Your Changing County Government

State Law Lists Judge-Executive With Many Duties

(This is the fourth series of six articles describing changes in county government and emphasizing the new county administrative code. The first article described the changes in county government. These include the legislature's sharing of general powers called "home rule," the clarification of local executive (count judge) and legislative (fiscal court) roles; and the requirement that the county's business be carried out according to procedures written down in an administrative code.)

For years, the county engineer and road department have been the most visible county service.

But a glance at almost any county's budget will show a variety of appropriations to single-purpose agencies formed as a result of debt and revenue restrictions on the county government. Health departments, hospitals, libraries, fire protection, ambulance services and a host of other special districts and agencies are involved.

The law establishing the judge-executive also includes these duties:

—Require all officials, elected or appointed, whose offices utilize county funds, and all boards, special districts, and commissions exclusive of city governments and their agencies located within the county to make a detailed annual financial report to the fiscal court concerning the business and condition of their office, department, board, commission or special districts.

—With the approval of the fiscal court, make appointments to or remove members from such boards, commissions, and designated administrative positions as the fiscal court, charter, law or ordinance may create. The requirement of fiscal court approval must be designated as such in the county administrative code of the county charter.

Assure the representation of the county on all boards, commissions, special districts, and multi-county programs in which county participation is called for.

If you've wondered what the county judge will be doing, these responsibilities are among the heaviest.

Robert O. Miller, three-term judge of Calloway County, has described his job this way: "If you stayed around all day you'd see that I'm a father-confessor, defender of civil liberties and listener; anybody with problems in Kentucky traditionally takes them to the county judge."

Often the problem has been with the service or lack of service of one of these separate districts or agencies. But, to date, judges have had little but their personal clout to help them resolve the problem.

Now the judge-executive has statutory responsibility and the authority to address these problems.

The administrative code will have set down his plan for exercising authority. This part of the code will be tailored to fit the county more than any other. There is little guidance in existing law or regulation.

How would you answer such questions as: What information about agency operation should be included in a report? Is it written or oral report? When and how often is a report made? What happens if it isn't made?

Appointing persons to represent the county on the boards of a variety of agencies has always been one of the judge's jobs. Now he will be writing down the process to be used in making nominations and approving appointments.

The role of the fiscal court will have to be clearly spelled out.

Questions of qualification, timing for submitting and approving appointments, grounds for removal of an appointee will have to be discussed. These are the kinds of issues to be resolved and answers to be written into the administrative code.

This section, in particular, will define the roles of the county judge-executive and the fiscal court in dealing with the agencies providing local services and often using county funds.

The judge-executive also is authorized to organize and reorganize new or existing county agencies. In the smallest counties, for instance, he could personally fill such functions as fiscal manager, personnel supervisor or purchasing agent. The number of departments and personnel will vary from county to county according to size and the services it can support.

The statutes provide only general guidance about a county's internal administrative structure. Only two officials are specifically required, the county road engineer and county treasurer.

State School Board Asked To Limit Sale Of Competitive Food

By HERBERT SPARROW

Associated Press Writer

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP)—The state Board for Elementary and Secondary Education is being asked to discourage the sale of so-called competitive foods, such as soft drinks and candy, in schools.

The board was to receive a resolution today from the Kentucky Association of Food Service Administrators asking that it adopt a state policy along those lines.

Helen Davis, director of food services for the Todd County school system and legislative chairman of the state association, said the resolution seeks "a policy encouraging complete elimination of these foods."

"We are not calling for an absolute ban, but a basic premise of encouraging schools to discontinue the sale of such foods in school," Mrs. Davis said.

Most of us are of the opinion that mandates are not necessarily democratic," she said. "But in the best interest of education and in the best interest of the children's health, we feel school is not the place for foods that do not contribute to their health and well being."

Fred Schultz, board secretary, said the resolution was included in the information items on the board's agenda for its quarterly meeting, and he did not know if any action would be taken.

Mrs. Davis said the competitive foods include such items as candy, carbonated drinks and beverages containing less than 50 percent natural juice, chewing gum and shebets — "those items which are by and large sugar, water and artificial flavoring."

Kentucky currently has no policy forbidding schools from selling such items, although the director of the School Food Services Program says the state does try to discourage the practice.

"It's a local decision," said Redwood Taylor. "But we have discouraged the use of vending machines, at least an hour or an hour and a half prior to the feeding time."

