure of five trains today. In the afternoons you could still catch the City of New Orleans to Chicago or New Orleans, or the City of Miami to Miami, and in the midnight

The Fulton Band Parents Club, which is sponsoring a drive to raise money for new uniforms, was selected by Mr. Upton to decorate the tree for his store.

Mrs. B. H. Giles headed a committee composed of Mrs. Bill Fenwick and Mrs. James Lawrence, to decorate the tree. The local firm also paid the Band parents twenty-five dollars for decorating their tree.

The seven-foot artificial tree of green had a bluish cast, and was decorated with red and gold. Red birds on gold nests (made of scouring pads), and red satin balls were the decorations. Packages of red and gold, plus a red bicycle and a red toy fire truck were placed under the tree.

The tree has been sold, decorations and all, to Mrs. Ray McWhorter of near Fulgham.

Attend Drug Conference Students, Counselors

The Student Advisory Council of Fulton County High School attended a Drug Abuse Education workshop Tuesday through Friday, December 15-18, at the Holiday Inn in Mayfield. About 110 persons attended, including nearly 40 students from 12 Western Kentucky schools.

Members of the FCHS council are David Ware, Dennis Hulín, Bobby Craddock, Clarence Nicholson, John Kirk, Florene Hicks, Teresa Winters and Debbie Castleman. Also attending the conference from Fulton County were Miss Agnes Sublette, FCHS counselor, and Charles Terrell, Advisory Specialist for the county school system.

The workshop was part of the National Drug Abuse Education program. A team of representatives from the State Departments of Education and Mental Health conducted the workshop. They presented a history of drug abuse and outlined methods of education and health care through which the drug problem is being treated. At the concluding session of the workshop on Friday, the student groups planned drug abuse education programs for their own schools. Tentative plans by the FCHS students call for monthly programs, beginning in January, to be presented by the students in co-operation with the State Departments of Education and Mental Health.

According to Terrell, the students hope to begin with a program calling attention to various kinds of dangerous drugs. Later programs may feature guest speakers, including former drug users.

Ezells Christmas Card Lane "Must" For Christmastime

by Angela Mueller
At this time of year, Erle and Nina Ezell share their love of home decorating with all of Hickman by creating their Christmas display known as "Christmas Card Lane."

Some 30 replicas of Christmas cards, each with its own spotlight, line the long winding driveway to their house. Elsewhere on the grounds, the Ezells have placed such reminders of the holiday season as groups of skaters and skiers, a "Good Ship Lollipop" commanded by Pop-eye, a church, and Santa's sleigh.

The Ezells began working on Christmas Card Lane fourteen years ago, when he retired from his job with the U. S. Army Corps of Engineers and they moved to Hickman.

"We always were home lovers," Mrs. Ezell said. "We've always done a lot of decorating. But we'd just about run out of things to do around the house. Then we got the idea to put up Christmas cards and decided to call it Christmas Card Lane."

Ezell started with about a dozen hand-painted Christmas cards, and has added others periodically, including three this year. The smallest are 3 feet by 4 feet, the largest 4 feet by 8 feet. He painted the three newest in ten days.

Mrs. Ezell said most of their Christmas cards are copied from cards which they have received, but that sometimes "Erle dreams up an idea himself."

Their oldest decoration is the eight-foot wreath in front of their porch. Ezell made it when they were living in Washington, D. C., during World War II, and repaints it every few years to repair weather damage.

For almost seven Christmases, a mechanical Santa Claus has sat on the Ezells' front veranda and "played" Christmas music on a make-believe organ. Ezell built the organ with individual keys, and pipes made of card-

Illinois Central President Pledges Efforts To Make Forthcoming "Railpax" A Success

(The following article written by President Alan Boyd, appears in the December 1970 issue of the Illinois Central Magazine):

"The Illinois Central pledges its best efforts to make the national network of passenger trains a success."

Beginning May 1 of next year, the United States will have a new agency, the National Railroad Passenger Corporation. Familiarly known as Railpax, it will operate most if not all of the nation's intercity railroad passenger service. President Nixon signed the law authorizing the establishment of a national rail passenger network October 30. The bill provides for the modernization of passenger equipment as well as the setting of service standards for passenger trains.

What will Railpax mean in terms of IC passenger service?

The IC has the choice of joining Railpax or operating its present fleet of intercity trains for another five years. It would cost the IC more than $66 million to replace the aging passenger car and passenger locomotive fleet. Last year the company sustained an out-of-pocket loss of nearly $8 million on passenger service. It seems likely that the railroad will join Railpax.

Passage of the Railpax bill put a moratorium on all passenger train discontinuances until next May 1. The moratorium affects three pairs of IC trains: the Panama Limited, the Hawkeye, and the Governor's Special.

Secretary of Transportation John A. Volpe submitted a preliminary report and recommendations for the basic rail passenger system on November 30. After review of this preliminary system by the ICC, state commissions, railroads, and labor organizations, the Secretary of Transportation will make his final report to Congress by next January 30. The routes he designates in this report will become the basic national system.

Until the Secretary makes his report, no one knows what routes Railpax will retain. It seems likely that at least one IC route will be incorporated into the new system. The railroad would operate the trains on this route and quite likely provide ticketing facilities, commissary services, baggage handling, etc. All these services would be provided under contract to Railpax.

Even though the Illinois Central suffered an out-of-pocket passenger loss of nearly $8 million a year, it has continued to look for ways to improve the service. All information developed will be made available to the new Railroad Passenger Corporation.

In whatever form the Railpax system is developed, the Illinois Central pledges its best efforts to make the national network of passenger trains a success.

Developing Employee Satisfaction Generates Good Labor Relations

Firmness and fairness by first line supervision is the best preventative against labor relations problems. Fairness and firmness do not mean to keep an employee on such a short rein that he has no leeway in doing his job. The mechanical man is of no value in an emergency. Such an employee depends on his supervisor to do the thinking for him, and if the supervisor isn't present and something goes wrong, the employee simply waits for further orders. By the time a manager or supervisor finally gets around to giving them, a molehill of trouble may have exploded into a mountain of crises.

How does one create self-reliant employees? Here are ten suggestions:

1. Be sure you know yourself exactly what you want an employee to do. If you have not thought through an assignment yourself, you can't explain it accurately to anyone else. Fuzzy thinking on the part of leadership is a guarantee of inadequate employee performance.

2. Avoid straight-jacket management. Discuss the assignment with the employee. Encourage him to make suggestions and, when practical, give him freedom to put his ideas into practice.

3. Don't divide responsibility. Divided command is the sure road to failure. The same is true of responsibility. When you make an assignment, be sure everybody knows who is in charge and who is responsible for what.

4. Be a coach, not a judge. Subordinates rely on their boss for counsel and advice. Make positive and constructive suggestions when an employee runs into a problem he finds difficult to solve.

5. Be sure your instructions are understood. Don't simply assume an employee knows what you want him to do. Make certain! If there's the least doubt in your mind as to a worker's comprehension of your orders, ask him to explain them.

