Canal Supporters, Foes Seeking Votes Today

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supporters and foes of the Panama Canal treaties opened late-hour drives for a handful of wavering votes today as the agreements appeared to be within two votes of final approval or rejection.

President Carter met with one undecided senator early today and another announced he would vote against the treaty turning over the canal to Panama in the year 2000.

An Associated Press count showed 65 firm votes for approval, 32 against and three undecided.

Supporters were given fresh hope on Monday when agreement was reached on the issue of U.S. intervention rights in Panama.

Despite the agreement, however, both sides acknowledged that today's final vote remained in doubt and would be extremely close.

If all 100 senators are present, 67 senators must vote for the agreement if it is to be approved.

A defeat would mean a major foreign policy setback for Carter and a further souring of his relations with Congress.

Sen. James Abourezk, D-S.D., met with Carter today and a staff aide said he is now undecided about how to vote. Abourezk had linked the treaty vote with the natural gas bill now before House-Senate conferees.

On Monday, he had said he would vote no on the treaty unless Carter reversed his position on deregulation of natural gas.

The aide said Abourezk is now reconsidering that position following his meeting with the president.

Sen. Jennings Randolph, D-W. Va., normally a firm ally of Carter, announced today he will vote against the treaties in part because of a tough re-election fight in West Virginia.

Randolph voted against the first treaty March 16, but was considered a possible switch this time. That treaty was approved, 68-22.

The other senators remained uncommitted, Howard Cannon, D-Nev., and S.I. Hayakawa, R-Calif.

Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd and Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, spent the last four days seeking a middle ground between competing concerns for Panamanian sovereignty and U.S. rights to keep the canal operating even if it were threatened by internal Panamanian problems.

That issue sparked a demonstration in Panama City Monday during which about 100 demonstrators hurled bottles of paint at the U.S. Embassy. The crowd was broken up by clubswinging national guardsmen.

But while demonstrators were marching in Panama, Senate leaders in Washington were agreeing on a compromise that was accepted by both the Panamanian government and freshman Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz.

A statement to be attached to the second treaty would declare a policy of non-intervention in Panamanian affairs while upholding the right of the U.S. to unilaterally keep the waterway in operation.

The amendment is to be voted on before the final treaty vote.

Sen. Edward Brooke, R-Mass., previously listed as uncommitted, said Monday night he would vote in favor of the treaty.

Hayakawa said last week he is concerned about what he sees as a lack of will in the Carter administration to deter communist aggression in various countries.

Hayakawa, who voted for the first treaty, said he might vote against the second one unless Carter shows a sign of changing foreign policy.

The senator met with Carter on Monday, but said he would not decide what to do until shortly before the final vote.

Cannon voted for the first treaty, but was known to be under extreme political pressures to vote against the second agreement.

Randolph, usually a Carter administration ally, voted against the first agreement, but was considered a possible switch on the second.

After agreement on the intervention issue was reached Monday, DeConcini said the key to compromise was inclusion of a phrase which declares that the United States has the right to keep the canal "open, neutral and secure."

At the same time, DeConcini said, the statement will also include a statement that the unilateral U.S. rights to keep the canal open "shall not be interpreted as interference in the internal affairs of Panama."

The intervention controversy resulted from Panamanian objections to a DeConcini reservation, or condition, attached to the first treaty, giving the United States unilateral rights to intervene militarily even if the canal were threatened by Panamanian labor strife.

Some liberal senators, like George McGovern, D-S.D., indicated they might vote against the second treaty unless the DeConcini reservation was removed.

But an aide to the senator said late Monday that with agreement of the Panamanian government, the compromise reached Monday "was generally acceptable" to McGovern.

TEMPORARY BRIDGE WASHOUT — A tributary of the west fork of Clarks River flooded and washed out a temporary bridge constructed in the "Coldwater Bottoms" on KY 121 north of Murray Monday night. A construction worker with Barnett Brothers Construction Company of Henderson said about three feet of dirt washed away from a culvert. Workers were busy re-grading the site today. According to the construction official, the temporary bridge will be used later when the old bridge is torn away and a new one is built. But, officials with the Kentucky Department of Transportation, Bureau of Highways' Reidland office are expected to meet with construction workers today to decide if the 87 inch by 51 inch culvert is large enough. The washout followed a heavy rain Monday night.

President's Honor Concert Set

The President's Honor Concert, an annual event at Murray State University since it was introduced in 1968, is scheduled on Tuesday evening, April 25.

To begin at 8:15 p.m. in Lovett Auditorium, the admission-free program by the Wind Sinfonietta and The Symphonic Band will feature Kenneth L. Neidig of Wilmette, Ill., educator, author, journalist, and musician, as the honored guest conductor.

Neidig, a 1962 Murray State graduate who will be recognized by President Constantine W. Curris, will be the conductor for two selections on the program. Paul W. Shahan, director of bands at Murray State, will conduct the 38-piece sinfonietta and the 65-piece band in the other music during the concert.

Sponsored by the College of Creative Expression and the Department of Music, the program will include the sinfonietta playing "Credo" by Fisher Tull and the band playing three movements from "First Suite for Band in E-Flat (Opus 28-1)" by Gustav Holst with Neidig as conductor.

Squad Auction Drive Continues

Calloway County Fire and Rescue Squad continues receiving items for a special squad auction to raise funds to help buy a new fire truck.

A spokesman for the all-volunteer unit said the squad has received a number of items of various descriptions in response to announcement of the sale.

The auction will be Saturday, April 28, at the rescue squad's headquarters at S. 4th St., beginning 6:30 p.m.

"The Chester and Miller, and Shoemaker and Miller auction companies are donating their time and expertise to help make this sale a success," the spokesman said.

Among items donated thus far are a Shetland pony, electric organ, piano, television sets, various household items, antiques and tools.

Anyone having any items they want to donate may contact the Fire Control Center at 753-4112 for further information or to make arrangements to have items picked up.

The new fire truck will be dedicated to the memory of late Preston Jones of Murray. Mr. Jones and his wife Roxie were named honorary members of the rescue squad in June of last year.

"Mr. and Mrs. Jones have given endless support to the squad over the past several years and were presented with a plaque in appreciation of their interest in the furtherance of the rescue squad's cause," the spokesman said.

"The rescue squad would like to express a special thanks to all employers for allowing members of the squad to take time off from their jobs in order to help fight fires and participate in emergency search and rescue operations throughout the county and the surrounding areas," the spokesman said.

"Without the cooperation of these employers the rescue squad could not function as an all-volunteer organization.

"Also, a special thanks to all the countians who help to support the rescue squad with their donations and participation in events such as the auction to be held later this month. Thanks to you all from the members of the Calloway County Fire and Rescue Squad," the spokesman said.

Murray Honors Day To Recognize 600

Honors Day at Murray State University — a program each spring to recognize students who have distinguished themselves — will begin at 2 p.m. on Sunday, April 23, in the Student Center auditorium.

Approximately 600 students will be recognized for academic achievement and leadership during the program. About 225 individual presentations of grants, cash awards, certificates, and citations will be made by the university and by various campus scholastic and honorary organizations.

Dr. William G. Read, vice-president for academic programs, emphasized that all parents and friends are invited to attend. He said parents of students to be recognized on stage have been issued an invitation by Dr. Constantine W. Curris, university president.

Steve Bourne of Murray, a senior and the 1977-78 Student Government Association president, will preside during the honors program. Eleanor Mills, Guston senior, will deliver the invocation.

Curris will welcome guests to the campus, and Read will introduce the academic deans. The deans will preside as representatives of each undergraduate college make presentations.

Among students to be recognized are the outstanding senior woman and man; outstanding students in various academic departments and honor societies based on scholarship, and students named to "Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities."

A reception in the lobby of the Student Center will follow the program.

Academy Head To Address Seminar

The president of the Kentucky Academy of Science will be the speaker tomorrow at an environmental sciences seminar at Murray State University.

Dr. Charles E. Kupchella, who also is associate director for Administration and planning with the University of Louisville's Cancer Center, will discuss cancer as an environmental disease resulting from the byproducts of today's technology. His topic will be: "Cancer: The Ultimate Environmental Insult."

The seminar is scheduled for 3 p.m. in Room 228 of the Blackburn Science Building, and the public is invited.

Dr. Kupchella, an associate professor of oncology at the University of Louisville, is a graduate of Indiana University of Pennsylvania and St. Bonaventure University, where he received his doctorate in physiology and microbiology.

Carroll Under Fire For Bahama Trip

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — A spokesman for Gov. Julian Carroll says a state plane made four round trips between Miami and the Bahamas during the governor's recent vacation.

Deputy Press Secretary Gary Auxier said Monday the governor gave rides in the plane to several friends and chance acquaintances, including a couple from Brazil and a reporter for The Voice, a suburban Louisville weekly newspaper.

"They were just people they (the Carrolls) bumped into in the Miss Kathy Stubblefield, teacher at Calloway County High School, will be the mistress of ceremonies for the fashion show.

Serving on the panel of judges will be Dr. Jack Rose, superintendent of Calloway County Schools; Dr. Hal Houston, surgeon with the Houston-McDevitt Clinic, Inc.; Kenneth C. Ines, state representative and co-owner of the J. H. Churchill Funeral Home; Jo Brandon, florist; Leta Taylor, beautician; Howard Stealy, Bank of Murray.

Special donations have been made by Roses, Big K. Gene & Jo's Florist, and Scott Drugs for the show.

The public is urged to attend this special fund raising benefit of the PTC for the school, a PTC spokesman said.

State Plane Made 4 Trips, Spokesman Says

Bahamas," said Auxier. "He has a habit of picking up passengers when we have space."

State Auditor George Atkins' had charged last week that Carroll's was using the 16-passenger Fairchild turboprop jet as a shuttle service on his vacation.

Carroll said he needed the plane so he would have transportation readily available if he had to get back to Kentucky.

Records of the state air transport

Louisville resident also on vacation in Brazil, was listed as a passenger on the plane as well, the governor's aide said.

Atkins had said last week the state needs a law or regulation requiring that records of passengers and destinations be kept to deter abuse of state planes.

Carroll does not feel the question of requiring such records is "a major policy question" for the governor's office, Auxier said, but a matter for the Department of Finance and Administration, the overseer of the the air-transport division.

'79 Democratic Frontrunner

Early Poll Shows Terry McBrayer Favorite

The results of the first state-wide popularity poll showed Terry McBrayer to be the people's favorite. The director of the "People Poll," George Herman Kendall, of Lexington revealed the ratings at a press conference after the mail-in ballots from 40 newspapers were counted.

Congressman Carroll Hubbard was second with 97 votes, Thelma Stovall received 96 of the total of 811 ballots. Fourth place was a tie between George Atkins and Tom Harris, and Harvey Sloane got 68, two less than them.

There were ten write-ins with Sen. Wendell Ford getting three and Bill Kenton two, and one to Joe Prather, Barkley Sturgill and Ralph Graves. Kendall said that over 60 counties had ballots sent in and that the poll, while limited to newspaper readers, was representative.

"A large number of the ballots were checked as senior citizens, and there were many marked as state employees and party workers," Kendall stated, "but that is to be expected since they have a vital interest in the outcome of this election." He said he had expected more students to participate since he had a check to be indicated if student.

"Naturally, we had more votes from Jefferson and Fayette Counties, although Franklin County responded well as did all of the surrounding counties."

Kendall said that the reason for the few write-in votes was that these candidates apparently offer a wide choice of capable and highly qualified persons to be our next Democratic nominee.

"Campaigning and stands of candidates on controversial issues may influence the voters the next poll for this position, and it is scheduled for August," stated Kendall. "We plan a poll of Democratic candidates for Lt. Gov. around the first of June. I wish to personally thank every voter who took part in this significant poll."

"more citizens input is the key to better government." Kendall plans to meet with candidates, and or campaign staffs to discuss all aspects of the polls' results.

Dear Abby

Another Front Is Heard From

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: How dare you perpetuate the myth that men prefer women with big breasts? In a recent column in which you offer men tips on how to make themselves more "lovable," you said, "If she's flat-chested and a 38-D walks by, pretend not to notice."

Abby, there are men who prefer women with small breasts ("flat-chested," according to your 38-D standards)—my husband among them. He doesn't have to "pretend not to notice."

If you had done a little research, you would have known that men who prefer women with small breasts are more mature, intelligent and less chauvinistic than the big-breast worshippers.

Please stop trying to make me, and others like me, feel that we are inferior and unattractive, and that any man will slobber himself into a stupor over a 38-D!

SMALL AND SEXY

DEARS AND S: My apologies. But in most surveys I've seen which men were asked to describe their "ideal woman," the 38-D's were way out in front.

DEAR ABBY: My grandson, who is 33 and a physician, is quite religious. Every Friday night he serves his two sons, ages 3 and 5, wine with dinner, and they say a prayer.

I wasn't too concerned about this until the 5-year-old visited us and asked if he could have some wine. Of course we didn't give it to him, but I started to worry that the children could be developing a taste for wine at an early age and eventually become alcoholic. I read somewhere that this could happen.

Is there some way I can convey this message to my grandson without offending him? (P.S. He's a Scorpio and doesn't take criticism very well.)

GREAT-GRANDMOTHER

DEAR GRANDMOTHER: Tell him in a loving, non-critical way that his son asked for wine in your home. As a physician he should know the dangers of giving a child too much wine too often. (P.S. Scorpios are also quick learners.)

DEAR ABBY: We hear so much these days about whether to "become involved" when we see a stranger being attacked or abused by another stranger. I'm reminded of an experience I had back in 1936 while waiting for one of those long, yellow streetcars in Minneapolis.

Along came a couple. The man proceeded to give the woman a very loud tongue-lashing. She looked so hurt and defenseless. I finally said, "Look, fellow, you are showing very bad manners in talking to a lady that way, and I suggest that you stop it!"

He seemed amazed that a stranger would interfere, but he stopped momentarily. Then suddenly the woman swatted me alongside the head with her umbrella and said angrily, "You mind your own business! He's MY husband and he can talk to me any way he wants to!"

I was young, gallant and naive. I also learned a lesson. Now if I decide to interfere, I stand back a few paces.

JOHN KELLOGG, FINDLAY, OHIO

CONFIDENTIAL TO "TRYING HARD" IN DENVER: Try harder. If I could recommend a revision of the marriage vows, I would suggest, "LOVE, HONOR AND FORGIVE," instead of "OBEY." I think forgiveness is far more important to a marriage than obedience.

Do you wish you had more friends? For the secret of popularity, get Abby's new booklet: "How To Be Popular; You're Never Too Young or Too Old." Send $1 with a long, self-addressed, stamped (24 cents) envelope to Abby, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

FAMILY CAR

The family car uses 14 per cent of the energy consumed in this country. That category includes other personal non-business automobiles, too, according to home management specialists with the UK College of Agriculture Cooperative Extension Service. The basic fuel economy of a car is determined by weight, engine type, and size. But optional features, tires, maintenance, and driving habits are other important influences on how much fuel is used.

Aging Skin And Its Management

By F.J.L. Blasingame, M.D.

Q: Mrs. F. S., who says that she is approaching 50 years of age, writes that her skin is thinning. She is troubled with a few wrinkles on her face and brown spots on the backs of her hands.

She enjoys participating in sports and likes to be outdoors.

She asks whether any new creams or lotions are available that might be helpful to her skin.

A: Thinning of the skin, brown spots on the face and hands, enlargement of blood vessels and loose-ness through loss of tone are all signs of aging of the skin. No cream or lotion is available to help reduce or prevent these changes. They are often progressive.

An examination of skin that is normally unexposed, such as that on the lower trunk and buttocks, often reveals fewer signs of aging changes than skin that is regularly exposed to sunlight. Sunlight is the main chronic offender in hastening premature aging of the skin.