6. Strive for flexibility. There is always a better way of doing a job. Sensible experimentation may help you find it. If either you or a subordinate comes up with an idea on how to improve a method of doing a job, try it out. It may lead to saved time and money.

7. Be helpful. You're the boss, and an employee is entitled to your help if he asks for it. He profits by your knowledge and experience and builds up his own initiative and self-confidence.

8. Don't do an employee's work for him. Giving advice is one thing; taking the job over is another. You don't help anyone increase his skills or abilities if he knows that any time he runs into trouble you'll get him out of it with no effort on his part.

9. Don't be a carper. When you have given an employee an assignment, don't give over-the-shoulder criticism, particularly if it's premature or negative.

10. Look at the assignment from the employee's point of view. If a worker makes mistakes, are they in any way attributable to faults of your own—a job beyond his experience, hasty instruction, poor follow-up? Don't duck your share of the blame. Be sure you judge the quality of an employee's performance by the quality of your own supervision.

POET'S CORNER

THE GIFT

The poor beasts in the stable had No gift to give the little Lad.
No myrrh nor frankincense nor gold;
But their warm breath kept out the cold.
This humble gift can also be
My own, O precious Lord, to Thee—
My breath each morning in a prayer,
And praise all day to warm the air
Chilled by hostility and fear.
Lord, I shall breathe out love all year!

ONE CANDLE

One candle in the window,
With its golden glow,
Lights a path across the darkness
On the winter snow.
One candle wreathed in holly,
Lighted for His birth—
Invitation to the lonely,
Peace to all on earth!

FULTON'S

Library Corner

BY LUCY DANIEL

Bill Hall, tireless student of the works of A. Conan Doyle, dismisses as a four canard the report that Sherlock Holmes once confronted Dr. Watson with the statement, "Ah, my dear Doctor, I see you have donned your long winter underwear." "Amazing," Watson is supposed to have replied, "How did you deduce that?" "Elementary," explained the peerless Holmes. "You have forgotten to put on your pants."

SOCIAL SECURITY AND MEDICARE SIMPLIFIED. You pay a FICA deduction with every paycheck. By the end of your working career, you and your employers have banked a considerable sum with the government toward your compulsory retirement pension. It is important that you know that your rights and benefits are. This book does that important job. It cuts through official jargon and tells you in plain talking language what Social Security benefits available under the recently changed legislation.

O.J. SIMPSON, by O.J. Simpson. Listen to O.J. He has a story to tell. I am twenty-two years old, black and lucky enough to be very talented at running with a football. In the year or so since I concluded my college career at the University of Southern California, I have earned as much money and made as many good friends as anyone could hope for. I have also suffered some bitter disappointments. But my difficulties in pro ball taught me a lot—about the sport, about people, about myself.

THE SHARK, by Jacques Cousteau. Here, scientific accuracy underlines a great, exotic adventure described in compelling blend of narrative text and color photographs. The result is a work that takes the reader into a world of beauty and danger where the Cousteau expedition carried out basic research face to face with the most savage animal ever to inhabit the sea. What did the Cousteau team learn about the life of the shark? How does it feel to confront a shark with a camera as protection? Here are the answers to these and many other questions.

THE TALE OF THE LAZY DOG, by Alan Williams. This is a brilliant, gripping, accomplished novel; a taut, terrifying and entirely convincing adventure that begins with the discovery of one billion dollars in used U.S. currency, stored on a Southeast Asian airfield, and ends in a devastatingly ironic airborne climax "that would make even Hitchcock's nape hairs prickle."

Even in these days of scientific knowledge and of critical analysis of fact, the treatment of the rheumatic diseases is beset with medieval superstition which this book will do much to dispel.

UNEXPECTED DEATH, by Dell Shannon. Things were certainly humming around Homicide, L.A.P.D. Lt. Luis Mendoza and his colleagues couldn't remember ever having been beset by such a varied and baffling series of crimes. Among them: the beautiful, young girl, found murdered in an alley, stripped of all means of identification except the label in her elegant evening gown; five small children, assumed dead from food poisoning until the autopsy report came in; a suicide that wasn't; a rape that was; and the puzzling absence of heretofore responsible parents from home and their two teen-age sons. The whole melling into a first-rate Shannon police procedural mystery.

LIVING WITH ARTHRITIS, by Dr. A.B. Corrigan. It is timely that an expert in rheumatic diseases with a wide knowledge of medicine and a vast experience in physical therapy should produce a very readable book outlining current knowledge and explaining present medical opinion about rheumatism and arthritis. For too long have sufferers been misled by the pseudoscientific jargon of quacks presenting the problem and the solution as though these diseases were simple and amenable to a simple single therapeutic measure.

THRASHIN'Z TIME, by Milton Shatraw. Thrashin' Time is enriched by the warm humor of a family that wore itself together with love and laughter to face whole-souled and unafraid the frequent hardships of a land they had come to take from the wind. There is young Mick himself, a towheaded mischief-maker with all the instincts of a transplanted Huck Finn; his father, a man who filled every room with the cool strength of his presence; his redheaded mother, strong-willed, yet capable of a love as large as her convictions; his brothers, sisters, relatives, neighbors, and friends—all remembered with the wit and compassion of a man who loved and cherished them in life as in memory.

A KISS FOR A WARTHOG, by Wende and Harry Devlin. Alegre the 300 pound warthog eventually brings about the resolution of the rivalry between two towns. (Grade K-1)

INDOOR GARDENING FUN, by R. Milton Carleton. Year-round projects for children are presented in a simple and enjoyable manner with lucid illustrations that make the projects immediately understandable. (Grade 1-4)

Episcopal church in Fulton. The very Right Rev. Charles Clingman of Louisville, Bishop of the Diocese of Kentucky, will preach the commemorative sermon and will be assisted in the service by Rev. Hughes Garven of Paducah.

FORTY-FIVE YEARS AGO DECEMBER 11, 1925

The Chamber of Commerce appointed the following committee "to see if an arrangement could be worked out" to obtain a much needed County agent to jointly handle Fulton and Obion counties; J. C. Brann, Amos Stubblefield, H. H. Murphy, J. C. Wiggins and E. A. Thompson. Another committee was appointed to assist Squire McDade in obtaining the right-of-way for the Jeff Davis Highway between Fulton and Union City, and another to assist Squire Hagler in obtaining the right-of-way for the same highway from Fulton to Clinton.

Seven little girls met at the home of Martha Brady on Park Avenue Saturday and organized a little club, naming it the Merry Makers. The group consists of Martha Brady, Sarah Alexander, Elizabeth Shankle, Sarah Owens, Euphie Glisson, Carolyn Beadles and one other (not mentioned in the story).

Shovgaard, the Danish violinist, who's 200 year old Stradivarius is valued at $13,000 and whose hands are insured for $50,000, will appear at the high school auditorium December 14 under the auspices of the Woman's Club department.

Vandals broke into the composing room of the Paducah Evening Sun this week and wrecked six linotypes by cutting belts and twisting distributor bars. Police suspect unsuccessful applicants for employment.

After January 1st, all I. C. employees 70 or over will be retired on pension, according to a new ruling. Many employees on the Tennessee division will be affected.

Musings From The Philosopher

In my years of trying to recall evidences of folk beliefs in my early days I have been disappointed at not having been around some of our neighbors at the right time to see them using age-old beliefs. For example, I never heard our neighbor to the south of our farm actually express belief in planting according to the phases of the moon and the signs of the zodiac, but all the other neighbors often said that this one would not dare drop a seed into the ground without first consulting the almanac. Anyway, my brother and I always laughingly said that we could not tell any difference between our neighbor's crops and ours; we planted ours when we got the ground ready, and I have never known whether we accidentally hit some of the right times or not. And, though some people said they believed in slaughtering hogs by the signs, I cannot recall any hog-killing that was put off because of wrong signs. The few times that some one lost some of his meat were easily explainable by there coming a prolonged warm spell just after the hog-killing. Maybe some people in our neighborhood had the right answer, but I never heard it directly.

So far as I can now recall, every fiddler had a rattlesnake rattle in his fiddle. Where he got it I would like to know, for I had never seen a rattlesnake before I left the Jackson Purchase when I first got grown. Maybe the rattle had been bought somewhere or traded for with some acquaintance in rattlesnake country. I do recall having heard a lot about the potency of horseshoes, but I do not recall having actually seen one nailed over a doorway until I had left home. I know we used to laugh because a very old man who had lost his mind nailed horseshoes to the trees in a big woodlot near his house; but most of us thought he meant this to be for hitching places for horses, a very common use of discarded horseshoes down Fidelity way. Smelly asafetida bags were worn by just about every child. I actually cannot recall whether I ever wore one or not; if I did, it was probably at my insistence on acting like the other children, who did not miss a winter in this foreordained means of keeping diseases away. I heard of rabbit's feet good luck talismans, but I cannot recall having actually seen one carried by anybody. Maybe I was just too naive to see much folkish things. I do recall having heard a woman tell how she immunized her two daughters against asthma by boring an auger hole in a tree, putting a lock of their hair inside, and driving in a peg to seal the bargain. And, one woman told me, as a child, that she broke her daughter's chills and fevers by tying up bits of nine kinds of weeds and hanging them in a bag inside the chimney. But I never saw a buckeye and therefore did not know of its marvelous powers. You see, in Fidelity there were no ground-hogs, no buckeyes, no chipmunks, no skunks, I did hear legends about skunks, but I failed to see or smell one until after I left the Fidelity area. All the good-luck or bad-luck signs connected with these things, then, passed me by when I might have tried them out. But my favorite peeve for many years—the hostility toward hawks and owls—held full sway among the people of Fidelity, and snakes could be put into this same category of harmful creatures. I cannot recall a single instance of anyone's pleading for the life of a harmless snake. And even the most inexperienced youth could boast of having slaughtered snakes, and owls and hawks; and approving parents seemed to regard their precocious children as great benefactors of mankind. I escaped much of this by being what the neighbors called sissy: I just did not like to kill things; it would have been hard to convince me that most of the wild things meant any harm to me or to anybody. But, to protect my reputation, I just did not brag about protecting things that others felt should be slaughtered. We are all of the folk, even when we try not to be.

Breakdowns are of two kinds: those which are sung and played on some musical instrument, and those that are played only. It is hard to tell which first came into use, but I am inclined to believe, from a study of the popular ballads of many countries, that the sung breakdown is the older, a species of popular ballad. In a few instances I have heard breakdowns that told stories in true ballad fashion and were used for the "words" in a "play-party." Most sung breakdowns do not tell a connected story; if they ever did, the story has become so garbled that it is now impossible for us to follow the plan or plot. Sometimes there are three or four stanzas in succession that relate to similar things and suggest a sort of connected story. In many sections of the state "The Girl I Left Behind Me" has become a play-party song, chiefly devoted to directions for the dance. In other places it is purely an instrumental number.

By far the greatest number of the sung breakdowns are of the disconnected type. Many of them seem to record nearly every reaction of the community, and there will appear in the same ballad, or at least there will be sung to the same tune, stanzas ranging from the most ridiculous to the most serious, from emotions that are cultured to those that are barbaric. The old breakdown re-board tubing. He completed Santa and the organ in two weeks. "Santa was made with a motor from an old electric freezer," explained Mrs. Ezell. "We bought the suit and the beard."

Christmas Card

"This is his second suit. He wore out the first one. His fingers are wooden and he's worn out several pairs of gloves where his hands hit the keyboard." The music actually comes from a concealed phonograph.

"A lot of small children think this is where Santa Claus lives," Mrs. Ezell continued. "They say, 'Let's go out and see Santa Claus.' Then in the summer they want to know where he is." Almost as old as Santa is a carousel, which Ezell made with the motor of an electric saw. The lights and motors in Christmas Card Lane are powered by a separate meter installed at the Ezell house for the holidays.

For most of the year, the Christmas decorations are stored in the shed which Ezells used as a clubhouse before they filled in the six-hole course on their nearly 40-acre estate. Ezell and his fulltime handyman, Ralford Ellington, spent almost a week before the opening of Christmas Card Lane on December 12 stringing lights and wires, and setting out the wooden displays. The Ezells' son, Edward, came from St. Charles, Missouri, for a week-end to help.

Christmas Card Lane has become well-known even beyond Hickman. "People have come from as far away as Murray and Dyersburg to see it," Mrs. Ezell said. "We get cards from people saying they've been here. A girl we know came from Mayfield this year and brought her boyfriend."

The Ezells have installed in their driveway a signal bell cable which rings inside the house when a car passes over it. Mrs. Ezell admitted that sometimes they have to muffle the bell when carloads of visitors drive up and down viewing Christmas Card Lane. At times, Ezell has had to direct traffic.

"Some nights we have over a hundred cars. We've kept track several times," Mrs. Ezell said.

"But we wouldn't do it if we didn't enjoy having people come to see it."

The Ezells began making their own

Christmas decorations nearly 40 years ago, when they lived in St. Paul, Minnesota. During World War II, they both worked for the Defense Department in Washington, D.C., and lived in suburban Falls Church, Virginia. Mrs. Ezell said their decorations in Washington, though not as elaborate as Christmas Card Lane, seemed so because during the war not many people could afford decorations even if they had been available.

When World War II ended, the Ezells moved to St. Louis, where he returned to the Corps of Engineers. While there, they bought their present home, which had been Mrs. Ezell's girlhood home, and commuted from St. Louis to rebuild it as their retirement home. They moved back to Hickman in 1956.

They have two children: their son, Edward, and a daughter, Mrs. Eva Tomlin, who lives in Columbus, Ohio. Both were married by the time their parents started building Christmas Card Lane, but they return home every Christmas with the six Ezell grandchildren to enjoy it.