Populations that live in far northern or southern parts of the world have a limited exposure to sunlight and show less skin damage from it. Persons living in warm and sunny places, especially those who work or play outdoors, are more apt to receive excessive doses of ultraviolet light in sunlight. Their skin shows evidence of thinning, or atrophy, and some of other signs of damage.

Every effort should be made to cut down on skin exposure to direct sunlight. Such prevention is the wise approach to preserve the life of the skin. Some helpful suggestions follow:

- Wear appropriate clothing that covers the skin — even a hat and gloves.
- Avoid being in sunlight: "Ban the tan!" Remember, about two-thirds of the injurious ultraviolet rays reach the ground between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. (Standard Time).

Shield exposed skin with creams or oils if unsheltered by clothing. They help to make the skin feel smoother and more moist. It is not necessary to buy expensive cosmetics. They do not offer any benefits that are not already available from your pharmacist in less expensive products.

Since the ill effects of direct sunlight are cumulative, these protective or preventive measures should be used to help avoid additional harm from the ultraviolet rays, regardless of the present condition of your skin.

Additives In Food Discussed As To Protect And To Improve Foods

From The Desk Of
Jean W. Clear
County Extension Agent
For Home Economics

FOOD TALK THE CASE OF ADDITIVES

There's not much point in worrying about all those chemicals in our foods. Everything, including you and me, is made up of chemical compounds. So what people are really talking about are chemicals added to our foods.

Food additives can come from natural sources or they can be created in the laboratory to deal with a specific need. Additives made in the laboratory are often identical to substances found in nature.

ADDITIVES CAN PROTECT, IMPROVE

Here are the three most important reasons for adding chemicals to our foods:

1. To improve the nutritive value of certain foods. An example would be bread and breakfast cereals that have vitamins and minerals added.
2. To enhance the flavor of certain foods. Some examples would be spices in spice cake and sausage, the flavoring in soft drinks, and fruit-flavored gelatin.
3. To maintain appearance, palatability, and wholesomeness of many foods. Food spoilage from mold, bacteria and yeast can be slowed or prevented by certain additives. Also rancidity in margarines, lard and oils can be slowed with the use of additives.

OTHER FUNCTIONS, TOO

There are many other functions of additive; to help maintain consistency in foods such as ice cream; to leaven; to color foods; and as maturing and bleaching agents in flour.

Additives help make possible the wide variety of foods available in groceries today, and their use is carefully regulated by the Food and Drug Administration.

Prof. Richard Jackson Speaker For Delta Department, Woman's Club

Prof. Richard Jackson, director of the Clara Eagle Art Gallery, and professor of art education at Murray State University, was a guest speaker at the Delta Department of the Murray Woman's Club on Tuesday, April 4.

His subject was "Art As A Hobby". He showed slides of the trend in art in the 18th and 19th centuries and added comments concerning hobbies. His definition of doing something as a hobby, was an urge for self expression in one or more interests of painting, sculpting, drawing, etc. A hobby is fed by one's urge to do something creative, he said.

Prof. Jackson was introduced by Miss Clara Eagle, program chairman.

Mrs. Inez Claxton, chairman, presided and made announcements concerning the business of the Executive board meeting held Monday.

The devotion was given by Mrs. Oneida Ford. She read two poems "Growing Older Is Part of God's Plan" and "Brighten The Places Where You Are."

Miss Vanda Jean Gibson read the minutes of the last meeting. Miss Louise Swann, reported the financial standing.

Dr. Alice Koenecke, co-chairman of the annual cancer drive with Mrs. Harry Sparks, reported on plans for the coming drive. Donations to the Cancer Fund, in memory of 'love ones has almost reached $800.

Officers to serve next year, elected at the meeting, were: Miss Louise Swann, chairman; Miss Hazel Tarry, vice chairman; Miss Vanda Jean Gibson, secretary; Mrs. Lucille Thurman, treasurer. The nominating committee included Mrs. Jo Nell Rayburn, Miss Frances Sexton and Mrs. Evelyn Allbritten. Mrs. Rayburn reported the slate which was voted unanimously.

Hostesses were Lochie Hart, Lucille Thurman, Hazel Tarry, Leone Travis and Vanda Jean Gibson. A vase of jonquils, narcissus, and forsythia was on the speaker's table.

Refreshments were served buffet style with members serving themselves.

OFFICERS WHO will lead the Delta Department of the Murray Woman's Club next year are: from left - Lucille Thurman, treasurer; Vanda Jean Gibson, secretary; and Louise Swann, chairman. Hazel Tarry who will serve as vice chairman, was not present.

PROF. RICHARD JACKSON, center, takes refreshments with Clara Eagle, left and Inez Claxton after he gave the program at the Delta Department meeting. Miss Eagle introduced Prof. Jackson and Mrs. Claxton is chairman of the Delta Department of the Murray Woman's Club.

FOR WEDNESDAY, APRIL 19, 1978

What kind of day will tomorrow be? To find out what the stars say, read the forecast given for your birth sign.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 20)

A fine day for hurdling obstacles which may have stymied you in the past; for skirting impasses and undesirable situations. A good friend may help you.

TAURUS (Apr. 21 to May 21)

Many fields of endeavor are favored by generous Venus influences. Capitalize on your fine creative talents, your magnetic personality.

GEMINI (May 22 to June 21)

A day in which to capitalize on your versatility and progressive thinking. The big jobs may be easier for you to handle than the tedious chores. Patience!

CANCER (June 22 to July 23)

Emphasize your clear thinking and your innate understanding and tolerance of others. Thus will you achieve the cooperation of associates in bringing about mutual aims.

LEO (July 24 to Aug. 23)

Some unprecedented moves or unusual propositions possible. Study all situations carefully so that you can cope efficiently.

VIRGO (Aug. 24 to Sept. 23)

Mixed influences. Choose prudently what must be accomplished first, and what must be completely deleted from your schedule. Press for new advances.

LIBRA (Sept. 24 to Oct. 23)

Concentrate on substantial and pertinent matters. Avoid activities which interfere with obligations: A good idea from an unexpected source could prove extremely helpful.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24 to Nov. 22)

Keep on your own course. Fend off the skeptics and the worry birds. Don't make changes just because someone suggests them. Have a logical reason.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23 to Dec. 21)

A day in which to emphasize your finesse; for doing things in such an unusual way that others will not only approve, but look forward to your next move.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20)

Take everything into account before you begin the day. Observe outside influences, trends. Do not change plans if you logically should not.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19)

Auspicious influences now stimulate your imagination and creative talents. Progress and enduring reward indicated through properly channeled efforts.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20)

Avoid impulsiveness. There's such a tendency now and it could lead you into errors, so be careful.

YOU BORN TODAY are endowed with a fine mind and your quest for knowledge is unceasing. You are imaginative, persevering and extremely ambitious; would make an outstanding salesman and can promote your wares in a way that makes them irresistible. In fact, your business acumen is one of your greatest assets and, whether you choose industry, commerce or an artistic profession as a career, you are bound to make it pay. You are inventive, too, especially in the field of gadgetry. Other areas suited to your talents; education, literature, the law and the stage. Traits to curb: impulsiveness, obstinacy, easy loss of temper. Birthdate of Jayne Mansfield, film actress.

Amendments On Ballot

FRANKFORT — Kentuckians will vote on two constitutional amendments in the fall of 1978, but the record for approval of such amendments since 1960 doesn't forebode much success.

Since 1960 Kentuckians have approved only three amendments and they haven't approved a call for a constitutional convention since the last century.

In the 1960s Kentuckians approved an amendment to Section 136 to appropriate state common school funds on the basis of average daily attendance instead of a basis of census on school-age children.

The three amendments approved since 1960 are: 1969 to assess farm land for agricultural and horticultural purposes instead of fair cash value; 1971 to exempt the first $6,500 assessment on homesteads for tax purposes; and 1976, revision of the state's court system.

The two amendments to be voted on next year are to change the number of amendments that may be submitted to the voters at one time to four instead of the present two, and to change the election date for legislative members from odd years to even years, so newly elected legislators will have the benefit of a year's experience for interim sessions of legislative committees to familiarize themselves with questions to be brought up in the regular legislative session in even years.

This latter amendment also would provide for a 10-day session of the legislature for organizational purposes following election in the odd year. This bill became law without the governor's signature.

Proponents of the bill argue that legislators defeated or who do not choose to run for re-election spend an entire year in committee meetings planning what to present to the next legislative session. At the same time, newly-elected legislators come to a session of the general assembly without any previous knowledge of legislation to be considered or any experience.

In 1960 Kentuckians turned down a call for a limited constitutional convention and they did again in 1966, but of a different variety.

In the 1964 legislative session Gov. Edward T. Breathitt got authority to appoint a 100-member Constitutional Revision Commission or Assembly. These 100 citizens met for more than a year and a half and drafted a proposed constitution. This was submitted to the voters in 1966 and it was defeated more than 3-1.

In 1963 the voters turned down two proposals: one would have permitted 5 constitutional amendments to be submitted to the voters instead of two. The second would have removed the salary limits on state officials.

The Court of Appeals in 1965 in effect passed the second amendment when they handed down their landmark decision of the rubber dollar. This decision said that the present salary limits set in the Constitution were in terms of the dollar in 1891 and that inflation has changed so that the same amount of purchasing power today requires higher salary limits.

The 1974 legislature extended the "rubber dollar" opinion to the homestead exemption amendment. The exemption this year is $8,900 and goes up with inflation, adjustments being made about every two years.

Revenue Commissioner Maurice Carpenter said in a telephone interview this figure will be adjusted next January and "I expect it to be above $10,000." This will be some relief to the hard-pressed elderly who are living on fixed incomes.

Has President Promised Too Much?

NEW YORK (AP) — Has President Carter promised too much, perhaps even been inconsistent, in saying he would work simultaneously for less inflation, continued growth and smaller oil imports?

Nothing mutually exclusive about such goals, economists agree. But perhaps, said some of those questioned about the triad, the improper execution might make all three goals unattainable.

Today In History

By The Associated Press Today is Tuesday, April 18, the 108th day of 1978. There are 257 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On this date in 1906, San Francisco was hit by an earthquake. The quake and fires destroyed half the city.

On this date: In 1775, the American patriot, Paul Revere, made his famous ride in Massachusetts from Charlestown to Lexington to warn the Colonists of the approach of British troops from Boston.

In 1847, American forces captured Cerro Gordo Hill in Mexico. It was the first point of resistance on Gen. Winfield Scott's march on Mexico City.

In 1942, early in World War II, an air squadron led by Lt. Gen. James Doolittle took off from an aircraft carrier, and attacked Tokyo and other Japanese cities.

In 1946, the League of Nations officially went out of existence.

In 1970, President Richard Nixon greeted the Apollo 13 astronauts in Hawaii after their harrowing, unsuccessful attempt to make a moon landing.

In 1974, Egypt announced it was ending more than 18 years of exclusive reliance on Soviet arms supplies and would seek armaments elsewhere.

Ten years ago: Many telephone workers left their jobs across the United States in the first national strike against the Bell System in 21 years.

Five years ago: A delegation from Peking arrived in Washington to prepare for the opening of Communist China's first official mission to the United States.

One year ago: A Pulitzer Prize went to the American writer, Alex Haley, for his bestseller tracing his origins back seven generations to an African village.

Today's birthday: Actor and producer Robert Hooks is 41 years old. Thought for today: For what is a man profited, if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul? — the Bible.

Questions concerning the goals were put to several prominent economists. Here are their answers:

Q. Would not limiting oil imports slow domestic economic growth?

A. By itself, yes, but we must consider the total energy-anti-inflation program rather than just one aspect of it. Some say, for example, that if inflation were restrained growth might be spurred, regardless of the higher oil cost resulting from import restrictions.

Jack Carlson doubts this. The chief economist of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce claims passage of the House energy bill — preferred by the president — would cut the 1981 economy by 1.2 percent.

Carlson, who insists his figures have remained unchallenged by anyone in the House, maintains the loss in Gross National Product would be 2 percent, or $51 billion, by 1985. And continue in that direction.

By then, he continues, it would also mean disposable income would be $778 less than it might have been, and that the economy would be producing 1 million fewer jobs than otherwise would be created.

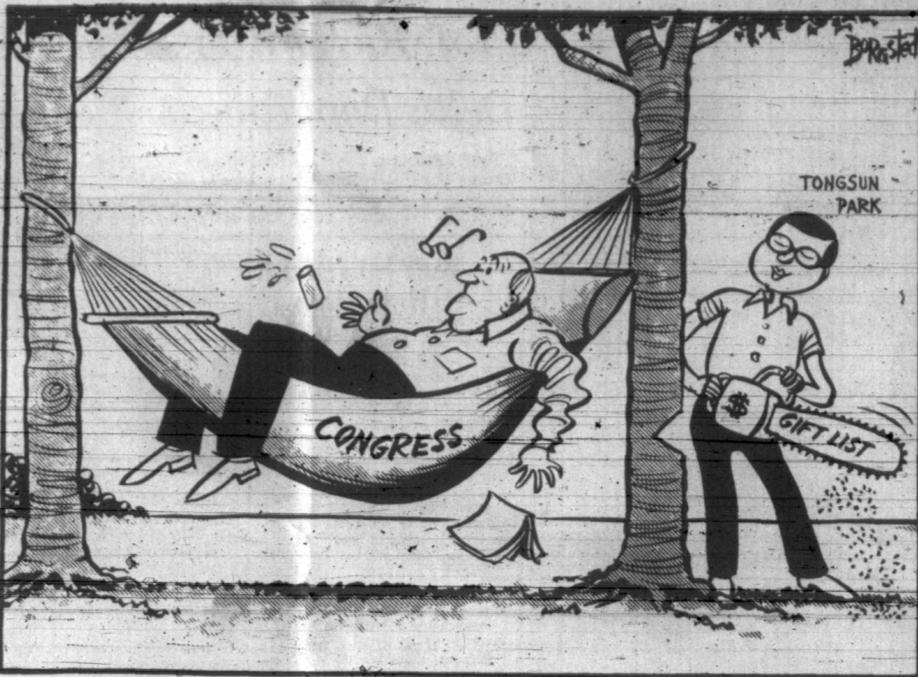

Q. But what about those offsets? A. We must consider them, we must consider the entire package. Walter Heller, former chief economic adviser to Presidents Kennedy and Johnson, believes industry might learn to be more energy-efficient.

vs. Walter Hoadley, chief economist of the Bank of America: We must assume a program, not referred to by Carter in his inflation talk last week, to increase production of nuclear fuel, coal and domestic oil.

And Murray Weidenbaum, director of the Center For The Study of American Business in St. Louis, reminds us the nation still can have positive growth, although slower, while cutting energy usage.

Said Albert Cox, president of Merrill Lynch Economics, "The less inflation the more growth; the less government spending the more growth." But, he said, "that's not what he's doing."

Q. Wouldn't import fees or excise taxes on imported oil be inflationary? A. Yes, by itself such action would be inflationary. Again, economists remind us of the potential offsets, for example, the promise to hold down deficits, and wage-price restraints.

To Get Away From It All, Head For Missouri's Big Springs

Now that spring has sprung and if perhaps you feel an urge to get out to commune with nature, let me suggest a "mini-vacation," a two-day jaunt across the Mississippi into the big springs country of the Missouri Ozarks.

Big Spring is at Van-Buren, Alley Spring at Eminence, Round Spring just to the north, Blue Spring off 106 east of Eminence and Johnson's Shut-Ins at Lesterville. All reflect the wonders of nature in a fascinating way.

Looking Back

10 Years Ago

Marguerite Carr of Lexington will be the speaker at the annual spring conference of District I of the Business and Professional Women's Clubs to be held at the Murray Woman's Club house on April 21 with the Murray club as hostess.

Deaths reported include Amie Wilkerson, age 87, and Mrs. Rose Rudy Ferguson.