First Baptist Church Example Of Determination To Grow

Since its founding nearly 125 years ago, the First Baptist Church of Hickman has grown from seven members, meeting in a warehouse, to 283 members who worship in a church on Moulton Street. This growth has been accomplished in spite of such disasters as war, yellow fever, fire and a tornado.

Originally known as the Hickman Baptist Church, the church was organized May 15, 1846 in the Col. Baise Warehouse, built on land which was later washed away by the Mississippi River. The charter members were L. D. Stephens, J. B. Rose, W. C. Drury, Mrs. Mary E. Rose, Mrs. Lavina Baise, Mrs. Martha Stephens, and Mrs. Isabelle Ensley. The ministers serving the church were Rev. Samuel J. Grider and Rev. George White.

Capt. C. L. Randle allowed the new congregation to meet on his property in a frame building, which also served as a school. In 1856, the first church edifice was erected at a cost of $3,600, which did not include a bell purchased for $500.

Rev. Willis White, known as "Faith White" throughout the county, arranged for the construction of this church when he appointed Dr. P. S. Jones, J. B. Rose, E. B. Fuqua and Thomas Hazlewood to a building committee and gave them "plenary power in the premises," according to the old church minutes, to see that the church was built. The Rev. J. R. Graves visited the church in March 1857 and preached the dedicatory sermon.

The church's membership grew rapidly after the building was completed. Elder Grider held a meeting in 1857 at which 34 members were received. The following January, he held another meeting with T. J. Fischer and received 75 new members.

In 1859, A. B. Miller became the church's first fulltime pastor. He resigned in 1862, and from that time until the end of the Civil War, the church did not hold any meetings. Its membership in 1862 was 128; in July 1865, it had dropped to 38. Not until 1877 was another fulltime minister, R. S. Fleming, assigned to the church. Fleming resigned the following year, when the yellow fever epidemic struck Hickman. When the epidemic passed, E. Case, G. W. Stubblefield, and John Luttrell were the only surviving male members of the congregation. The church had not recovered from this disaster before the fire destroyed the church building and the bell on January 20, 1879.

On March 19, the church's members met at the Case home to devise means to replace the church building. At this meeting Case read from the fifteenth chapter of Matthew, the only page from the church's Bible that was not lost in the fire.

By May 1880, the church building was replaced, but no minutes exist to tell its cost. In March 1901, a tornado destroyed this building, and Dr. C. W. Curlin gave the church the use of a room in his house while the congregation rebuilt their church. It was completed in early 1902 at a cost of $3,142.55.

No records exist which tell when the name of the church was changed from Hickman Baptist Church to the First Baptist Church. The first minutes calling the church by its present name were written October 3, 1915.

During the ministry of Rev. O. C. Markham, the congregation built an educational annex at a cost of $13,000. Construction began during World War II, but the annex was not completed until 1947. Rev. Markham's successor, Rev. Joe Williams was pastor when the parsonage was extensively remodeled.

The First Baptist Church established a mission project in East Hickman in 1951. Six years later, the mission became a church, East Hickman Baptist Church, with Rev. Jack Rushing the first pastor.

In May 1958, a committee was appointed to consider building a new church sanctuary. Charles Allen Everett was president of this committee. The old church was torn down and replaced by a sanctuary built next to the old foundation at a cost of approximately $60,000. The Rev. John M. Statham, interim pastor, conducted the first service in the new sanctuary in October 1961.

On the site of the old church, a new educational facility is now under construction. When completed, the facility will match the sanctuary in design and will accommodate 250 Sunday School pupils. Bill Newton is chairman of the building committee.

Rev. Robert H. Dills, the present pastor, has served the First Baptist Church since October 1965. As far as can be determined from the records, he is the thirtieth pastor in the church's nearly 125-year history.

As a child I knew it, every-

Senator Hubbard Tells Rotarians About Sales Tax

State Senator Carroll Hubbard of Mayfield reminded the prescription medicine, wheelchairs, crutches and artificial limbs that as of January 1, 1971, devices individually designed, the Kentucky five cents sales tax will not be collected for.

helpful not only to all Kentucky citizens purchasing these items but also to all businesses, especially in border areas such as Fulton," Hubbard said.

The exemption legislation (Senate Bill 4 of the 1970 Kentucky General Assembly) was passed by the House 89-3 and Senate 36-1 prior to being signed into law February 18 by Governor Louie B. Nunn. Hubbard told the Rotarians that "the Kentucky Department of Revenue and the Legislative Research Commission are preparing a regulation concerning the exemptions which should be mailed next week to all members of the Kentucky Board of Pharmacy and retailers selling the exempted items."

Hubbard stated that "no standardized items will be exempt except prescription medicine, wheelchairs and crutches, according to Senate Bill 4. The other exempted items will include those devices constructed or altered solely for the use of a particular person who is an invalid or is crippled."

The research division of the Kentucky Department of Revenue informed Hubbard today that approximately $5,000,000 is spent annually by Kentuckians toward the sales tax on the items to be exempted as of January 1. According to the 1970 Senate Journal, the exempted items are defined as follows:

(a) "Prescription medicine" shall mean and include any substance or preparation intended for use by external or internal application to the human body in the diagnosis, cure, mitigation, treatment or prevention of disease and which is commonly recognized as a substance or preparation intended for such use which is prescribed for the treatment of a human being by a person authorized to prescribe the medicines and dispensed on prescription by a registered pharmacist in accordance with law.

(b) "Prosthetic devices and physical aids" for the purpose of this Act shall mean and include artificial devices individually designed, constructed or altered solely for the use of a particular disabled person so as to become a brace, support, supplement, correction or substitute for the bodily structure including the extremities of the individual; artificial limbs, artificial eyes, hearing aids individually designed, constructed or altered solely for the use of a particular disabled person; crutches and wheelchairs for the use of invalids and crippled persons.

hours you could still catch the Panama Limited to Chicago or New Orleans, but that was all. And just last month, the Panama Limited was petitioned to be discontinued.

What has happened to cause such erosion, such silence, such desertion in rail passenger service?

Some say, of course, that the railroads caused it themselves. They say that dirty cars, poor service and inattention to all of the former little niceties of rail passenger service have turned away the tide of patrons to other service in disgust.

But you know better than that. You know that billions in public money have been pumped into airline subsidies, airports and supporting services while rail passenger service has not only had to pay its way, but actually had the props pulled out of it by withdrawal of mail service. You know that billions in public money have been pumped into federal interstate highways, affording easy and rapid movement by auto rather than by rail, again draining rail passenger service of its customers, forcing train discontinuances. More and more people are going more and more places, but not by rail. It just happens that other modes of transportation are currently more convenient than rail.

And I know I have been a part of the departed crowds, too. I haven't sat in this waiting room waiting for a train to take me somewhere for a long, long time, yet I have traveled all over the country by air or by auto, mostly by auto. I know I can make Memphis in 2½ hours, St. Louis in 3½, and Louisville in 5. That's the matter with this empty waiting room: too many other people are doing the same thing I am doing.

To you who have not sat in the waiting room at the Fulton passenger station recently, let me tell you that the radiators still gurgle, hiss and chatter under their ten coats of paint; having seen wars, depressions, good times and bad, happy times and sad, but nothing like the dreadful solitude they are seeing these days.

Yet the place is clean, warm and waiting... hopefully for the fur coats and the blue jeans of the future, boarding modern and rapid passenger trains on fast schedules and modernized roadbeds... and hoping that time will come before its shrinking bulletin board shrivels up to zero.

Rev. Bob Copeland filled his regular appointment at New Salem Baptist Church the past Sunday at 11 a.m. The attendance at Sunday School rose to 82 this Sunday which was held at 10 a.m. At the close of the morning worship a baptizing was held. The Sunday evening service was held with the younger group presenting a Christmas program. Following the program was the exchange of gifts.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Rickman spent the weekend in Huntsville, Ala., houseguests of their children, Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Rickman. They returned home Sunday afternoon.

Mrs. Curtis Daron still remains in a coma at Baptist Hospital, Memphis. She has been able to move one limb. Every good wish is extended this fine matron by all friends in this area.

Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Argo and children, Chad and Kimberly, of Hickman, Ky., spent Sunday as your writer's dinner guests. We had a good visit. They are my grandchildren, and great-grand children.

Obie French, who has been a patient some four months in Jacksonville, Fla., has been at his home now for a few weeks. It will be remembered he had a concussion in a fall at his home, during the summer months, and had to have brain surgery from which he hasn't fully recovered. Everyone hopes he will improve shortly. He is the brother of Mrs. Delmas Copeland, and sister Irene.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Clay McConnell of Park Forrest, Ill., arrived Sunday on a few days visit with their dad, Mr. W. J. Reed, Dist. No. 17. They are enroute to Macon, Ga., to spend the Christmas holidays with children, Mr. and Mrs. Don King and children, Donald and Katherine.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Jones and children of Akron, Ohio, arrived Friday night to visit at the bedside of their father, Dave Mathis, a patient in the Weakley County Rest Home. He is slightly improved and is resting some better at this writing.

We extend our most heartfelt sympathy to the family of Mrs. Rufus Lowry who passed away the past week at her home. She is survived by her companion and one step-son, besides many nieces and nephews, and other relatives. Funeral services were held at Old Bethel Primitive Baptist Church with the Rev. L. W. Farms Tiny In Formosa

TAIPEI—Although Formosa's total agricultural production rose by an average of 5 per cent a year from 1961 to 1968, there has been a growing disparity between per capita agricultural and nonagricultural incomes.

Since 1950 the farm population has increased by 50 per cent while the amount of land has remained fixed. As a result, the average farm is now only 2.5 acres, and 38 per cent are less than 1.25 acres.

In recent years the situation has been aggravated by a shortage of farm labor, farmers' lack of cash, and high interest rates

Chides Ford For Doing 'Nothing Contrary'

Combs Lambasts Gov. Nunn

Former Gov. Bert Combs lambasted Republican Gov. Louie B. Nunn Saturday and chided Democratic Lt. Gov. Wendell Ford for doing "nothing contrary" to Nunn's wishes.

Combs, a Democratic candidate for governor whose chief rival in the May primary is Ford, made the remarks at the opening of his Franklin County headquarters.

Speaking in an area where thousands of state employees live, Combs charged the Nunn administration has fired 6,000 workers without just cause in its three years of office.

The courts have held a number of such dismissals unjustified when the cases finally were heard, he said, but often the reinstatement, when made, was to a lesser post or more distant job.

Noting that Nunn is leaving Sunday for a national governors' conference in Utah, which would leave Ford as acting governor, Combs said:

"I say to him (Ford), let him put the state employees back to their jobs as the courts have decreed."

Combs said that on the estimated 250 occasions when Ford has been acting governor because Nunn was out of state, he has done nothing to oppose the GOP regime.

Combs did not give any detailed suggestions on what Ford should do, but his criticism expanded an earlier theme that Ford and Nunn are running a "coalition government."

"We can't beat Nunn with a Nunn Democrat," Combs told a crowd which overflowed onto the sidewalk from the small headquarters store in downtown Frankfort.

Combs said Nunn has violated the law by "forcing" contributions to the Republican treasury.

He spoke a few hours before a mammoth fund-raising dinner was held at Louisville. It was billed as a third anniversary celebration for the governor.

Combs estimated the GOP expects to raise $750,000 from the $100-a-plate affair, declaring it will be used for the Republican "slush fund" in next November's gubernatorial election. He said 12,000 tickets have been mailed seeking donations.

Combs said his effort for a second term — he served from 1959 to 1963 — is nothing less than a crusade.

"We want to return government to the little people, the poor people, the laboring man and the farmer," he said.

"We're working not for pressure groups but for those who have no lobbyist at Frankfort."

Combs often departs sharply from his prepared speech text and did so this time. He focused more criticism on Ford than the original copy showed.

Technologists Are UTM Goal

The recently implemented engineering technology degree program at the University of Tennessee at Martin is focusing on reducing the shortage of professional technologists in Tennessee by setting a goal of more than 200 graduates by 1977.

Prompted by the fact that industrialization is occurring in West Tennessee at a rapid pace, area industrialists urged the initiation of the curriculum to fill the void between engineer and technician. Involved in the practical application of established engineering knowledge, the professional technologist occupies a position among occupations between the technician and the engineer but is closer to the engineer.

"The new engineering technology degree at UTM will provide improved and broadened opportunities for our students in the field of engineering and will enable the University of Tennessee at Martin to better serve the needs of expanding industry in West Tennessee," Dr. Archie R. Dykes, UTM chancellor, said.

The four-year curriculum leading to the bachelor of science degree in engineering technology is unique to Tennessee. According to J.O. Jones, chairman of the Department of Engineering and Engineering Technology, at present only five such full-time accredited, baccalaureate programs are being offered in the United States, but numerous such curricula are in the process of development.

"Currently there are 100 students enrolled in the technology program at U-T Martin," Mr. Jones said. "Between 1973 and 1977, we expect to place more than 200 graduates in industry." The curriculum is designed specifically to educate students in the fields of surveying technology, electrical technology and mechanical technology. Employing both the philosophy of engineering and liberal arts, the program consists of a common core of 138 quarter hours of study in addition to 60 quarter hours in each of the three areas of concentration.

To cope with the growing enrollment in the Department of Engineering and Engineering Technology, a $1,698,000 addition to and renovation of the Engineering-Physical Sciences Building is currently under construction on the UTM campus. Expected to be completed by June 21, 1971, the 52,462-square feet of construction will more than double the size of the existing structure. Facilities to be added include 19 laboratories, eight classrooms and 27 offices. Two study plans are offered for the student seeking a career in

Decide Not To Close Kentucky Lake To Fishing

NASHVILLE, Tenn., — State and federal officials have decided after a lengthy meeting here Friday not to close Kentucky Lake to fishing because of mercury pollution.