Elected as new officers of the Calloway County High School Chapter of the Future Teachers of America were Rita Farris, Kathy Stubblefield, Mary Janice Morton, Ruth Ann Barrow, Sharon Underwood, Wanda Garrett, Cynthia Cooper, and Ellen Watson.

The annual West Kentucky Shooting championships will be shot at Jackson Purchase Gun Club Grounds near Coldwater on April 20 and 21.

Ruth and Frances Sexton are pictured aboard the Matson Lines 55 Lurline just prior to sailing on April 6 for Honolulu, Hawaii.

20 Years Ago

Betty Jean Watson, age 19, and William Ray Oliver, age 23, both of Paducah, were killed in a car accident early yesterday morning on the s-curve at Hazel. Two other occupants of the car were injured.

Other deaths reported include Virgil McCallon, age 83.

New officers of the Murray Jaycees are Z. C. Enix, Dr. William Pogue, John Sammons, Hugh Eddie Wilson, and Robert Hopkins.

Floyd C. Arnold, metalsmith second class, is serving aboard the USS Paymas County with the U. S. Seventh Fleet in the Far East, now at Guam.

30 Years Ago

The body of Pvt. Randall Griffin will arrive here April 20 and funeral and burial services will be held at Temple Hill Methodist Church. He was killed in action on June 23, 1944.

Deaths reported include Jewel O. Page, age 52.

E. S. Ferguson, manager of the Murray Electric System, suggested that the city install a new whiteway system in the business district of the city at the meeting of the Murray City Council.

Members of Boy Scout Troop 45 had an outing at the Hendon's cabin with Scout Carmie Hendon in charge, according to Scoutmaster Ralph Wear.

Those on the campout were Doug Wearren, Frank Littleton, Gene Hendon, Tom Lamb, J. G. Glasgow, Billy Mott, Harry Furches, Edward Overbey, and Richard Shackelford.

C. A. Hines of Greensboro, N. C., will speak at the district meeting of the Woodmen of the World to be held at the Hazel WOW Hall on April 20.

When we lived in St. Louis, we often camped among the springs. The two older children were youngsters then, and we "roughed it" — sleeping in a tent, cooking on open fires, playing in the swift, clear streams and making new friends around campfires at night.

Until last week, however, we hadn't spent any appreciable time in that area — known as the Ozark National Scenic Riverways because of the swift-flowing Current River — in 15 years. We barely recognized some of our favorite places, now beautiful state parks.

Here's what I would suggest for you if you would like to make this trip.

Go first to Columbus, and, for a change, cross the Mississippi on the Columbus-Belmont ferry, one of the few still operating on the river. It takes about 15 minutes to cross (if you catch it on the Kentucky side), and the fee is $3 per car. A huge tractor-trailer rig crossed with us, and the weight of the thing forced the front of the ferry beneath the water. I watched this closely all the way across — from the other end.

After climbing the sandy bank on the Missouri side, you follow Highway 80 across the table-flat Missouri bottom lands, through East Prairie to Interstate 55. Eight miles north you hit Highway 60 and head west, past Sikeson, through Poplar Bluff to Van-Buren, some 85 miles down the road.

Big Spring is 75 yards in diameter and gushes forth millions of gallons of clear, cold, blue-green water to feed the twisting Current. John boat excursions are available at Big Spring park, and there's a campground, picnic area, lodge and cottages. The lodge also has a fine dining area. We've eaten there several times, but it hadn't opened for the season when we were there last week.

Van Buren is a little town of 750, right on the Current River. It relies largely on vacationers for much of its income. On a typical summer day, the Current is alive with people floating past on canoes, rubber rafts and inner tubes, all of which are advertised everywhere.

Extremely friendly, the people promote their area and load you down with brochures, litter bags and maps wherever you stop. There are several comfortable motels in Van Buren, and the Big Spring Restaurant, "featuring the Blue Room," is a pleasant surprise.

Apparently the most popular place in town, judging from the breakfast and early coffee drinking crowd, it has a touch of elegance uncommon to the area. Jack Stalcup and his Paducah band are scheduled for a "candlelight buffet" and dance in the Blue Room April 28.

From Van Buren, you can go 11 miles west on Highway 60 to Winona, then north on 19 for 12 miles to Eminence. Seven miles from Eminence is Alley Spring State Park. Alley was a family camping favorite of ours in the years past, but we hardly recognized it. Missouri, taking a page from Kentucky's tourism book, is rapidly developing its park system, and Alley surely is one of its most beautiful.

The spring at Alley is about 100 yards in diameter and pours its waters into Jack's Fork of the Current. Beside it and carefully preserved is an old, red grist mill with its three stories of antique, water-driven machinery.

From Alley Spring and Eminence, you can head east over Missouri 106 past the old powder mill at Owl Bend and Blue Spring, considered by many the most beautiful spot in Missouri. You hit Highway 21 at Ellington and head north for your next stop — Johnson's Shut-Ins.

The Shut-Ins are a massive maze of huge, time and water-worn boulders through which the Black River tumbles. Youngsters delight in climbing across the rocks above the swift, churning waters.

When we used to visit the Shut-Ins, it was privately owned. You had to walk a half-mile along a path to the rocks, but this area, too, has been developed. Now owned by the state and converted into a beautiful park, it also offers camping and picnic facilities.

Although we were ready to head for Murray from the Shut-Ins, a tourist-minded lady at a small grocery nearby urged us to visit one more park before we headed home. Only seven miles away we found Elephant Rocks State Park, composed of huge granite boulders, many shaped like elephants and some at least 100 feet high.

Paved, marked trails lead through and over them past the quarry from which the granite cobble stones were cut for the early streets of St. Louis. Elephant Rocks was a new and fascinating experience for us. Our Jeff thought they were "neat," and had a great time climbing over them.

From Elephant Rocks, it's a short ride back down Missouri 20 to Ironton where you pickup 72 east to historic Fredericktown, Jackson and Cape Girardeau and Interstate 55, then south to Sikeston and the circle is complete.

From Sikeston, you can either take the ferry back across the Mississippi at Columbus, or take your place in the long line of cars and trucks waiting turns to creep across the single lane over the bridge at Cairo.

FROM THE Congressional Record

Gun Control Plan Sneaky

REP. GEORGE HANSEN (Idaho) "...Frustrated Federal bureaucrats who have had little success in Congress with strong Federal gun control proposals seem to be again moving to the back door approach..."

"The Department of Treasury's Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms control has proposed new regulations calling for the indexing of all firearms imported or manufactured in the United States."

"In addition the new proposed rules by the Bureau requires each Federal firearms licensee to report to the Bureau any theft, loss, or recovery of a firearm."

"All licensed manufacturers will be required to submit a quarterly report of firearms manufactured. The licensed manufacturers, importers, and dealers must also submit to the Bureau a quarterly report of firearms dispositions."

"No matter how you word it, it still amounts to gun control. During the last session of Congress, gun control legislation was defeated. Now the administration is trying to make an end run and, in effect, require registration without congressional approval..."

"I am also gravely concerned over the (OSHA) Occupational Safety and Health Administration's move to cripple sport hunting in the United States."

"In a recent Louisiana case OSHA officials ruled that hunters represent a real hazard to timberworkers when they are not controlled."

"The implications of control in the position now being taken by OSHA are so far reaching that they stagger the imagination."

Letter To The Editor

On Dog Poisoning

Dear Editor: This letter is in response to two recent letters to the editor concerning the poisoning of animals in this community.

Gay Gibson has questioned whether animals have actually been poisoned, suggesting that mauling on spoiled gravy could have poisoned dogs. It is highly unlikely, however, that spoiled gravy could produce either arsenic or strychnine, which have been diagnosed as the agents of suffering and death in several instances. Despite Ms. Gibson's contention that it is "very unlikely that a dog or cat could be poisoned, or come to any other harm in his own yard," at least one dog, living some distance from any neighbor and let outside for only a few minutes, was obviously deliberately poisoned in its own yard. The same dog has been poisoned twice under the same circumstances. A resident of southeast Murray recently found a hot dog with a strychnine tablet imbedded in it in his own front yard.

In her letter, Mrs. Edward J. Shepard attempts to justify the poisoning of animals which are not controlled by their owners and which menace humans and their property. Kentucky law, however, does not confound the poisoning of dogs for any reason. If neighbors' dog are indeed a menace, one wonders why Mrs. Shepard does not call the county warden and have them impounded in accordance with the law. Why doesn't she avail herself to the remedy provided by the law instead of justifying the violation of the law?

Certainly, dog owners should obey the leash law, and prevent their dogs from becoming nuisances. But their irresponsibility does not excuse such a heartless and contemptible practice as poisoning animals. And what will justify the death of a child who happens across poison left out for animals?

As a result of recent poisoning, the Humane Society of Calloway County has posted a $500 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of any individual who willfully poisons dogs and cats. When added to a similar reward offered by the American Humane Association the reward totals $1,000. Let's hope the reward will deter would-be poisoners, and that dog owners will show some consideration for the rights and feelings of their neighbors as well. Sincerely, Keith M. Heim, President Humane Society of Calloway County

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

If you have moved into or looked at a new house lately, you may have noticed that the architect or builder has left more and more of the lighting up to the homeowner.

There are few, if any, ceiling electrical fixtures in such a house. But there are lots of outlets along the baseboards. The concept is that lighting is an important element in the design and furnishing of any room and that it should be up to the people who live in the house to decide where the lights should be.

Generally, when an existing house has electrical fixtures in the ceilings of all the rooms, it was built a long time ago. In recent years, most ceiling fixtures have disappeared except in the kitchen and bathroom, with occasional other exceptions in dining rooms.

To most persons, lighting has been an afterthought when furnishing a home. First, people choose carpeting, a sofa, then some chairs and end tables, then the rest of the furniture. Standing lamps, table lamps and desk lamps are selected from a variety of standard, existing pieces. Fairly recently, lighting has come into its own as an integral part of the furnishing process.

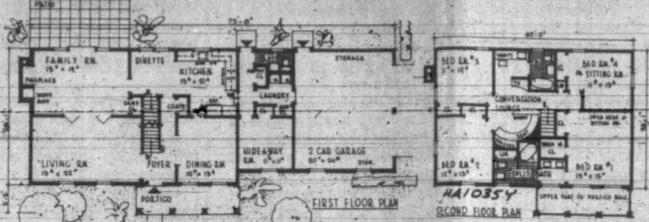

"The reason for this," says Dan Thomson, president of Halo Lighting, "is that homeowners now have available, in miniature, the kind of directional lighting that once came only in sizes and shapes designed for large commercial showrooms, galleries and museums. The miniaturization of lampholders entered a new phase with the introduction of a series of proportioned and styled with an exciting European flair rather than the traditional types."

Residential track lighting, easy to install by the do-it-yourselfer, makes it possible to illuminate those areas in the house which are the last to see the light and to dramatize a room by focusing on such objects as a hanging plant, a collection or a painting. In residential track lighting, the track itself contains two thin copper wires, making it a continuous linear power source. You can move the lampholder anywhere along the track and twist it to point in the desired direction. No separate electric wiring is necessary because the electrical connection is made automatically as the lampholder is snapped on to the track. You can change the direction of the light at will as easily as moving a clothespin along a clothesline. A twist of the wrist unlocks the lampholder from the track; another twist reattaches it.

In addition to its versatility, the use of the track can add to the living space of a room because it doesn't take up any floor or table space. It's an energy saver, too, since it achieves more illumination for a particular area with less wattage. To take care of specific lighting problems in certain parts of a home, there are also individual canopy-mount lampholders and pinups that, as spotlights, bring light to such areas as a winding basement staircase, a back porch, a closet or any part of a room in a house in which a single light will do the job.

(Do-it-yourselfers will find much valuable information in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," available by sending $1.50 to this newspaper at Box 5, Teaneck, N.J. 07666.)

Q.—We are turning an old porch into an extra room and are having some trouble deciding on a window at the front. We know that regular windows can be purchased in standard sizes all ready to be inserted in the framing, but now we are thinking about the possibility of putting in a bay window. Can it be bought ready-made?

A.—Yes. It can be purchased as a complete unit, including the casing. You will have to check the local building regulations, as some of them require that the bay window be supported by a special footing and foundation attached to the regular foundation.

Q.—Sometime within the next few months, our family may attempt to put up a log cabin, not for a vacation home but as a year-round residence. We understand there are many places where kits are sold with all the materials necessary for constructing the house. Do you have any idea of what these kits cost and where they can be obtained?

A.—The kits have a price range as wide as that for houses in general. You can get them for a few thousand dollars to more than $100,000, depending on how large a cabin or log home you want. Write for some of the available brochures and catalogs from different companies and then decide what you want to do. In making your assessments, remember to be sure you know what each kit contains so that you will have an idea of what extra costs there are, as for plumbing, wiring, heating, etc. Some of the places to write for information are: Wickes Lumber, 515 N. Washington St., Saginaw, Mich. 48607; New England Log Homes, 2301 State St., Hamden, Conn. 06518; Ward Cabin Co., P.O. Box 72, Houlton, Maine 04730; and Boyne Falls Log Homes, Boyne Falls, Mich. 49713. There are literally dozens of other companies that sell log cabin kits, but those happen to be firms whose addresses are handy at this time.

Q.—Some time ago I read somewhere, perhaps in your column, that certain metals should not be placed against each other. Now I am faced with a problem of that sort, but can't recall the details. I expect to put up aluminum gutters around my house, but the present downspouts are steel and in good condition. Do I have to replace the downspouts and are aluminum and steel two metals that do not react badly?

A.—When aluminum and steel are in contact with each other, an electrolytic action occurs that results in corrosion. Therefore, if you want to avoid this problem, you should replace the steel downspouts with aluminum or leave the downspouts as they are and use steel gutters.

Q.—A few years ago, I constructed an outdoor shed 10 feet by 7 feet from materials purchased at a building supply dealer. The panels of the shed are wood. I never finished the wood, since it seemed to have some kind of clear finish already on it. The panels now are getting kind of messy and I am thinking about using varnish on them. Should I use spar varnish?

A.—There are additional details required in order to give a precise answer, such as the kind of wood, whether the old finish was on the surface or in the wood, and what you mean by "messy," which can be anything from dirty to blistered. Generally, however, paint is considered a more durable finish for exterior wood than a clear finish. If you want to retain the character of the wood, use a wood preservative or stain.

(The techniques of using varnish, shellac, lacquer, stain, bleach, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," available by sending $3 cents and a long STAMPED, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N.Y. 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column, but individual correspondence cannot be undertaken.)

The WEEDERS GUIDE Easy home fix-up

By EARL ARONSON

There are five carnivorous plants that consume small creatures, mostly insects.

The National Wildlife Federation's Ranger Rick's Nature Magazine says the plants do this to compensate for a lack of nitrogen in the soil of wetlands where they live.

Perhaps the best known is the Venus Flytrap, found only along the coast of the Carolinas. Others are the Bladderwort, Butterwort, Pitcher Plant and Sundew.

They don't have to chase their prospective meals, since nature has equipped them with a bait and trap. Despite portrayal by science fiction, they are not man-eaters.

Venus Flytrap, which likes mosquitos, is only six inches in diameter. Its leaves resemble green jaws, with long, spike-like teeth on either side. The Flytrap itself has become an endangered species.

There are three sensitive hairs on each side of the leaf. The jaws snap shut when an insect lands on a leaf and touches the hairs. Juices within the plant digest the meal.

The Bladderwort lives under water and "gulps" tiny animals. The leaves are small, hollow bladders with hairs around the opening. When the hairs are touched the trap door opens and the insect is sucked in.

The Butterwort has long, slender stems topped with purple flowers. A low cluster of leaves has a sticky substance that attracts victims. When an insect crawls onto a leaf, its legs and body stick. As it works to escape, the leaf curls up and enfolds the bug.