A governor's task force on mercury pollution announced after discussions with officials from the Tennessee Valley Authority, the state Game and Fish Commission and the State Health Department that current levels of mercury in the lake do not pose a public health hazard. The meeting had been scheduled after tests conducted on fish collected in the lake showed increases in the amount of the metal they contained.

Food Stamp Program Rules Are Outlined By Officials

ATLANTA, Ga.—Regional officials of the U.S. Food and Nutrition Service have reminded low-income families taking part in the U.S. Department of Agriculture's food stamp program—and grocers accepting the food stamp coupons—how important it is to follow program rules.

Russell H. James, southeast regional FNS director, noted that food stamp rules are designed to assure that the purpose of the program is realized—to help needy families improve their health through better nutrition, as a result of the increased food buying power given them through the USDA food stamp food coupons.

"Violating the rules lowers the effectiveness of this food help program, and may create hardships for all concerned," James said.

During fiscal year 1970, 59 retail grocers were disqualified by FNS because of program violations.

R. Hicks Elmore, FNS regional food stamp program supervisor, noted that this is a relatively small percentage of more than 32,000 food retailers authorized to handle food coupons in the nine-state area, and commended the grocers' excellent record.

"Failure to follow program rules can result in fine, imprisonment or both, since after a grocer is disqualified from the food stamp program he is still subject to prosecution under federal or state statutes," Elmore said.

Generally, the rules grocers must follow in accepting food stamps are relatively simple, James said. They may accept them only for food items—not for alcoholic beverages, tobacco or tobacco products or any other non-food item.

Other regulations: They may not give cash as change in a food stamp transaction, to insure that the coupons are used only for the purchase of food items.

USDA food coupons may not be accepted as payment on back bills or credit accounts for the same reason, and they may not be used as payments on cash loans.

Grocers may not "hike" prices of regular food items just to gain an extra profit from food stamp customers. Prices charged food stamp customers must be the same as those charged all cash paying customers.

Persons using food coupons who violate the rules also are subject to both prosecution and administrative action under applicable federal, state and local statutes.

FNS officials said they sometimes receive complaints that some persons are getting food stamp help who aren't eligible; that they are able-bodied and can obtain employment but aren't working. In such cases, the Food and Nutrition Service cooperates with state and local employment agencies in following through on these complaints to determine the true facts, James said.

Lipstick:
A Job Hazard

Near the end of her lunch hour, a stenographer sat down in the company lounge to put on lipstick. But she lost her balance and fell, suffering a back injury. Could she collect workmen's compensation?

The company insisted that the girl was not entitled to compensation because she was not "on the job" when hurt. Nevertheless, a court upheld her claim.

"Applying cosmetics was not an abandonment of her employment," said the judge. "It added to her comfort and self-esteem, and thereby permitted her to

Generally speaking, workmen's compensation covers injuries that occur not only during the work itself but also during other activities closely related to the job. For example, it applies while an employee is getting a drink of water or going to the lavatory.

In fact, workmen's compensation may apply even before the day's work has begun. Take this case:

A hotel waitress, arriving early, headed first for the powder room to change into working shoes. On the way, she slipped and broke her arm. Even though she had not yet been on the job, she was held entitled to workmen's compensation—because changing here shoes was so closely related to her work.

However, the law usually will not approve a compensation claim if the victim's activity was in violation of company rules and regulations.

In another case, a bakery worker was injured while trying to force open a tight window. He claimed later that the room had been stuffy, and that he needed some fresh air to help him work better.

However, there happened to be a company rule against any opening windows without the permission of the foreman. Accordingly, a court ruled that the claimant was not entitled to compensation. The court said he could not logically be considered "on the job" while doing something that his employer had specifically forbidden.

Construction Scholarship Available

The Paducah Area Construction Advancement Foundation again is making a $2,000 scholarship loan available to a young man who plans a career in construction management.

Bob York, director of PACAF, said any high school graduate who plans to pursue the new construction technology major at Murray State University in the spring semester, is eligible to apply for the loan. The recipient will be selected Jan. 13, York said, and will receive $250 per semester for four years, provided his grades are acceptable to the PACAF construction education committee.

The new construction major is a four-year program at MSU, leading to a BS degree in Construction Technology. It is designed to lead participants to management positions in the construction industry.

Repayment of the loan will not be required until after graduation, York said.

Applications will be received until Dec. 31, and should be mailed to Paducah Area Construction Advancement Foundation, P.O. Box 926, Paducah, or by calling 443-8930.

Policyholder Questions Answered by The Institute of Life Insurance, 277
Park Ave., N. Y., N. Y., 10017

Q. I got involved in a discussion recently about life insurance.
I said a person has insurance only so someone could benefit if this person died. A friend insisted there are actually several ways in which life insurance can be used. What are the purposes for having a life insurance policy?

A. Your friend is right. Life insurance does have more of a purpose than you thought. In fact, there are eight ways life insurance is used. These are:

- * Family income replacement — the primary objective of most life insurance today is to maintain the family's standard of living if the breadwinner dies or is disabled.
- * Cash needs — providing initial cash for dependents when the policyholder dies.
- * Mortgage protection — paying any outstanding balance on your home in case of the policyholder's death.
- * Educational needs — guaranteeing funds for your children's education. (Life insurance is one of the most widely used plans for this purpose.)
- * Retirement needs — providing a definite income in addition to Social Security, for those over age 65.
- * Business insurance needs — in cases where family and business needs are related, and for the protection of business against the loss of a key employee.
- * Bequest and gift insurance — leaving a stated sum or income for a church, charitable institution, community benefit, or similar gift.
- * Estate planning — important to the average American family in conserving the value of a home, savings and securities.

Q. A friend of mine works for a company that offers its employees dental as well as medical insurance. He said it's a new program and most of the workers have signed up. With four candy-loving kids in my family, it sounds like a good idea. What would it include and how can I get coverage?

A. Dental insurance coverage has made great strides in recent years. Some 4.5 million Americans now have dental insurance. Insurance companies cover 2.3 million people (mostly through additions to major medical policies) and 25 Blue Shield dental plans cover 1.8 million people.

Most of this movement toward dental protection has been due to large firms and unions bringing coverage to thousands of workers through group insurance. Generally, this coverage is provided to an employee with the worker paying part of the cost. Dental insurance policies which an individual can buy for himself and his family are still comparatively rare. These plans — not all of which are licensed in all states — include dental coverage, usually as a rider to medical insurance coverage.

The group plans now in use include a wide range of coverages at different prices. As an example of what they provide, one particular insurance company plan, on which the employer pays the entire premium, carries no deductible and will pay 80 per cent of all dental services up to $750 per year. However, when it comes to straightening teeth and orthodontic work, the company will pay 50 per cent of the cost up to a $1,000 lifetime maximum. A typical dental service plan (routine checkups for you and your family and care of cavities, dentures, bridgework and teeth cleaning) may cost from $100 to $145 a year for a family, according to the benefits offered.