The Pitcher Plant has red-streaked leaves shaped like the mouth of a pitcher. A sweet-smelling nectar lures the victims to climb into the pitcher's mouth. Inside the leaf is slick and the insect slips down.

The story says skeletons of many insects and the bones of a tiny frog have been found inside the Pitcher Plant.

Some insects are immune to the Pitcher's powerful digestive fluid and live inside the plant. Sundews are tentacled plants found all over the world. They have sticky droplets that draw their prey. When an insect lights on a leaf, the droplets hold it until the hairs around the edge fold over the victim and the droplets begin their digestive chore.

How About Liberty

The 1978 All-America pick Liberty doesn't need a pollinator variety to be blended in with the hybrid seed. It produces both male and female flowers on the same plant. Liberty was developed by North Carolina University.

Another new item is Ichiban eggplant. Ichiban means Number One, and it is said to have been the earliest to produce in tests. Also, from six plants, the producer said, 476 fruits were plucked, compared to 115 for the next most bountiful variety.

Which Side Up?

You don't have to worry about which side of a seed should be face up when planted—as you do with bulbs and corns. An exception is the big lima or butterbean seeds, which are so broad they have to struggle to get their sprouts through clay soil. The National Garden Bureau says it doesn't seem to matter whether the eye is up or down because as long as it isn't flat the seed can rotate easily once it gets down to root and gains leverage. If good soil it doesn't matter much which way you plant the seed.

Here's How Sizing Up a Convalescent Home

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures

Many children persuade their aging parents to give up their homes and enter convalescent care centers. But these facilities are not for everyone.

It may even be cheaper to consider other alternatives. For example, someone to share the home in exchange for aiding the aged parent in maintaining it.

"My children feared that I was in danger from fire, falling down stairs, everything you can think of, so they persuaded me to go to a nursing home for a time while they were away," one woman said.

One girl had to spend a year in Europe on a teaching job and the other was moving to California, she explained. "So they closed our house and I said I would try it."

The only trouble was, she said, that she was like a fish out of water. "The other people were mainly senile, and she soon felt that she would go mad unless she could get back to her own home. She finally made it by persuading a relative to live with her until her older girl returned from Europe."

"Many people need such care and more convalescent centers have added good nursing facilities, but most of these centers are not really for well people," the woman said.

Before choosing such a facility for a parent or close relative, give it lots of thought, this former patient advises. Here are some suggestions from her and others:

—Visit the facility and make sure it represents the needs of your relative. Are the people in a similar age group?

—Does your relative have good teeth? If not, she may be put on a soft diet that does not offer as much protein as chewy meats and other foods. Try to get her teeth repaired before sending her to one of these homes.

—Visit the nursing home from time to time at different hours before you make a decision. Wander about the building and observe the recreation offered. Good nursing homes try to get patients out of bed and into some kind of daily activity if they are able.

—Does the staff seem sympathetic to the patients' needs, yet firm in getting them involved in doing the best for themselves—bathing, eating, camaraderie, and so on.

—Visit the person from time to time to see if she is happy in her new home. If not, seek another where her needs would be better served.

—If it is possible, the elderly parent or relative should be taken out from time to time. "The saddest thing" commented one former short-term resident, "is the son or daughter who makes infrequent visits and then always comments that 'we will have you home one weekend soon.'" Somehow that weekend never arrives.

Remember the convalescent home relative with occasional letters (it will keep her interested in writing to you), tiny gifts (a package is fun to get) and as many visits as you can manage. Such places can be lonely experiences.

The WEEDERS GUIDE Easy home fix-up

Installing new roofing and/or siding can dramatically improve the look of your home and therefore add considerably to its value.

Why not get rid of that old, weathered, stained siding and replace it with smart, modern material? Or why not transform your roof by replacing asphalt shingles with cedar?

It's not as hard as you might think. You just need good advice—and that's just what you get in a new book called "Successful Roofing and Siding." It gives you complete information on all exterior renewal, including supplemental work on trimmers, gutters, and insulation. It tells you which jobs you may safely take on yourself and which should be turned over to a contractor. It also tells you how to deal with contractors and gives you know-how about materials for all needs and budgets.

For the jobs that you can do yourself, the instructions are specific and easy to follow, with many clear diagrams provided. More than 300 black-and-white and color photos also illustrate this 160-page idea-packed book.

New roofing and/or siding will not only improve your home's appearance, but will make it weather-proof and more energy-efficient. So it is one of the best investments around these days.

Look for "Successful Roofing and Siding" in your bookstore. If it's not there, order from Structures Publishing Company, Box 423, Farmington, MI 48024. It costs $4.95 paperback, $12.00 clothbound.

Talk about the energy crisis isn't going to go away. Something else that isn't going to go away is the rising cost of heating and lighting your home, so learning to economize in gas and electricity is smart thinking as well as good citizenship.

"How to Cut Your Energy Bills" is a new book that provides you with every possible wrinkle about saving fuel in the home. It tells you how to cope with both winter and summer—everything you need to know about insulation, making inexpensive storm windows, getting the best out of air conditioning.

It tells you ways to get maximum efficiency from appliances and from irreflexes.

There is even advice on simple money-saving steps in buying electric light bulbs and saving watts, plus a complete energy checklist to help you save in every area of the home.

For those who may be building new homes; adding to present ones, or renovating old ones, there are invaluable instructions with over 200 photos and diagrams that will save hundreds of dollars in future maintenance.

Or, if you are interested in finding out about heat pumps and solar heating—and whether they are practical for you—that information is here, too.

"How to Cut Your Energy Bills" should be at your local bookstore. If not, it can be ordered from Structures Publishing Company, Box 423, Farmington, MI 48024. It costs $4.95 paperback, $12.00 clothbound.

Amendments On Ballot

FRANKFORT — Kentuckians will vote on two constitutional amendments in the fall of 1978, but the record for approval of such amendments since 1960 doesn't forebode much success.

Since 1960 Kentuckians have approved only three amendments and they haven't approved a call for a constitutional convention since the last century.

In the 1950s Kentuckians approved an amendment to Section 186 to appropriate state common school funds on the basis of average daily attendance instead of a basis of census on school-age children.

The three amendments approved since 1960 are: 1969 to assess farm land for agricultural and horticultural purposes instead of fair cash value; 1971 to exempt the first $6,500 assessment on homesteads for tax purposes; and 1976, revision of the state's court system.

The two amendments to be voted on next year are to change the number of amendments that may be submitted to the voters at one time to four instead of the present two, and to change the election date for legislative members from odd years to even years, so newly elected legislators will have the benefit of a year's experience for interim sessions of legislative committees to familiarize themselves with questions to be brought up in the regular legislative session in even years.

This latter amendment also would provide for a 10-day session of the legislature for organizational purposes following election in the odd year. This bill became law without the governor's signature.

Proponents of the bill argue that legislators defeated or who do not choose to run for re-election spend an entire year in committee meetings planning what to present to the next legislative session. At the same time, newly-elected legislators come to a session of the general assembly without any previous knowledge of legislation to be considered or any experience.

In 1960 Kentuckians turned down a call for a limited constitutional convention and they did again in 1966, but of a different variety.

In the 1964 legislative session Gov. Edward T. Breathitt got authority to appoint a 100-member Constitutional Revision Commission or Assembly. These 100 citizens met for more than a year and a half and drafted a proposed constitution. This was submitted to the voters in 1966 and it was defeated more than 3-1.

In 1963 the voters turned down two proposals. One would have permitted 5 constitutional amendments to be submitted to the voters instead of two. The second would have removed the salary limits on state officials.

The Court of Appeals in 1965 in effect passed the second amendment when they handed down their landmark decision of the rubber dollar. This decision said that the present salary limits set in the Constitution were in terms of the dollar in 1891 and that inflation has changed so that the same amount of purchasing power today requires higher salary limits.

The 1974 legislature extended the "rubber dollar" opinion to the homestead exemption amendment. The exemption this year is $8,900 and goes up with inflation, adjustments being made about every two years.

Revenue Commissioner Maurice Carpenter said in a telephone interview this figure will be adjusted next January and "I expect it to be above $10,000." This will be some relief to the hard-pressed elderly who are living on fixed incomes.

Has President Promised Too Much?

NEW YORK (AP) — Has President Carter promised too much, perhaps even been inconsistent, in saying he would work simultaneously for less inflation, continued growth and smaller oil imports?

Nothing mutually exclusive about such goals, economists agree. But perhaps, said some of those questioned about the triad, the improper execution might make all three goals unattainable.

Today In History

By The Associated Press
Today is Tuesday, April 18, the 108th day of 1978. There are 257th days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:
On this date in 1906, San Francisco was hit by an earthquake. The quake and fires destroyed half the city.

On this date:
In 1776, the American patriot, Paul Revere, made his famous ride in Massachusetts from Charlestown to Lexington to warn the Colonists of the approach of British troops from Boston.

In 1847, American forces captured Cerro Gordo Hill in Mexico. It was the first point of resistance on Gen. Winfield Scott's march on Mexico City.

In 1942, early in World War II, an air squadron led by Lt. Gen. James Doolittle took off from an aircraft carrier, and attacked Tokyo and other Japanese cities.

In 1946, the League of Nations officially went out of existence.

In 1970, President Richard Nixon greeted the Apollo 13 astronauts in Hawaii after their harrowing, unsuccessful attempt to make a moon landing.

In 1974, Egypt announced it was ending more than 18 years of exclusive reliance on Soviet arms supplies and would seek armaments elsewhere.

Ten years ago: Many telephone workers left their jobs across the United States in the first national strike against the Bell System in 21 years.

Five years ago: A delegation from Peking arrived in Washington to prepare for the opening of Communist China's first official mission to the United States.

One year ago: A Pulitzer Prize went to the American writer, Alex Haley, for his bestseller tracing his origins back seven generations to an African village.

Today's birthday: Actor and producer Robert Hooks is 41 years old.
Thought for today: For what is a man profited, if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul? — the Bible.

Questions concerning the goals were put to several prominent economists. Here are their answers:

Q. Would not limiting oil imports slow domestic economic growth?

A. By itself, yes, but we must consider the total energy-anti-inflation program rather than just one aspect of it. Some say, for example, that if inflation were restrained growth might be spurred, regardless of the higher oil cost resulting from import restrictions.

Jack Carlson doubts this. The chief economist of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce claims passage of the House energy bill — preferred by the president — would cut the 1981 economy by 1.2 percent.

Carlson, who insists his figures have remained unchallenged by anyone in the House, maintains the loss in Gross National Product would be 2 percent, or $51 billion, by 1985. And continue in that direction.

By then, he continues, it would also mean disposable income would be $778 less than it might have been, and that the economy would be producing 1 million fewer jobs than otherwise would be created.

Q. But what about those offsets?
A. We must consider them, we must consider the entire package. Walter Heller, former chief economic adviser to Presidents Kennedy and Johnson, believes industry might learn to be more energy-efficient.

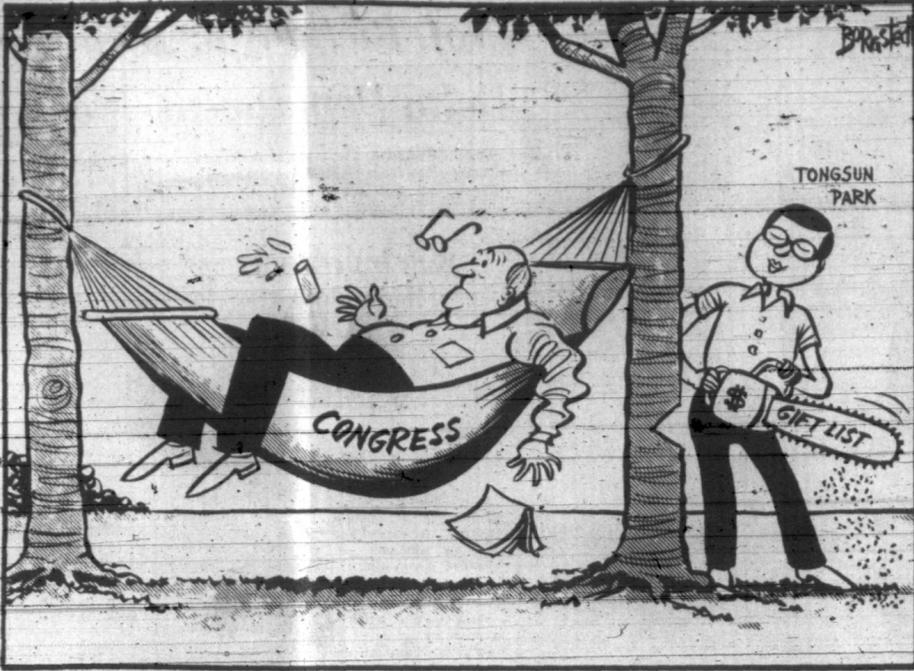

Says Walter Hoadley, chief economist of the Bank of America: We must assume a program, not referred to by Carter in his inflation talk last week, to increase production of nuclear fuel, coal and domestic oil.

And Murray Weidenbaum, director of the Center For The Study of American Business in St. Louis, reminds us the nation still can have positive growth, although slower, while cutting energy usage.

Said Albert Cox, president of Merrill Lynch Economics, "The less inflation the more growth; the less government spending the more growth." But, he said, "that's not what he's doing."

Q. Wouldn't import fees or excise taxes on imported oil be inflationary?
A. Yes, by itself such action would be inflationary. Again, economists remind us of the potential offsets, for example, the promise to hold down deficits, and wage-price restraints.

Several economists queried feel the offsets are not entirely clear. And those that are clear, some fear, may not be lived up to by the Carter administration. Several alluded to that possibility.

To Get Away From It All, Head For Missouri's Big Springs

Now that spring has sprung and if perhaps you feel an urge to get out to commune with nature, let me suggest a "mini-vacation," a two-day jaunt across the Mississippi into the big springs country of the Missouri Ozarks. Big Spring is at Van Buren, Alley Spring at Eminence, Round Spring just to the north, Blue Spring off 106 east of Eminence and Johnson's Shut-Ins at Lesterville. All reflect the wonders of nature in a fascinating way.

Looking Back

10 Years Ago

Marguerite Carr of Lexington will be the speaker at the annual spring conference of District I of the Business and Professional Women's Clubs to be held at the Murray Woman's Club house on April 21 with the Murray club as hostess.

Deaths reported include Amie Wilkerson, age 87, and Mrs. Rose Rudy Ferguson.

Elected as new officers of the Calloway County High School Chapter of the Future Teachers of America were Rita Farris, Kathy Stubblefield, Mary Janice Morton, Ruth Ann Barrow, Sharon Underwood, Wanda Garrett, Cynthia Cooper, and Ellen Watson.

The annual West Kentucky Shooting championships will be shot at Jackson Purchase Gun Club Grounds near Coldwater on April 20 and 21.

Ruth and Frances Sexton are pictured aboard the Matson Lines 55 Lurline just prior to sailing on April 6 for Honolulu, Hawaii.

20 Years Ago

Betty Jean Watson, age 19, and William Ray Oliver, age 23, both of Paducah, were killed in a car accident early yesterday morning on the s-curve at Hazel. Two other occupants of the car were injured.

Other deaths reported include Virgil McCallon, age 83.

New officers of the Murray Jaycees are Z. C. Enix, Dr. William Pogue, John Sammons, Hugh Eddie Wilson, and Robert Hopkins.

Floyd C. Arnold, metalsmith second class, is serving aboard the USS Paumas County with the U. S. Seventh Fleet in the Far East, now at Guam.

Elton Waldrop, Peggy Miller, Judy McNeely, Jackie Fain, Marilynn Lassiter, James Adams, Judy Pogue, Jerry Tarry, Rachel Chester, and Diane Morton are members of the cast of the play, "The Skelton Walks," to be presented by the Junior Class of Lynn Grove High School tonight at the school.

30 Years Ago

The body of Pvt. Randall Griffin will arrive here April 20 and funeral and burial services will be held at Temple Hill Methodist Church. He was killed in action on June 23, 1944.

Deaths reported include Jewel O. Page, age 52.

E. S. Ferguson, manager of the Murray Electric System, suggested that the city install a new whiteway system in the business district of the city at the meeting of the Murray City Council.

Members of Boy Scout Troop 45 had an outing at the Hendon's cabin with Scout Carmie Hendon in charge, according to Scoutmaster Ralph Wear.

Those on the campout were Doug Wearren, Frank Littlejohn, Gene Hendon, Tom Lamb, J. G. Glasgow, Billy Mott, Harry Furches, Edward Overbey, and Richard Shackelford.

When we lived in St. Louis, we often camped among the springs. The two older children were youngsters then, and we "roughed it" — sleeping in a tent, cooking on open fires, playing in the swift, clear streams and making new friends around campfires at night.

Until last week, however, we hadn't spent any appreciable time in that area — known as the Ozark National Scenic Riverways because of the swift-flowing Current River — in 15 years. We barely recognized some of our favorite places, now beautiful state parks.

Here's what I would suggest for you if you would like to make this trip.

Go first to Columbus, and, for a change, cross the Mississippi on the Columbus-Belmont ferry, one of the few still operating on the river. It takes about 15 minutes to cross (if you catch it on the Kentucky side), and the fee is $3 per car. A huge tractor-trailer rig crossed with us, and the weight of the thing forced the front of the ferry beneath the water. I watched this closely all the way across — from the other end.

After climbing the sandy bank on the Missouri side, you follow Highway 80 across the table-flat Missouri bottom lands, through East Prairie to Interstate 55. Eight miles north you hit Highway 60 and head west past Sikeston, through Poplar Bluff to Van Buren, some 85 miles down the road.

Big Spring is 75 yards in diameter and gushes forth millions of gallons of clear, cold, blue-green water to feed the twisting Current. John boat excursions are available at Big Spring park, and there's a campground, picnic area, lodge and cottages. The lodge also has a fine dining area. We've eaten there several times, but it hadn't opened for the season when we were there last week.

Van Buren is a little town of 750, right on the Current River. It relies largely on vacationers for much of its income. On a typical summer day, the Current is alive with people floating past on canoes, rubber rafts and inner tubes, all of which are advertised everywhere.

Extremely friendly, the people promote their area and load you down with brochures, litter bags and maps wherever you stop. There are several comfortable motels in Van Buren, and the Big Spring Restaurant, "featuring the Blue Room," is a pleasant surprise.

Apparently the most popular place in town, judging from the breakfast and early coffee drinking crowd, it has a touch of elegance uncommon to the area. Jack Stalcup and his Paducah band are scheduled for a "candlelight buffet" and dance in the Blue Room April 28.

From Van Buren, you can go 11 miles west on Highway 60 to Winona, then north on 19 for 12 miles to Eminence. Seven miles from Eminence is Alley Spring State Park. Alley was a family camping favorite of ours in the years past, but we hardly recognized it. Missouri, taking a page from Kentucky's tourism book, is rapidly developing its park system, and Alley surely is one of its most beautiful.

The spring at Alley is about 100 yards in diameter and pours its waters into Jack's Fork of the Current. Beside it and carefully preserved is an old, red grist mill with its three stories of antique, water-driven machinery.

From Alley Spring and Eminence, you can head east over Missouri 106 past the old powder mill at Owls Bend and Blue Spring, considered by many the most beautiful spot in Missouri. You hit Highway 21 at Ellington and head north for your next stop — Johnson's Shut-Ins.

The Shut-Ins are a massive maze of huge, time and water-worn boulders through which the Black River tumbles. Youngsters delight in climbing across the rocks above the swift, churning waters.

When we used to visit the Shut-Ins, it was privately owned. You had to walk a half-mile along a path to the rocks, but this area, too, has been developed. Now owned by the state and converted into a beautiful park, it also offers camping and picnic facilities.

Although we were ready to head for Murray from the Shut-Ins, a tourist-minded lady at a small grocery nearby urged us to visit one more park before we headed home. Only seven miles away we found Elephant Rocks State Park, composed of huge granite boulders, many shaped like elephants and some at least 100 feet high.

Paved, marked trails lead through and over them past the quarry from which the granite cobble stones were cut for the early streets of St. Louis. Elephant Rocks was a new and fascinating experience for us. Our Jeff thought they were "neat," and had a great time climbing over them.

From Elephant Rocks, it's a short ride back down Missouri 20 to Ironton where you pickup 72 east to historic Fredericktown, Jackson and Cape Girardeau and Interstate 55, then south to Sikeston and the circle is complete.

From Sikeston, you can either take the ferry back across the Mississippi at Columbus, or take your place in the long line of cars and trucks waiting turns to creep across the single lane over the bridge at Cairo.

Gun Control Plan Sneaky

REP. GEORGE HANSEN (Idaho) — Frustrated Federal bureaucrats who have had little success in Congress with strong Federal gun control proposals seem to be again moving to the back door approach.

The Department of Treasury's Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms control has proposed new regulations calling for the indexing of all firearms imported or manufactured in the United States.

In addition the new proposed rules by the Bureau requires each Federal firearms licensee to report to the Bureau any theft, loss, or recovery of a firearm.

All licensed manufacturers will be required to submit a quarterly report of firearms manufactured. The licensed manufacturers, importers, and dealers must also submit to the Bureau a quarterly report of firearms dispositions.

No matter how you word it, it still amounts to gun control. During the last session of Congress, gun control legislation was defeated. Now the administration is trying to make an end run and, in effect, require registration without congressional approval.

I am also gravely concerned over the (OSHA) Occupational Safety and Health Administration's move to cripple sport hunting in the United States.

In a recent Louisiana case OSHA officials ruled that hunters represent a real hazard to timberworkers when they are not controlled.

The implications of control in the position now being taken by OSHA are so far reaching that they stagger the imagination.

Letter To The Editor

On Dog Poisoning

Dear Editor:
This letter is in response to two recent letters to the editor concerning the poisoning of animals in this community.

Gay Gibson has questioned whether animals have actually been poisoned, suggesting that munching on spoiled gravy could have poisoned dogs. It is highly unlikely, however, that spoiled gravy could produce either arsenic or strychnine, which have been diagnosed as the agents of suffering and death in several instances. Despite Ms. Gibson's contention that it is "very unlikely that a dog or cat could be poisoned, or come to any other harm in his own yard," at least one dog, living some distance from any neighbor and let outside for only a few minutes, was obviously deliberately poisoned in its own yard. The same dog has been poisoned twice under the same circumstances. A resident of southeast Murray recently found a hot dog with a strychnine tablet imbedded in it in his own front yard.

In her letter, Mrs. Edward J. Shepard attempts to justify the poisoning of animals which are not controlled by their owners and which menace humans and their property. Kentucky law, however, does not condone the poisoning of dogs for any reason. If neighbors' dog are indeed a menace, one wonders why Mrs. Shepard does not call the county warden and have them impounded in accordance with the law.

Why doesn't she avail herself to the remedy provided by the law instead of justifying the violation of the law? Certainly, dog owners should obey the leash law, and prevent their dogs from becoming nuisances. But their irresponsibility does not excuse such a heartless and contemptible practice as poisoning animals. And what will justify the death of a child who happens across poison left out for animals?

As a result of recent poisoning, the Humane Society of Calloway County has posted a $500 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of any individual who willfully poisons dogs and cats. When added to a similar reward offered by the American Humane Association the reward totals $1,000. Let's hope the reward will deter would-be poisoners, and that dog owners will show some consideration for the rights and feelings of their neighbors as well.

Sincerely,
Keith M. Heim, President
Humane Society of Calloway County

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

If you have moved into or looked at a new house lately, you may have noticed that the architect or builder has left more and more of the lighting up to the homeowner.

There are few, if any, ceiling electrical fixtures in such a house. But there are lots of outlets along the baseboards. The concept is that lighting is an important element in the design and furnishing of any room and that it should be up to the people who live in the house to decide where the lights should be.

Generally, when an existing house has electrical fixtures in the ceilings of all the rooms, it was built a long time ago. In recent years, most ceiling fixtures have disappeared except in the kitchen and bathroom, with occasional other exceptions in dining rooms.

To most persons, lighting has been an afterthought when furnishing a home. First, people choose carpeting, a sofa, then some chairs and end tables, then the rest of the furniture. Standing lamps, table lamps and desk lamps are selected from a variety of standard, existing pieces. Fairly recently, lighting has come into its own as an integral part of the furnishing process.

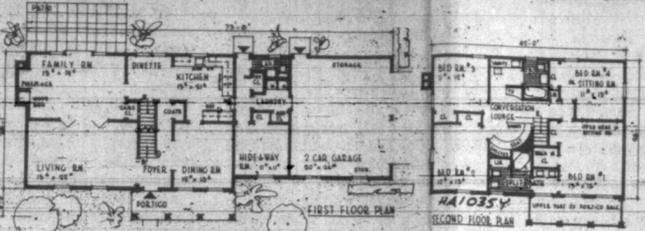

"The reason for this," says Dan Thomson, president of Halo Lighting, "is that homeowners now have available, in miniature, the kind of directional lighting that once came only in sizes and shapes designed for large commercial showrooms, galleries and museums. The miniaturization of lampholders entered a new phase with the introduction of a series proportioned and styled with an exciting European flair rather than the traditional types."

Residential track lighting, easy to install by the do-it-yourselfer, makes it possible to illuminate those areas in the house which are the last to see the light and to dramatize a room by focusing on such objects as a hanging plant, a collection or a painting. In residential track lighting, the track itself contains two thin copper wires, making it a continuous linear power source. You can move the lampholder anywhere along the track and twist it to point in the desired direction. No separate electric wiring is necessary because the electrical connection is made automatically as the lampholder is snapped on to the track. You can change the direction of the light at will as easily as moving a clothespin along a clothesline. A twist of the wrist unlocks the lampholder from the track; another twist reattaches it.

In addition to its versatility, the use of the track can add to the living space of a room because it doesn't take up any floor or table space. It's an energy saver, too, since it achieves more illumination for a particular area with less wattage. To take care of specific lighting problems in certain parts of a home, there are also individual canopy-mount lampholders and pinups that, as spotlights, bring light to such areas as a winding basement staircase, a back porch, a closet or any part of any room in a house in which a single light will do the job.

(Do-it-yourselfers will find much valuable information in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," available by sending $1.50 to this newspaper at Box 5, Teaneck, N.J. 07666.)

HOMES FOR AMERICANS

THE ENTIRE FRONT of this two-story home is brick, accented by a portico on both levels. Q.—We are turning an old porch into an extra room and are having some trouble deciding on a window at the front. We know that regular windows can be purchased in standard sizes already to be inserted in the framing, but now we are thinking about the possibility of putting in a bay window. Can it be bought ready-made?

A.—Yes. It can be purchased as a complete unit, including the casing. You will have to check the local building regulations, as some of them require that the bay window be supported by a special footing and foundation attached to the regular foundation.

Q.—Sometime within the next few months, our family may attempt to put up a log cabin, not for a vacation home but as a year-round residence. We understand there are many places where kits are sold with all the materials necessary for constructing the house. Do you have any idea of what these kits cost and where they can be obtained?

A.—The kits have a price range as wide as that for houses in general. You can get them for a few thousand dollars to more than $100,000, depending on how large a cabin or log home you want. Write for some of the available brochures and catalogs from different companies and then decide what you want to do. In making your assessments, remember to be sure you know what each kit contains so that you will have an idea of what extra costs there are, as for plumbing, wiring, heating, etc. Some of the places to write for information are: Wickes Lumber, 515 N. Washington St., Saginaw, Mich. 48607; New England Log Homes, 2301 State St., Hamden, Conn. 06518; Ward Cabin Co., P.O. Box 72, Houlton, Maine 04730; and Boyne Falls Log Homes, Boyne Falls, Mich. 49713. There are literally dozens of other companies that sell log cabin kits, but those happen to be firms whose addresses are handy at this time.

Q.—Some time ago I read somewhere, perhaps in your column, that certain metals should not be placed against each other. Now I am faced with a problem of that sort, but can't recall the details. I expect to put up aluminum gutters around my house, but the present downspouts are steel and in good condition. Do I have to replace the downspouts and are aluminum and steel two metals that do not react badly?

A.—When aluminum and steel are in contact with each other, an electrolytic action occurs that results in corrosion. Therefore, if you want to avoid this problem, you should replace the steel downspouts with aluminum or leave the downspouts as they are and use steel gutters.

Q.—A few years ago, I constructed an outdoor shed 10 feet by 7 feet from materials purchased at a building supply dealer. The panels of the shed are wood. I never finished the wood, since it seemed to have some kind of clear finish already on it. The panels now are getting kind of messy and I am thinking about using varnish on them. Should I use spar varnish?

A.—There are additional details required in order to give a precise answer, such as the kind of wood, whether the old finish was on the surface or in the wood, and what you mean by "messy," which can be anything from dirty to blistered. Generally, however, paint is considered a more durable finish for exterior wood than a clear finish. If you want to retain the character of the wood, use a wood preservative or stain.

(The techniques of using varnish, shellac, lacquer, stain, bleach, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," available by sending 35 cents and a long STAMPED, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N.Y. 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column, but individual correspondence cannot be undertaken.)

The WEEDERS GUIDE Easy home fix-up

By EARL ARONSON
AP Newsfeatures

There are five carnivorous plants that consume small creatures, mostly insects.

The National Wildlife Federation's Ranger Riek's Nature Magazine says the plants do this to compensate for a lack of nitrogen in the soil of wetlands where they live.

Perhaps the best known is the Venus Flytrap, found only along the coast of the Carolinas. Others are the Bladderwort, Butterwort, Pitcher Plant and Sundew.

They don't have to chase their prospective meals, since nature has equipped them with a bait and trap. Despite portrayal by science fiction, they are not man-eaters.

Venus Flytrap, which likes mosquitos, is only six inches in diameter. Its leaves resemble green jaws, with long, spike-like teeth on either side. The Flytrap itself has become an endangered species.

There are three sensitive hairs on each side of the leaf. The jaws snap shut when an insect lands on a leaf and touches the hairs. Juices within the plant digest the meal.

The Bladderwort lives under water and "gulps" tiny animals. The leaves are small, hollow bladders with hairs around the opening. When the hairs are touched the trap door opens and the insect is sucked in.

The Butterwort has long, slender stems topped with purple flowers. A low cluster of leaves has a sticky substance that attracts victims. When an insect crawls onto a leaf, its legs and body stick. As it works to escape, the leaf curls up and engulfs the bug.

The Pitcher Plant has red-streaked leaves shaped like the mouth of a pitcher. A sweet-smelling nectar lures the victims to climb into the pitcher's mouth. Inside the leaf is slick and the insect slips down.

The story says skeletons of many insects and the bones of a tiny frog have been found inside the Pitcher Plant.

Some insects are immune to the Pitcher's powerful digestive fluid and live inside the plant.

Sundews are tentacle plants found all over the world. They have sticky droplets that draw their prey. When an insect holds it until the hairs around the edge fold over the victim and the droplets begin their digestive chore.

How About Liberty
The 1978 All-America pickle Liberty doesn't need a pickler variety to be blended in with the hybrid seed. It produces both male and female flowers on the same plant. Liberty was developed by North Carolina University.

Another new item is Ichiban eggplant. Ichiban means Number One, and it is said to have been the earliest to produce in tests. Also, from six plants, the producer said, 476 fruits were plucked, compared to 115 for the next most bountiful variety.

Which Side Up?
You don't have to worry about which side of a seed should be face up when planted — as you do with bulbs and corms. An exception is the big lima or butterbean seeds, which are so broad they have to struggle to get their sprouts through clay soil: The National Garden Bureau says it doesn't seem to matter whether the eye is up or down because as long as it isn't flat the seed can rotate easily once it sends down a root and gains leverage. If good soil it doesn't matter much which way you plant the seed.