Lower-priced policies usually provide a maximum of from $500 to $1,000 in yearly benefits. More expensive policies may have no limit on benefits. Whatever type chosen, the patient ordinarily pays 20 to 25 per cent of the dentist's fee.

Private insurance companies pay either on an indemnity basis or the usual and customary charge of the dentist.

Q. I'm a senior in college and seem to be a target for a lot of marriage-minded coeds and every insurance agent in town. I'm healthy and my plan calls for me to invest my money wisely — and I expect to remain a bachelor for quite some time. Why should I get some life insurance?

A. One good reason for taking out life insurance now is the fact that you are young and healthy.

Premiums are lowest when you're young. And no matter how good you feel and how well you take care of yourself, no one can guarantee that you will remain healthy enough to obtain insurance.

Life insurance now can provide guaranteed insurability for future purchases in case your health becomes seriously impaired. Or it can provide an income if you become unable to work.

You say you plan to invest wisely, and that's the way to do it. However, most investment counselors advise new investors to establish sound savings and life insurance programs before going into the market. No one can argue with your remaining a bachelor, but many a determined bachelor has had his mind changed by an attractive young lady.

Denies State Is Losing Millions In Tax Revenue

NASHVILLE, Tenn. State revenue officials have denied charges that the state is losing $900 million annually in sales tax revenue. State Sen. Gabriel Talarico said Friday in Memphis the state is losing $900 million annually in sales tax revenue which, he said, is collected by businesses but never turned over to the state. State Revenue Commissioner Thomas D. Benson has replied that Talarico's figure is nearly three times what collection of the state sales tax on the total personal income of all Tennesseans would be. "The total personal income in Tennessee is $11.1 billion," Benson said. "If we levied the 3 per cent sales tax on the entire amount, it would total only $335 million." Talarico said an advisor to Gov. Buford Ellington has figures to substantiate his charge. "I don't want to get into an argument with Sen. Talarico," said Benson, "but I will say that we are constantly audited by the State Comptroller's office and our own auditors. I'm not aware of any major collections we have been missing." "We have not been contacted by Sen. Talarico," he said, "but I want to emphasize that we do have an open door here and we would welcome any information that Sen. Talarico may turn over to us or any investigation which he may make." Talarico and state Sen. Tommy Powell, another Memphian who appeared on the same program with him, said they would join in uncovering businesses that are delinquent in forwarding sales taxes to the state. Talarico said he personally knew of one Memphis business that failed to turn over $52,000 in sales taxes last year. Benson said such isolated instances do occur, but they are not general. In the fiscal year which ended June 30, he said, Tennessee, with a population of 3.9 million, collected a 3 per cent sales tax totaling $239 million. North Carolina, he said, collected a 3 per cent tax totaling the same amount, although its population is 5 million. Missouri and Arkansas also have 3 per cent sales taxes, he said, and collected $295 million and $103 million in the last year. Their populations are 4.7 million and 1.9 million.

Third-ranked St. Mary streaked to its ninth victory in 11 games Tuesday night with a one-sided 84-29 victory over visiting Fulton County.

The Pilots are now 2-4 and have lost four straight. Mark Glover led the Vikings' balanced offensive night with 15 points, including only two fielders but 11 of 11 free throws. Teammate Joe Danneker chimed in with 12 as coach Dennis Gourley played everyone in uniform.

Junior Ronald Caldwell topped Fulton County's scoring chart with eight points. The Vikings, headed for an engagement at Symsonia Friday night, hit 68 per cent of their free throws to the Pilot's 39. St. Mary came out hot and zipped to a 21-6 first-quarter lead, then in the second period substitutes helped run the halftime difference to 41-16. It was 63-24 after three periods as Fulton County's entire game went flat and never recovered.

SALT, THE FIFTH ELEMENT

Salt is a constituent of seawater, of the soil, of plants and of every living cell and tissue. The proper exchange of salt in the human body between blood and tissues is essential to life. Its impairment interferes with the proper fluid content of the tissues and with the electrical components of the tissues functions.
When something goes wrong with the handling of salt in the body, there is serious trouble.

Thus there is no more vital element in human physiology than ordinary table salt — sodium chloride.

Wars have been fought over salt. Civilizations have been built on its availability.

The Favorite Seasoning

Salt is, of course, also a great favorite because it is a seasoning that brings out the flavor of other ingredients in our food.
And some salt, is naturally present in food, in varying amounts.
Foods from animal sources, including meat, fish, poultry, milk and cheese, contain more sodium than do foods from plant sources.
Seafoods are, of course, higher in sodium than fresh water fish.

Many people suppose that extra salt is needed when their work or exercise causes them to sweat a great deal. The practice of using salt tablets in warm weather is based on such belief.
Actually, the ordinary American diet provides sufficient salt for an adult to survive even the most vigorous sweating as long as his intake of water is maintained.

Survival research in the U. S.
Army in which I have personally been involved has proven that soldiers do not need things such as salt tablets, but they do have to drink sufficient liquids.

Tolerance to hot weather develops in about three days or more. Your body adjusts and the amount of salt you lose in sweat becomes less. Similarly your appetite for water increases. This point is something to remember if you are fortunate enough to dash off this winter for an active tropical holiday.

Note of Caution

Too much salt may be a factor in some people who have high blood pressure. When a doctor prescribes a low-salt diet, he usually means simply to eliminate the salt shaker (and the highly salty foods such as cured meats).

On the other hand, when he orders a salt-free diet, he means to eliminate not only the salt shaker, but also those foods which contain sizable amounts of salt naturally.

Permitted seasonings include herbs, onion, garlic, vanilla, pa-rika, parsley, pepper, peppermint, vinegar, and non-sodium salt substitutes.

State Insurance Unit
Wants Order Dismissed

FRANKFORT, Ky.

The state Insurance Department is seeking dismissal of a restraining order issued by Franklin Circuit Court which bars the state from acting against Nationwide Mutual Insurance Co.

The department contended Wednesday in court that the insurer acted prematurely in requesting the injunction, since the state has not moved against the Columbus, Ohio-based firm.

Nationwide had said the state agency was threatening it with revocation of its license in Kentucky unless a recent company policy of limiting new insurance was halted.

The state, however, told the court Wednesday "the allegations and charges are considerably broader than those which (Nationwide) anticipated."
Insurance Department officials also pointed out Nationwide does comparatively little business in Kentucky but is one of the larger auto insurance underwriters in the nation. The firm's new policy limiting new auto insurance applies everywhere.

If the restraining order is lifted, the department spokesmen said it is ready to make two main allegations:

—That Nationwide's rates would be excessive, in violation of state law, because the firm would tend to get lower-risk policyholders while charging rates based on higher loss experience.

—That the firm's "moratorium policy" restricts its agents from writing any new auto insurance business except through the assigned risk plan.