Here's How Sizing Up a Convalescent Home

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures

Many children persuade their aging parents to give up their homes and enter convalescent care centers. But these facilities are not for everyone.

It may even be cheaper to consider other alternatives. For example, someone to share the home in exchange for aiding the aged parent in maintaining it.

"My children feared that I was in danger from fire, falling down stairs, everything you can think of, so they persuaded me to go to a nursing home for a time, while they were away," one woman said.

One girl had to spend a year in Europe on a teaching job and the other was moving to California, she explained. "So they closed our house and I said I would try it."

The only trouble was, she said, that she was like a fish out of water — the other people were mainly senile, and she soon felt that she would go mad unless she could get back to her own home. She finally made it by persuading a relative to live with her until her older girl returned from Europe.

"Many people need such care and more convalescent centers have added good nursing facilities, but most of these centers are not really for well people," the woman said.

Before choosing such a facility for a parent or close relative, give it lots of thought, this former patient advises. Here are some suggestions from her and others:

— Visit the facility and make sure it represents the needs of your relative. Are the people in a similar age group?

— Does your relative have good teeth? If not, she may be put on a soft diet that does not offer as much protein as chewy meats and other foods. Try to get her teeth repaired before sending her to one of these homes.

— Visit the nursing home from time to time at different hours before you make a decision. Wander about the building and observe the recreation offered. Good nursing homes try to get patients out of bed and into some kind of daily activity if they are able.

— Does the staff seem sympathetic to the patients' needs, yet firm in getting them involved in doing the best for themselves — bathing, eating, camaraderie, and so on.

— Visit the person from time to time to see if she is happy in her new home. If not, seek another where her needs would be better served.

— If it is possible, the elderly parent or relative should be taken out from time to time. "The saddest thing," commented one former short-term resident, "is the son or daughter who makes infrequent visits and then always comments that 'we will have you home one weekend soon.'" Somehow that weekend never arrives.

500 Fans Watch As A's Better Record To 7-3

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

The skies were overcast, a stiff wind was blowing and only about 500 spectators were on hand.

The Oakland A's felt right at home in Bloomington, Minn., Monday, where they beat the Minnesota Twins 7-2 for their sixth victory in the last seven games.

Picked by most experts to lag near the bottom of the American League's West Division, the A's have gotten off to a surprising 7-3 start.

runs, it makes it easy," said Botham, a UCLA product who used to be a Dodger fan.

In other National League action, the Philadelphia Phillies defeated the Pittsburgh Pirates 6-2; the New York Mets trimmed the St. Louis Cardinals 6-2; and the San Francisco Giants defeated the Atlanta Braves 5-1.

Phillies 6, Pirates 2
Jim Lonborg and Tug McGraw combined on a seven-hitter to lead Philadelphia over Pittsburgh.

Mets 6, Cardinals 2
Doug Flynn smashed a tie-breaking single in the fourth inning and contributed another run-scoring hit in the sixth to lead New York over St. Louis in a contest delayed two hours and 22 minutes by three rain delays.

Flynn's hits backed the strong pitching of right-hander Nino Espinosa and pinned the defeat on Cardinal left-hander Pete Falcone.

Giants 5, Braves 1
Willie McCovey's two-run triple capped a three-run, fifth-inning rally that led Vida Blue and San Francisco over Atlanta.

Blue was scheduled to pitch no more than seven innings in his second start of the season. The left-hander missed 19 days of spring training late in March after the Oakland A's traded him to the Giants.

Cronin Fires 65, Racer Golfers Win At Western

By MIKE BRANDON
Ledger & Times Sports Editor

One swing cost Bobby Cronin a perfect game. However, Cronin wasn't throwing a baseball in his attempt at a perfect game.

Cronin fired a five-under par to lead the Murray State golf team to a one-stroke win in the OVC western division quadrangular meet.

"He had an almost perfect round of golf, with the exception of a bogey on the 14th hole, a tough par three," Racer coach Buddy Hewitt said.

"And he could have had an even better round. On the 18th hole, he missed a two and one-half foot putt for a birdie. But it was a sloping green and a missable putt," Hewitt said.

"I'm very pleased Bobby is starting to show the potential I feel he has and I think he's going to balance us out very well for the OVC playoffs. The rest of our players were all very complimentary of Bobby's round," Hewitt added.

Cronin played the front side in four under par. He had birdies on three, five, eight and nine to come in at 31. On the back side, he had birdies on 10 and 11 then his only bogey of the day came on 14. He parred the rest of the way out, finishing with a 34 on the back nine.

"At the turn, we were leading by 10 shots and as a team, we were six under par," Hewitt said.

"But on the back nine, we were 11 over. After they found they had the big lead, they got a little concerned and started protecting the lead instead of playing the course and it almost cost us the match.

"I feel like this is the time of the year when you have to get something going. I asked the boys before the match to play as relaxed as possible and of course, we were playing without any local knowledge of the course. None of our golfers have ever played the course before," Hewitt added.

Cronin won the title by three strokes as Middle Tennessee's Emile Vaughn was second with a 68. Only a miracle shot put him that close as on the 18th hole, Vaughn made an eagle two from 90 yards out.

As for the rest of the Racer scoring, Tom Fischer came in with a 73 with a 36-37 while Larry Patton played the front side in two under 33 but had a 40 on the back nine for a 73.

Jeff Teller had a 34 on the front side but had a 40 on the back side and finished with a 74. Also playing for the Racers was Brian McDonald. He had a 40-36 for a 76 total.

The victory was a confidence builder for the Racer golfers. East Tennessee is favored to win the OVC title and last week in the Tennessee Intercollegiate Golf Tournament, Middle edged out the Bucs by one stroke for the crown.

In Kentucky, Eastern is expected to be the top OVC school. The OVC Tournament will be played May 14 and May 15 at Fall Creek Falls State Park in Spencer, Tennessee. The tourney will be a 54-hole event with 27 holes to be played each day.

Black Hawks Score Off Bruins But Not Enough

By FRANK BROWN
AP Sports Writer

The Chicago Black Hawks did a lot better against the Bruins Monday night than they did in two regular-season visits to Boston Garden.

The Bruins shut out Chicago three times in four meetings during the 1977-78 National Hockey League season, including 1-0 and 7-0 triumphs at Boston Garden. Monday night's 6-1 Bruins triumph over the Black Hawks in the opener of their quarter-final playoff series raised the season's scoring totals to Boston 19, Chicago 5.

In the other quarter-final openers Monday night, the Montreal Canadiens scored a 6-2 victory over the Detroit Red Wings, the New York Islanders beat the Toronto Maple Leafs 4-1 and the Philadelphia Flyers downed the Buffalo Sabres 4-1.

Tiger Golfers Finish Second In Triangular

The Murray High golf team placed second in a triangular match at Paducah Monday.

Tilghman won the match with a 163 total while the Tigers were a stroke off the pace at 164 and Cape Central a very distant third with a 192 total.

Buddy Bryant of Paducah Tilghman shot a 38 to claim medalist honors. Rounding out the Tilghman scoring were Greg Overstreet with a 40, Jim Bundy with a 42 and Tim Jones with a 43.

For Murray High, Howard Boone and Lynn Sullivan each fired a 39 while Greg Cohoon had a 42 and Trent Jones a 44. David Ryan also played and shot a 49.

For Cape, Howard had a 43, Bertram a 46, Fisher a 51 while Nelson and Wilhem each shot 52.

The Murray High golfers are 1-2 on the season and will host Fulton City today, powerful Eddie Oak Thursday and Calloway County Friday.

Jackson Goes From Selling Candy To Pushing His Baseball Scrapbook

NEW YORK (AP) — "A catalogue of memories that helped strengthen many characters," Reggie Jackson scribbled on the fly leaf.

"I wrote every caption myself — this is a compilation of my innermost feelings," the New York Yankees' $3 million super star added Monday in launching his newest enterprise with an autograph session at a Fifth Avenue book store.

It's "Reggie Jackson's Scrapbook," a slick pictorial autobiography in paperback, price $5.95 marked down temporarily to $4.76.

Advertised in the local papers, the personal appearance drew several hundred admirers — men, women and a flock of kids playing hooky from school.

After signing one book for a thin, 14-year-old ninth grader named Kimi Schaye, Reggie was taken aback when the girl thrust a lined sheet of paper under his nose.

"What's this?" Jackson asked.

"Our excuse," the girl replied. Jackson perused the scrawl, which said: "Mr. Stanfield: Due to a previous engagement with Reggie Jackson, Kimi, Tracey and Michelle were absent 4-17-78."

Reggie smiled and signed. "For my teacher," Kimi beamed. "That ought to do the trick."

There were scores of tykes, some wearing Yankee pin stripes and helmets in the block-long queue that kept Jackson's left hand busy well past the hour allotted for the occasion.

Gregory Hairston, another ninth grader in a Yankee batting helmet, was first in line, having shown up at 8 a.m., four hours before the scheduled signing ceremony.

One lady gave her name, and Reggie looked up quickly. "You're from Connecticut," he said. "Thanks for your telegrams."

"I was surprised," said Pat Link of Bridgeport, Conn., afterward. "I sent him telegrams before the fifth and sixth games of the World Series and another one this year when the team opened the season in Arlington, Texas. I was amazed he remembered. Maybe he doesn't get many telegrams."

The book is 120 pages of "Jaxabilia" — a self-portrait of the game's most talked-about personality, covering the spectrum from childhood to those three Ruthian home runs that won the 1977 World Series.

As a kid: "I was a bad actor — a mischievous kid who stayed in trouble. I broke windowpanes, put mud on people's car windows. I didn't steal or rob, just a mischievous kid."

On Charles O. Finley: "A tremendous innovator...old-fashioned grit...his failure was failure to relate to people."

On leaving the Oakland A's: "It was a very lonely walk from the clubhouse to the car.... Tears were shed... It was like breaking away from a family."

On Alvin Dark: "He helped me find an inner peace."

On George Steinbrenner: "I was his project...his idea, his decision, his money...he stuck with me."

On his class with Billy Martin: "It was part of a bad dream.... The media made both us brawlers, tried to pit us against each other."

On first visit to Baltimore as a Yankee: "They threw beer at me, they hung a Black Sambo in right field. They threw banana skins, stones, firecrackers, eggs and apples.... My family could not go to the ball game because of fear."

Reflection — Jackson to Jackson: "They call you a mercenary. You're not human — you're a selfish, egotistical, one-way person and that is the way they treat you. Why? Because you believe in yourself."

Tigers Romp Marshals 15-4, 5-1 On Season

Murray High ran its baseball record to an impressive 5-1 with an easy 15-4 win at Marshall County Monday.

Sophomore righthander Kim Wilson worked the distance on the mound for the Tigers. All four of the Marshall County runs were unearned as the Tigers committed three errors.

Wilson fanned five batters and walked six.

Murray took a 1-0 lead in the first when Kim Wilson walked, stole second and eventually scored when Brad Taylor singled. The lead was short-lived as the Marshals countered with two in their half of the frame.

A walk, an error and a two-run single by Darrell Van Meter produced the Marshall County runs.

Murray went ahead 4-2 by scoring three runs in the top of the third. Using their famous two-out rally, the Tigers loaded the bases on singles by Bruce Taylor and John Denham then Dean Cherry reached on an error.

Mickey Spann drew an RBI walk and two other runs scored on passed balls. Marshall County, which handed the Tigers a game last week with some costly and embarrassing errors, had six errors Monday.

Murray put the game away in the fourth with a seven-run explosion for an 11-2 lead.

Two walks and a hit batsmen loaded the bases and after one out, freshman Bruce Taylor walked to force in a run. Denham laced a two-run single then Cherry followed with a two-run single. A passed ball scored another run and the final tally of the inning scored when Thomas Kendall singled.

After Murray scored three runs in the top of the sixth and the Marshals failed to score in their half of the inning, the game was stopped because of 10-run rule.

The key hit in the three-run sixth for Murray was a two-run single by Brad Taylor.

The Tigers used 16 players in the contest.

Murray is scheduled to play a home twinbill today with Henry County. Wednesday, Fulton County is here for a 4 p.m. single game before the Tigers have a big twinbill Thursday.

In the first game Thursday, the Tigers will meet Tilghman at 4 p.m. then in the 7 p.m. nightcap, it will be Murray High going against Reidland.

Friday, Murray High and Calloway County will play a 4 p.m. game at Holland Stadium. The Lakers will be the host team.

ASLEEP AT THE WHEEL — MSU assistant football coach Tommy Liggins was really awake, though most felt he was probably sleeping as he was smoked in a wheelchair race at the Special Olympics Saturday. Liggins was a big loser to all the kids taking part in the Special Olympics were big winners.

The Calloway County High School baseball team played well at Trigg County Monday...for three innings.

After three innings, the Lakers and the host Wildcats were locked in a 3-3 deadlock.

But in the last of the fourth, Trigg County came up with five runs then in the last of the fifth, added five more to take a 13-3 win in a game shortened by the 10-run rule.

The Lakers used three pitchers in an attempt to find the right combination. Kelly White started and worked three and one-third frames and gave up six runs while Fred Kemp worked two-thirds of an inning and gave up two runs. Craig Rogers worked the final inning and gave up five runs before the Wildcats scored the game-ending run with two men out in the fifth.

Calloway pitchers issued a total of 10 walks and hit three batters and Trigg County managed just four basehits in the contest, the same total as the Lakers had.

Calloway had all three runs and all four of their hits in the first inning.

James Bynum opened the game with a single then Danny Rogers followed with a single. Kenneth McCuiston then smacked a ground-rule double, sending in the first Laker run.

After one man had been retired, Keith Edwards singled up the middle for two RBI's and the Lakers led 3-0.

Trigg countered with two in their half of the first then tied the game with a run in the second.

Trigg County's first two batters went down on strikes in the fourth before three consecutive walks filled the sacks then Bobby Rascoe belted a three-run double for a 6-3 Wildcat lead.

After another walk, a twobase error sent in two more runs and it was an 8-3 game.

Calloway loaded the bases in their half of the fourth as an error and two walks gave the Lakers a chance with two outs but Trigg County worked out of the jam.

In the top of the fifth, the Lakers again loaded the bases and again, Trigg County escaped unharmed.

Trigg ended the game in the fifth as the Wildcats used two singles, two men hit by pitches, a walk and two Laker errors to score five times for the 10-run lead.

The Lakers fall to 1-5 on the season and will host Fancy Farm today before hosting Wingo Wednesday. Lowes is here for a single game Thursday then the Lakers are at Murray High Friday. Calloway will continue its rugged schedule with a 1 p.m. twinbill against South Hopkins Saturday at the Murray-Calloway County Park.

Russo Has No Doubt On His Controversial Call

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

Anonymous Bob Forsch, who quietly won 20 games for St. Louis last season, has finally attracted some attention.

Forsch had the good sense to pitch a no-hitter Sunday and that's always guaranteed to turn a few heads. What's more, he managed to make it controversial because of a scorer's decision and now some people are suggesting he may not have pitched a no-hitter at all.

The box score tells us that the Phillies neglected to get any hits against Forsch and that would seem to settle the matter.

But for a fleeting moment, most of the witnesses at Busch Stadium thought they had seen a single. It fell to Neal Russo, veteran baseball writer of the St. Louis Post Dispatch, to tell them they were wrong.

Russo was the official scorer at Sunday's game and as soon as Garry Maddox's eighth inning shot ripped past third baseman Ken Reitz, Russo called the play an error. The no-hitter was preserved.

Every umpire who ever wrestled with a close call has offered this bit of philosophy to critics who offer opinions that a runner was safe or out or that a pitch was a ball or a strike. "It ain't nuthin' till I call it," they like to say.

And the same thing applies to official scorers, who operate as officers of the league. Russo felt Maddox' ball could have been handled. When it wasn't, it became an error.

"I thought Reitz should have had it," Russo explained. "I called it immediately. It was an ordinary play, maybe a step to Reitz' left. The ball wasn't hit that hard. There was no doubt in my mind."

That should be good enough. Russo is an approved scorer, appointed by the league to function in that capacity. He has been scoring games for 17 years and covering baseball for 22 years. He qualifies for the job.

His call may have been a good one or it may have been a bad one. But it was his call, his job to do. And he did it. The Cardinals thought his judgment was perfect.

"Error, all the way," decided Reitz. "I came up too soon on the ball. I got my glove on it. I should have had it."

There is some differing opinion on that phase of scoring. Some official scorers believe if a major leaguer gets his glove on a ball, he should make the play, unless he has made an extraordinary effort to reach the ball. Others argue that you can only flash the "E" sign when a routine play is not executed. At issue here is whether Maddox' ball was routine. Russo and the Cardinals thought so. The Phillies, obviously, did not.

Mike Schmidt, the Philadelphia third baseman and something of an expert on the geography as a Gold Glove winner, said there was no sense debating the play. "Hit, all the way," decided Schmidt. "I think they should go to former ball players who know what the game's all about to do the scoring," he added.

The third baseman neglected to add that Russo has been covering baseball since Schmidt was 6 years old. It is possible the writer has picked up a thing or two about the game in that time.

Blue & Gold Clippings

By Mike Brandon

Day number 11 of Murray State University spring football practice was rather light. But the news wasn't.

Racer coach Mike Gottfried announced Monday some bad news. Quarterback Roger Rushing is out with a knee injury.

First-string quarterback Mike Dickens had to undergo knee surgery two weeks ago and hopefully, he'll be ready for the mid-August drills. The injury to Rushing came in last Thursday's scrimmage in Roy Stewart Stadium.

"He didn't even know he'd hurt it until it started giving him trouble later," Gottfried said.

The extent of the injury won't be known for three or four more days. If Rushing is injured badly enough to sideline him the rest of the spring, then spring practice will be in trouble.

The injury to Rushing leaves Ricky Ray as the number one quarterback while Steve Klein is second string. That's it. The Racers have no more quarterbacks.

After the scrimmage Thursday, the Racers were off the entire weekend so the coaching staff could evaluate the film.

"As for the films, we found a lot of areas for work. We are going to have to put more emphasis on our pass rush and our defensive secondary. We made a lot of mistakes and had a lot of missed assignments and that's something we're going to have to stress," Gottfried said.

Two position changes have been made. Former Murray High star Tony Boone has been moved to middle guard and Eddie Galrein has been moved to the other side of the ball, switching to a defensive tackle position. Greg King, who caught several passes in the scrimmage Thursday at split end, will also work at wingback.

"As for bright spots in Monday's practice, I'd have to say Austin Perine made a big impression. He's starting to get a feel for the wide receiver position.

"Also, both of our fullbacks, Tyrus Brown and Randy Jones, made the coaching staff take notice. Both of them had been injured but they're back in there now and really fighting for the position," Gottfried added.

Defensive end Bill Shannon, who missed the Thursday scrimmage because of an ankle injury, will be out the rest of the week.

The Racer coaching staff will go to Southern Illinois University today and watch the Salukis scrimmage. Then Friday, the Saluki staff, headed by Rey Dempsey, will come to MSU to watch the Racers work out.

"Coach Dempsey and I are very close and our staffs will be exchanging ideas and maybe we can help each other," Gottfried said.

Today is a weight day while practice will resume Wednesday. The Racers, who will play their spring game two weeks from Thursday, will probably hold a major scrimmage Saturday morning.

Milwaukee Coach Says Thompson Best In NBA

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

"Inch for inch, David Thompson is the best player in the National Basketball Association."

So says Milwaukee Coach Don Nelson, who Bucks will have to contain the explosive Thompson if they hope to win their best-of-seven quarter-final playoff series against the Denver Nuggets, which opens tonight in Denver.

"Julius Erving is a great player at 6 feet 6," says Nelson, referring to the Philadelphia 76ers' high-scoring forward, "but Thompson, at 6'4 1/2, is better inch for inch. Thompson's as complete a player as he can be for his size."

"No one jumps as high under control as Thompson does. Once Thompson's over halfcourt, I don't think anyone will take the ball away from him. He likes to put the ball on the floor, and he makes the pass better than he used to."

Thompson finished second in the league in scoring with a 27.15 average, closing out the regular season with a 73-point outburst against Detroit on 28-for-38 shooting. Nelson said he'll go with Quinn Buckner, the Bucks' rugged 6-2 playmaker, on Thompson, with other players helping out as needed.

"He'll get his points," Nelson conceded about Thompson. "The key is how he gets them. If he gets them easy, we're in trouble. If not, we have a decent chance to win."

Another quarter-final opens tonight, with the Seattle Super-Sonics at Portland against the defending champion Trail Blazers. Also tonight, the Philadelphia 76ers, leading 1-0, play the New York Knicks at Philadelphia, and the San Antonio Spurs, leading 1-0, play the Washington Bullets at San Antonio.

Bill Walton, the all-star center and key player on the Portland Trail Blazers, is expected to be in the starting lineup against Seattle tonight.

He's had problems with both his feet, including minor surgery on one, and sat out the final month of the regular season. But he's been working out for the past week and looked well enough on Monday for Coach Jack Ramsay to include him in his game plan.

Philadelphia had an easy time of it in routing New York 130-90 in Sunday's series opener, the worst playoff defeat ever suffered by the Knicks. But the Sixers are not expecting things to be so one-sided tonight.

New York certainly didn't fight back under the boards, where it was out rebounded by Philadelphia 75-46. A key factor for the Sixers was unheralded center Caldwell Jones, who scored 12 points, led all rebounders with 16 and forced Knicks ace Bob McAdoo into a 6-for-19 shooting game for 12 points, less than half his average.

To Become Free Agent

RICHFIELD, Ohio (AP) — Chuck Arnason, a right wing for the Cleveland Barons of the National Hockey League, will become a free agent if he is not signed to a new contract by June 1.

Harry Howell, general manager of the Barons, said Arnason will join back-up goalie Gary Edwards on the free-agent market this summer, barring a contract breakthrough.

Arnason, who came to Cleveland as part of a six-player trade with Colorado at midseason, had 21 goals in 39 games with the Barons. He had a total of 25 goals and 21 assists in 68 games during the season.

Bill Rodgers Wins Marathon, Closest Finish In 82 Years

By DAVE O'HARA
AP Sports Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Bill Rodgers put another trophy on display in his local sporting goods store today after winning the Boston Marathon in the closest finish of the classic's 82-year history.

"What was unique about this race was that I had a guy on my tail right to the finish line," the 30-year-old former school teacher said Monday after winning the Boston Marathon in 2 hours, 10 minutes, 13 seconds, only 18 seconds off the course record he set in 1975.

Rodgers wasn't kidding. He was actually chased to the finish line by unheralded Jeff Wells, a 23-year-old seminary student, from Dallas. Wells charged home in 2:10:15.

"I'm grateful to God, but I should have pushed more," Wells said without disappointment over his vain bid to overtake Rodgers. "I can't be disappointed. In fact, I'm just grateful that I finished second."

Rodgers, winner of four marathons last year, although he was forced to drop out after 18 miles in Boston, wore down his chief rivals in the field of 4,212 starters in the 26-mile, 385-yard Hopkinton-to-Boston run.

The victory gave Rodgers victories in the three most important world marathons in the past seven months. He previously won the New York City Marathon last October and he won at Fukuoka, Japan in December.

Frank Shorter, the 1972 Olympic marathon champion and the 1976 runner-up in Montreal, was the first to wilt Monday, falling back halfway through the race, finally settling for a 23rd-place finish in 2:18:15.

Finland's Eda Tikkanen faded on the three hills, including famed Heartbreak Hill about six miles from the finish, but hung tough and finished third in 2:11:15.

Wells moved up from sixth place at the halfway mark and just missed catching Rodgers with a blazing finishing kick in the last few miles.

Jack Fultz, former Georgetown star and winner of the 1976 Boston run, was fourth in 2:11:17, followed by Randy Thomas, a Rodgers protege, in 2:11:25, and New Zealand's Kevin Ryan, who tried to keep pace with Rodgers for 17 1/2 miles.

"I'm super pleased," Rodgers said after becoming the first American to win Boston twice since World War II. "I'm happy. At the finish I didn't know if I would make it. It was a tough pace. I was really hurting. It was just about the hardest marathon of my life."

Rodgers was cheered on by countless thousands who jammed streets for the entire route. He blew kisses to a huge gathering at the finish line as he was crowned with the traditional laurel wreath by Mayor Kevin H. White.

However, his biggest white was given to friends outside his sporting goods store about four miles from the finish.

"I've never been cheered like that before," Rodgers said. "It made me very gung ho. I had a built-in advantage."

Gayle Barron of Atlanta was the first finisher among the field of more than 200 women. Her time was 2:44:52.

Education Courses To Be Given
During University Intersession

A schedule of six courses in elementary and secondary education has been arranged at Murray State University during the spring intersession May 15-June 1 to accommodate area teachers.

Dr. John Taylor, chairman of the Department of Instruction and Learning at Murray State, said classes will meet in the late afternoons or evenings to enable teachers to commute to the campus after their schools have dismissed for the day.

"In view of recent developments concerning increases in teachers' salaries in Kentucky," Taylor noted, "we are making every effort to provide opportunities for our area teachers to take better advantage of the academic offerings at Murray State."

He gave this list of intersession courses:

Elementary 593 or Secondary 593, Programs for Gifted Students, to meet from 5 to 9 p.m. Monday through Thursday. It is a course designed to provide experiences and develop skill in effective planning, organization, and execution of educational programs for gifted and talented students. Dr. William O. Price will be the teacher.

Secondary 604, Theories of Classroom Management, to meet from 4 to 8 p.m. Monday through Friday. To be taught by Dr. Richard Usher, the course is designed to provide immediate and practical help for teachers in examining their approaches to classroom disciplinary concerns.

Elementary 613 or Secondary 613, Workshop: Dealing with Diversity, to meet from 5 to 9 p.m. Monday through Friday. Aimed at developing teachers' understanding of multicultural education, this course to be taught by Dr. Lochie Christopher is an examination of attitudes and sensitivities in an effort to eliminate divisive forms of discrimination and oppression.

Elementary 580 or Secondary 580, Special Problems in Environmental Education, taught by Shaw Blankenship May 19-20 in the Land Between The Lakes as part of a U. S. Forest Service Workshop entitled "Investigating Your Environment." The course carries on semester hour of credit.

Elementary 509, Discussion of Children and Learning, to meet from 4:30 to 7:30 p.m. Monday through Saturday with Dr. Lewis Bossing as the teacher. The course is designed to acquaint students with basic behavioral and cognitive learning theory, using theoretical concepts in the discussion of practical applications and understanding of behavior in school and other settings.

Elementary 603, Communications in Elementary School, to be taught by Dr. James Carlin from 4:30 to 7:30 p.m. Monday through Saturday. It is a study of media and techniques involved in development and mastery of the major communication skills needed by elementary school students, including creative writing, spelling, handwriting, grammar usage, and thinking.

All courses except the environmental education course carry three semester hours of credit. The 600-level courses are for graduate credit only, while the 500-level courses may be taken for advanced undergraduate or graduate credit.

Students may register in advance for the courses through April 18 in the lobby of the Student Center. Registration for those who have not registered in advance will be at 1 p.m. Monday, May 15, in the Office of Registration and Records, in Room 220 of Sparks Hall. Payment of all fees must be made not later than May 17.

Guidance Week Is Proclaimed In State

FRANKFORT — Gov. Julian Carroll has proclaimed April 23-29 Guidance Week in Kentucky.

"Guidance counselors are vital in today's society to interpret the vast array of occupational choices brought about by the constantly changing social and economic patterns," said Gov. Carroll. "Counselors are trained to help the public develop the flexibility which will permit social and occupational changes several times in a working life."

Gov. Carroll pointed out, "With the rapid technological advances and the unrest of society, the skills of parents may be less relevant and useful to their children in choosing a career."

According to Dr. Curtis Phipps, director of the Division of Guidance, and Social Work in the state Department of education, Kentucky has almost 900 counselors who work with students who are not doing well academically, students who have problems at home and those who cannot communicate with parents, teachers or peers.

"Regardless of the number of professional counselors Kentucky schools have available, they cannot do the job alone. Guidance services must be the total effort of the community, including the home, business, labor, industry and the school," said Phipps.

During Guidance Week, counselors throughout Kentucky will plan special activities designed to help students and parents learn more about career education opportunities and the vast number of career choices.

Newsman Rich Whitt Wins Pulitzer For His Beverly Hills Reporting

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP)—Newsman Richard E. Whitt of The Courier-Journal said that his Pulitzer Prize, won Monday, represented "an awful lot of dead ends and dry holes that finally paid off for me."

Whitt, 33, won the Pulitzer for general local reporting as a result of his coverage of the Beverly Hills supper club fire at Southgate, Ky., that killed 165 people last year.

Whitt, who at the time was a reporter for The Courier-Journal in northern Kentucky, spent the entire summer investigating the May 28 disaster.

He now is chief of The Courier-Journal's state government bureau in Frankfort.

When asked Monday if he had believed he had a chance of winning the Pulitzer, which carries a $1,000 award, Whitt said, "Well, at first I didn't. But I had a call from a friend last week from Washington who said we had a good chance at it. I was on pins and needles for a while."

When asked if his reference to "dead ends and dry holes" meant that he had difficulty getting information, including from public officials, Whitt said:

"Yes I did. We had some differences over what was in the public interest, shall we say. Eventually, though, it worked out pretty well. They were highly complimentary of many of the articles I had written."

Whitt also praised The Courier-Journal.

"There's a lot of good journalists and a lot who could

IN LOVING MEMORY of wife, mother and grandmother, Pauline Atkins, who passed away 1 year ago today. When I must leave you for awhile, please do not grieve and shed wild tears and hug your sorrows, to you through the years. But start out proudly with a gallant smile and for my sake and in my name, live on and do all things the same. Feed not on your loneliness, on empty day, but fill each working hour in useful ways. Reach out your hand in comfort and cheer and I in turn will comfort you and hold you near. And never, never be afraid to die for I am waiting for you in the sky. Husband and Children.

Tellico Dam Case Goes To Supreme Court

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP)—The Tennessee Valley Authority was refused to discuss alternatives, saying the reservoir is essential for building an industrial park to relieve high unemployment in the three counties surrounding the project.

When the federal General Accounting Office called for a cost-benefit study of the alternatives last November, Wagner responded such a study would be done only if Congress specifically ordered it.

"I think the TVA board is entitled to take the position that they're not interested in it and to say there's no official study under way," Freeman said. "But the TVA board is in transition and there is an interest on my part. I would dare say that shortly after May 18, this alternative will surface."

An alternative in which Freeman has expressed an interest would allow the structure to remain as a "dry dam" to be used only in the event of a severe flood.

The real issue, Freeman said, is whether TVA continues a pattern of building dams and lakes to attract industrial growth or instead chooses to preserve the region's remaining free-flowing streams.

The project has been a white elephant, its concrete jutting into the sky and the river continuing to flow through its open flood gates, since a federal appeals court ruling in January 1977.

The U.S. 6th Circuit Court of Appeals said impounding a reservoir behind the dam would destroy the free-flowing river habitat of the small darter, a three-inch fish protected by the 1973 Endangered Species Act.