New Income Tax Form
Is Less Complicated

WASHINGTON With an eye toward cutting down on taxpayer complaints and mistakes, Internal Revenue officials have turned out a new income tax form they say is easier to read and less complicated.

The 1040 form for 1970 has more white space and less clutter—features which should help blear-eyed late filers who wait until the last minute to complete their returns.

While the major changes are typographical, IRS officials have added some new wrinkles in hopes of avoiding complaints like those about the 1969 format.

Filing instructions have been removed from the back of the form and put in a separate package. The old schedule "T"— a complicated section dealing with tax computations—has been eliminated.

The tax computation section is now on the back of the form, so filers will be relieved from listing much of the detailed computations on the form itself.
When IRS did away with its short 1040A form a year ago, it made some drastic revisions in 1040—and found itself hounded with complaints.

Not only are instructions easier to handle, but the size of the package that will be sent to more than 75 million Americans after Christmas will be smaller.

It has been cut back from 32 to 24 pages.

IRS Commissioner Randolph
W. Thorsen said he took a hint from Robert Townsend's bestseller, "Up the Organization," that no executive should require someone to fill out a form without first doing it himself.

His key staff members and some of their wives filled out the new form to test it. "My wife has assured me that it is improved and I am much relieved," Thorsen said.

UK May Seek To Modify Law On Student Records

LEXINGTON, Ky. — The president of the University of Kentucky indicated Tuesday efforts might be made to modify the state law that requires turning over all student records to law enforcement officers who ask for them.

Dr. Otis Singletary reported to the university's Board of Trustees objections made by the local chapter of the American Association of University Professors to the law.

He emphasized that he merely was reporting the criticism, then added that the time for appropriate action by the Board would be just before the next session of the state legislature, January, 1972.

Singletary noted that the law originally was written to protect student records from prying eyes, but that it contains a clause requiring the school to turn over records to any law enforcement officer who wants them.

The matter came to public attention here recently when the FBI asked for and received a class role at the university, then allegedly conducted an investigation of some of its members.

The AAUP said such action, "without any safeguards as to requirements of adequate cause, produces an extremely chilling effect on academic freedom."

Singletary has announced since the FBI probe that student information will be given out only by him.

The AAUP said the current law could require the university to turn over "such private information as personal counseling records, financial records of students and their parents ... medical records, disciplinary records and letters of recommendation."

On another matter, Singletary told the regular Board meeting he is preparing next year's budget for the university and warned that it and future budgets will have to be trimmed to make ends meet.

Probe Of Phone Rate Hike Asked

State Rep. David Carter has asked for a full investigation of South Central Bell Telephone Company's rate increase request.

The request was made to the Kentucky Legislative Research Commission.

The telephone company made the increase request in August and Carter said it would amount to about $14.8 million annually in higher phone bills for Kentucky residents.

The letter, directed to J. T. Fleming, LRC director, stated that Carter was concerned that the legislature is not conducting a study of this increase.

Carter said he would like to see a subcommittee on public utilities of the interim Committee on Public Utilities and Transportation conduct the full investigation.

The rate increase question is pending before the Public Service Commission and Carter suggested that the commission be requested not to close its hearings until the committee has had a chance to meet.

Carter, who announced for reelection earlier this week, is a member of the House Committee on Public Utilities and Transportation.

Referendum PassesMayfield To Get New High School

MAYFIELD, Ky., Mayfieldians today approved, by a margin of nearly 2½-1, an additional 20¢ school tax for the purpose of constructing a new high school, 5,000-seat gymnasium and vocational school.

Also included in the $3 million project is the renovation of the existing high school building and all of the city's elementary schools.

The vote on today's referendum was:

For — 1,578.

Against — 680.

City superintendent Don Sparks is hopeful that construction can begin in the spring, and that the new high school will be ready for occupancy by the fall of 1972.

Less than 40 per cent of the city's 5,800 registered voters went to the polls despite sunshine and spring-like weather.

The new high school will be constructed on a 42-acre tract in southeast Mayfield purchased by the school board from Usher & Gardner for $175,000.

Luckett & Farley, a Louisville architectural firm, designed the structure to accommodate 800-850 students. However, the capacity can easily be doubled, a spokesman for the firm said.

The high school building itself is expected to cost nearly $2 million. The estimated cost of the vocational school, according to Gene Farley, is $450,000, with possibly half of that amount being financed through Federal funds.

Passage of today's referendum will increase the present city school tax rate from 89¢ to 89¢ per $100 of property valuation.

Superintendent Sparks has estimated the additional 20¢ tax

Record Car Production Scheduled

DETROIT Following optimistic predictions that 1971 will see a boom in new car sales, the auto industry has scheduled record car production for the first quarter of the new year.

The industry plans to build 2,590,000 cars in the January-March period, the highest output for any first quarter in history, according to Ward's Automotive Reports.

The industry's statistical agency said the planned production program is 45 per cent above the 1,780,000 cars produced in the same period of 1970 and will edge the previous mark for the period of 2,560,000 cars posted in 1965, the industry's peak year for assembly in U.S. plants.

Carlick: IC Moves On Pollution

County Attorney Samuel Carlick told McCracken Fiscal Court Thursday the Illinois Central Railroad Co. is making an effort to clean up oil pollution issuing from the railroad property into Crystal Creek which drains into Island Creek.

Charges were taken against ICRR by McCracken County Conservation Officer Joe Alexander.

The case has not been set for a trial date in County Court and it may not become necessary to hear the case if the pollution is cleaned up, Carlick told the commissioners. The clean-up effort began Wednesday, Carlick said.

In other action, Fiscal Court signed a contract with the Paducah Power System to provide a system of lighting for the courthouse parking lot.

Mercury vapor lights will be installed on the lot which was constructed in October.

Fiscal Court also approved a motion accepting Toon Road for county maintenance.

The court members also approved a motion to make a demand on the Paducah Water Works for repair of road damage on Alameda Drive in Conrad Heights. The commissioners reported the company dug up the county road to install a water line and has not repaired the damage to it.

The total cost of having and outfitting a baby has risen 35 per cent since 1965.

"Love came down at Christmas, Love all lovely, Love Divine, Love was born at Christmas; Star and angels gave the sign."

 "For GOD so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life." John 3:16

 The Gift of LOVE, GOD'S SON, was His greatest Gift to the World.
 LOVE came into a world in need and wherever LOVE came, life was enriched.
 The world needs so much LOVE today.....
 Let your gift be LOVE.
 And, with this Gift of LOVE, came the gift of PEACE. The heavens rang with the song of "Peace on Earth, good will toward men."
 The world needs Peace today.....
 Let your gift be PEACE!
 And the angels said to the shepherds on the Judean hills, Behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy which shall be to all people."
 There is so much fear, unrest, anxiety today.....
 Let your gift be JOY!
 May His gift of LOVE impart Peace and Joy to our hearts today and throughout the New Year!