TVA's appeal before the Supreme Court argues that the dam was more than 60 percent completed when the darter was discovered in 1973 and 95 percent finished when the appeals court rendered its

Ed Fulton Dead At Age of 101; Rites Held At Asbury

Final rites for Ed Fulton, age 101, were held Monday at three p.m. at the Asbury Cemetery in Calloway County with the Max Churchill Funeral Home in charge of local arrangements.

The funeral was held Monday at eleven a.m. at the Nave McReynolds Funeral Home, Clarksville, Tenn.

Mr. Fulton, a resident of Sango, Tenn., died Saturday at two p.m. at the hospital at Clarksville, Tenn. He was preceded in death by his wife, Mrs. Mae Doran Fulton. Born Sept. 2, 1877, he was the son of the late John Wesley Fulton and Sarah Jones Fulton. He had served at one time as tax assessor for Calloway County.

He is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Lucille Weathers, Nashville, Tenn., and Miss Gladys Fulton, Sango, Tenn.; three sons, Noble and Ernie Fulton, Sango, Tenn., and Eris Fulton, Clarksville, Tenn.; several nieces and nephews.

Memberships Of Oaks Club Are Approved

Eleven new family memberships and one single membership was approved by the Board of Directors of the Oaks Country Club at their April meeting held at the club with Elbert Thomason, president, presiding, Doris Conners, secretary, reading the minutes, and Susy Wells, treasurer, giving her report.

New members are Mr. and Mrs. James Hooper, Mr. and Mrs. Max Canady, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. Rodney Chatman, Mr. and Mrs. Burton Young, Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Sackelson, Mr. and Mrs. Hal Cates, Mr. and Mrs. Greg McKeel, Mr. and Mrs. Truman Whitfield, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hargrove, Mr. and Mrs. Steve Weatherford, and Doris Johnson.

Nicky Ryan, golf chairman, said the first tournament of the season will be a two man team scramble on May 6 and 7 which will be open to any two man team. He said this type of tournament is growing in popularity in this area. Given away in this event will be $3500 in prizes with equal prizes in each flight.

Ryan also announced a club scramble to be held on Sunday afternoon, April 23 instead of the date listed in the club calendar. Persons wishing to play should sign up in the pro shop.

Reports were given by Norman Lane on the work of the club house committee; by Mitchell Story, course superintendent, who said that all 18 holes were ready for golf; Wally Young, golf pro and pool manager, who was given approval for a new floor covering for the pro shop. Pro Young said golf lessons were now available through him at the club.

ADVERTISMENT

Worried About How You'll Look With a Hearing Aid?

Chicago, Ill.—A free offer of special interest to those who hear but do not understand words has been announced by Bellone. A non-operating model of the smallest Bellone aid of its kind will be given absolutely free to anyone answering this advertisement.

Send for this model, pull on and wear it in the privacy of your own home. While many people with a hearing loss will not receive any significant benefit from any hearing aid, this free model will show you how tiny hearing help can be. It is not a real hearing aid, and it's yours to keep, free. The actual aid weighs less than a third of an ounce, and it's all at ear level, in one unit.

These models are free, so we suggest you write for yours now. Again, we repeat, there is no cost, and certainly no obligation. Thousands have already been mailed, so write today to Dept. 5801, Bellone Electronics, 4201 W. Victoria St., Chicago, Illinois 60646.

Logan Woman Spends Life Preserving Cave

ADAIRVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Genevieve Savage, 70, has spent the last 25 years of her life trying to save a collection of treasures over 20,000 years old.

The treasurers are the bones and relics found inside a cave in south Logan County.

The cave is remembered by Mrs. Savage "as a place where people gathered for picnics and sometimes fought and shot craps," but she now views it as an archaeological treasure house in need of systematic exploration.

Mrs. Savage saved the cave in the 1950's when the community decided to turn it into a fallout shelter. A bulldozer roared into its main entrance, some 750 feet deep into the earth, tearing away centuries of history.

Mrs. Savage went to Frankfort and persuaded top officials to call off the fallout shelter idea, then borrowed money and bought the cave and 10 rolling acres around it.

When an inexperienced archaeologist was caught bulldozing inside the cave, Mrs. Savage ran him off. Since 1964, Mrs. Savage has pleaded for a scientific exploration of the cave and classification of its contents.

Dr. Carl F. Miller of the Smithsonian was getting ready to carry out the kind of exploration of the cave that Mrs. Savage had fought for in 1964 when he became ill and the project fell by the wayside.

Soon after the ill-fated Smithsonian effort, Mrs. Savage talked the Carnegie Institute into exploring the cave, but she says "that was a mess."

diggers carried away 2,500 bags of relics, such as the bones of bison and giant mastodon, Mrs. Savage said.

Last week Carnegie bowed out of the exploration and returned some of the relics to Mrs. Savage, who is putting them into an orderly array along with hundreds of other things she has found in the cave and fields that surround it.

Mrs. Savage says experts have told her it would cost millions of dollars and take 10 years to put the cave in adequate shape for discovery, classification and preservation.

"I had a dream, but I am running out of time, and I don't have any money," Mrs. Savage said.

She has found arrowheads and spear points that archaeologists say date back 20,000 years. The experts have told Mrs. Savage they were used to kill the giant mastodon and bison.

The cave has also produced fossilized snails, bones of the peccary, an ice-age pig, and the 5,000-year-old bones of a baby human being.

Archaeologists say beetles have been found in the cave that date back a million years. There's a waterfall deep within the cave and blind crayfish have been found in the water and although archaeologists have explored a low passageway leading 1,350 feet from the entrance, they think many areas of the cave remain to be explored.

"This was the crossroads of the continent for insects, birds and animals — and then people — at the beginning, I believe," Mrs. Savage said.

Louis G. Bourgois, III, of Paducah, a senior at Murray State University, will present a trombone recital on the campus Sunday, April 23. Scheduled to begin at 3:30 p.m. in the Recital Hall Annex of the Price Doyle Fine Arts Center, the program will include 20th Century compositions for the bass trombone. The son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis G. Bourgois, Jr. of 2420 Shawnee Lane, Bourgois is active in Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia, professional men's music fraternity. He also holds membership in the International Trombone Association, professional organization of trombonists.

Red Brigade Has Reportedly Executed Italy's Aldo Moro

ROME (AP) — A message purportedly from the terrorist kidnappers of former Premier Aldo Moro today announced his execution and said his body was dumped in a mountain lake.

The statement, bearing the signature of the Red Brigades, said the 61-year-old president of the ruling Christian Democratic Party was executed "by suicide" and thrown into Lake Duchessa, 72 miles northeast of Rome. The reference to suicide apparently was mockery.

Moro, five times a premier and probable next president of the republic, was abducted and his five bodyguards were killed by the Brigades, Italy's most feared urban guerrilla gang, in a Rome street ambush March 16. The kidnappers announced three days ago that he had been convicted in a "people's trial" and sentenced to die.

Police could not immediately confirm that today's communique was authentic. But skindivers flew to the lake in two helicopters and began looking for the body. Officials said fog in the mountains and snow piled 12 feet high were hampering search efforts.

Giuseppe Pisanu, a Christian Democrat member of parliament and a top party leader, said, "We have seen the message that, according to experts, seems authentic. We are going through hours of anguish."

Party leaders went to Moro's house in Rome to inform his wife Eleonora, and at party headquarters, grim-faced officials gathered to await word while secretaries wept in the corridors.

In the capital's streets, pedestrians held transistor radios to their ears for news broadcasts. Indoors, residents watched continuous television coverage of the latest development in the month-long Moro case.

The message was found in a trashcan in the ancient Trastevere section of Rome after a telephone call to the newspaper Il Messaggero. This was the procedure used by the Red Brigades in distributing other messages since the kidnapping.

The communique seemed to mock West Germany's announcement last fall that three jailed terrorists of the Baader-Meinhof urban gang committed "suicide" in their cells near Stuttgart. Leftists across Europe demonstrated and bombed West German installations, claiming the trio had been murdered by authorities, but the German government said subsequent investigations confirmed they died by their own hands.

Lake Duchessa is 6,000 feet up the slope of Mt. Velino in the Abruzzi region of central Italy. It is in a rugged and isolated area and access by automobile is difficult.

Following the kidnapping, the Red Brigades issued six communiqués and three letters written by Moro. The letters appealed to the government to ransom him by freeing jailed terrorists, but the Christian Democrats contended he was acting under duress and refused to bargain.

Despite a 50,000-man dragnet, police did not report a break in the case until today. But a few hours before ANSA announced the receipt of the execution announcement, the police said they found a "Red Brigades hideout on the outskirts of Rome that might have been used by the kidnappers."

The hideout, on the Via Cassia in northwest Rome near where Moro was kidnapped, contained arms, ammunition, a typewriter, several messages signed by the Red Brigades, about 600 leaflets carrying the five-point star of the Red Brigades and other objects believed to have been used in the kidnapping.

Police sources said the messages found in the apartment referred to the Moro abduction. They said investigators were examining the typewriter to determine whether it had been used to write the communiqués issued by the kidnappers.

The police said they went to the building with some firemen after a woman living beneath the hideout complained that water was pouring through her ceiling from the apartment above. The apartment was empty, so the police and firemen broke in and immediately realized it was a terrorist hideout.

Hundreds of policemen were rushed to the area and blocked traffic. After questioning the neighbors, police began a search for a young blonde woman who was said to have been in the apartment until early this morning.

Watergate Tapes Not Public Record, Supreme Court Rules

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today barred the public from listening to the 30 White House tape recordings played at the Watergate cover-up trial of aides to former President Richard M. Nixon.

The court's 7-2 decision reversed a 1976 ruling by the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals that would have made the tapes available to the three commercial television networks, public television and a recording company planning to sell copies of the tapes for home use.

"Considering all the circumstances of this concededly singular case, we hold that the common-law right of access to judicial records does not authorize release of the tapes in question," Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr. wrote for the court's majority.

The court's ruling is a major legal victory for Nixon, who persistently challenged the tapes' release as an invasion of his privacy.

Joining Powell's opinion were Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Justices Harry A. Blackmun, William H. Rehnquist and Potter Stewart.

All but Stewart were appointed to the nation's highest court by Nixon. Justices William J. Brennan Jr. and Byron R. White did not agree with all of Powell's reasoning, but they also voted to bar release of the tapes.

Dissenting were Justices Thurgood Marshall and John Paul Stevens. "Needless to say, we're gratified with the decision," said William H. Jeffress Jr., who argued the case for Nixon before the Supreme Court.

Transcripts of the tapes were highly publicized during the 1974 trial of former Attorney General John Mitchell and ex-White House aides H.R. Halde-man and John Ehrlichman. All 30 transcripts were widely quoted in part or in their entirety in newspapers and other publications.

But except for the 12-member jury and those persons who sat through all or portions of the trial, the public has never heard the actual voices of Nixon and his aides discussing the scandal that forced him from office.

Filing suit in 1976 to have the tapes released were ABC, CBS, NBC, the Public Broadcasting Service, the Radio-Television News Directors Association and Warner Communications.

The networks, public television and the news directors group sought to air portions of the tapes while Warner wanted to reproduce them for sale as records and tape cassettes.

Nixon argued that the tapes' release would invade his privacy and cause him great embarrassment.

In arguing before the justices last October, Jeffress said the former president would suffer "mental anguish" if the tapes were not kept from "every disc jockey, every television performer ... to be played relentlessly."

Nixon's attorneys argued that home sales of 22 hours' worth of White House conversations would lead to their being "played at cocktail parties and in satiric productions."

But in arguing for Warner Communications, lawyer Edward Bennett Williams had told the court: "I don't know of any common law right not to be embarrassed by one's inculpatory words."

Klan Plans For Davis Wreath May Be Stymied

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — The plans of the Ku Klux Klan to lay a wreath at the base of a monument honoring the only president of the Confederacy may run into problems related to insurance.

The Klan, as part of a rally in Hopkinsville June 3-4, wants to place the wreath at the foot of the Jefferson Davis Monument State Shrine at nearby Fairview.

However, state Parks Commissioner Bruce Montgomery said Monday they won't be allowed to get near the concrete monument because of construction.

Montgomery said persons are not allowed near the base of the 351 foot high obelisk monument while repair work is being done because of insurance considerations.

"The rest of the park is open and they have a perfect right to go there like everyone else," Montgomery said. "But the monument per se is closed. The area that is closed is roped off."

"The picnic area in the back they are welcome to use," Montgomery said. "But near the construction, they absolutely have to keep out."

The 22-acre park is located 10 miles east of Hopkinsville on U.S. 68 and Kentucky 80 near the Todd County birthplace of Jefferson Davis, president of the Confederacy during the Civil War.

Montgomery said he has not been contacted by Klan officials, but was writing Grand Wizard William Chaney of Greenwood, Ind. Monday to explain the situation with the park and the state's insurance.

Montgomery said the repair work was begun last year when large chunks of the monument, the tallest cast concrete obelisk in the world and fourth highest monument in the United States, began falling.

He said epoxy cement is being pumped into the monument to seal it and keep water from freezing and causing further damage. The repair work is being accomplished from a scaffold suspended from the top of the monument.

"It is quite an involved process and quite dangerous," Montgomery said.

The monument was completed and dedicated in 1924, which most of its approximately $200,000 cost was raised by public donation.

When the monument is open, an elevator takes visitors to an observation platform in its top.

Corrections Head To Address UCM

Dr. Chip Paddock, director of the criminology and corrections program at Murray State University, will be the featured speaker at the luncheon of the United Campus Ministry on Wednesday, April 19.

Paddock is a coordinator of the criminal justice system workshop being sponsored by the UCM, the Criminology and Corrections Program, and the Office for Continuing Education on Tuesday and Wednesday, April 18 and 19, and Wednesday, April 26.

Dr. Paddock will first make some comments on the workshop tour of Eddyville State Prison which is taking place today, Tuesday. He will follow that with an informational presentation on the criminal justice system.

Ron Christopher, local attorney, will follow with a presentation on criminal prosecution. Four discussion groups will follow led by Attorney Steve Sanders, Attorney Gary Haverstock, Eddyville Chaplain Talmadge Jones, and a former inmate of Eddyville prison.

The meal will be served at 12:15 p.m. in Wippslow Cafeteria, Murray State University. Participants will go through the regular luncheon line at a cost of $2.00. The entire program will end at 3:30 p.m.

For more information call the UCM office, 753-3531.

Kentucky's State Parks Rooms Almost Filled Up

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — Although the first tulips are just beginning to bloom, rooms at Kentucky state parks for the summer are already hard to come by.

State Parks Department officials report all cottages at the 15 resort parks are already booked for the summer, while few of the parks have any lodge rooms available over weekends.

Jackie Inman, supervisor of central reservations for the Parks Department, said as of Monday there were still some cancellations.

"But I was completely surprised," she added. "I never expected that to turn up."

However, she said people must call in each day to check on cancellations since no waiting list is kept. She said her division is just too swamped to keep a waiting list.

rooms open at Pennyrite, Pine Mountain, Greenbo, and Buckhorn state parks, and possibly a few at Cumberland Falls.

"But the cottages are all gone for the summer months of June, July and August," Mrs. Inman said. "And there are very few rooms left."

Mrs. Inman said about the only hope for someone wanting a reservation is a cancellation and pointed out she was able to get someone a room at Natural Bridge State Park over the Fourth of July weekend Monday because of a cancellation.

"But I was completely surprised," she added. "I never expected that to turn up."

However, she said people must call in each day to check on cancellations since no waiting list is kept. She said her division is just too swamped to keep a waiting list.

More than 31.1 million people visited Kentucky's state parks, shrines and museums in 1977, with 60 percent coming from out of the state.

But Mrs. Inman said Kentuckians are becoming more aware of how to get into their own parks during the summer.

"We are getting a lot more Kentucky calls," she said. "Kentucky people are waking up to the fact they have to get in early."

"It really starts up here in January," said Mrs. Inman, who oversees six employees who handle phone requests for reservations at Kentucky state parks.