The U.S. Department of Agriculture, which controls federal money that funds a large part of the state's school lunch program, is "considering regulations that would bar such foods from schools."

Mrs. Davis said June 9 was the final day for local input on the regulations and she hopes they will be adopted before school starts in the fall.

Mrs. Davis said that while there are no scientific studies on the subject, she feels from observation and experience that the sale of competitive foods cuts down on the number of children eating well-balanced, school-prepared meals.

She said the Todd County system has not had such food in several years and they average more than 90 percent participation in the lunch program.

Community Theatre Summer Season Starts With 'Hobbit' Production This Weekend

By JOHN PASCO

The Murray-Calloway County Community Theatre opens its summer season Thursday, June 15, 7:30 p.m. in the new city-county park, with J. R. R. Tolkien's "The Hobbit." The play will continue June 16, 17 and 22, 23, 24. "The Hobbit" is a fantasy play and as such is wholesome entertainment for the entire family.

The remainder of the summer season will include "The Thread That Runs So True" in July and "You're A Good Man, Charlie Brown" in August. Tickets will be available at the door for all performances at $2.50 adult and $1.50 children under 12 and senior citizens. Season tickets of $6 may be purchased at the public library or by calling 759-1752 between noon and 3:00 p.m.

The scope of the play has created special problems for the production committees. "In this play we costume thirty-eight characters," stated Kathy Pasco, costume chairman. "With the exception of four costumes, all were created from scratch." The committee has now outfitted 13 dwarves, two hobbits, a wizard, three trolls, six goblins, a water monster, an elfin queen, nine elves and a dragon.

Ky. Vehicle Inspections Officially End This Week

FRANKFORT—The repeal of Kentucky's motor vehicle inspection law by the 1978 General Assembly will eliminate the state Bureau of Vehicle Regulation's Division of Inspections, Transportation Secretary Calvin G. Grayson announced today.

Grayson said the division will be closed out on June 15, two days before the effective date of House Bill 332, which ends the 10-year-old inspection program.

The program has been funded totally by inspection sticker sales and permits fees, said Grayson. The income stopped almost two months ago, he said, and the program's remaining funds have been used to reimburse inspection stations for leftover stickers and half of its year's $25 permit fee.

Police Arrest Man In Credit Card Case Here

An Illinois man was in Calloway County Jail early today facing charges stemming from the use of an allegedly stolen credit card in Murray.

Murray Police filed additional charges against the man, 29-year-old George Eilers, Lake Bluff, Ill., Monday after arresting him during the weekend in connection with one incident, a police spokesman said.

Calloway County Attorney Max Parker said today that about 12 businesses have reported knowledge of the card to local authorities.

Eilers is charged with receipt of a stolen credit card, fraudulent use of a credit card, and theft of a credit card, all felony charges, and unauthorized signature on a credit card, a misdemeanor.

The Murray Police spokesman said personnel at Vernons Western Store in Murray first alerted police about the card.

But Parker said as the investigation continued, more incidents were revealed to local authorities. Parker said Eilers was staying in a cabin on the lake belonging to a local resident. A search of the cabin led to the confiscation of a number of items apparently bought with the card, Parker said.

Parker said fraudulent use of the card in buying merchandise worth over $100 constitutes a felony under Kentucky law.

Nationally Known Educators To Conduct Workshop At MSU

The first of four nationally-known educators will be on the Murray State University campus June 14 and 15 to conduct a two-part workshop in connection with the university's 1978 Summer Institute in Integrated Science, Mathematics and Education for elementary teachers, which begins June 13.

He is Dr. Ron Ward, associate director for dissemination at the Central Midwestern Regional Educational Laboratories in St. Louis (CEMREL).

On June 14, Dr. Ward, who earned his doctoral degree in mathematics education at Florida State University, will conduct a workshop for the institute participants and dealing with the Comprehensive School Mathematics program.

The following day, he will open his discussions to any interested teachers in the area. Assisting him will be Clare Heldema, a CEMREL editor and currently a doctoral candidate at Syracuse University.

The institute, the first of its kind to be held on the Murray campus and being held in Mason Hall (the Nursing Building), will run through June 29.

It is designed to help elementary teachers increase their knowledge of recent curriculum developments and materials in science and mathematics and to improve their skills in the use of these materials for effective inquiry teaching.

Thirty elementary teachers from within a 100-mile radius of the campus have been selected to participate in the institute, which is sponsored by the National Science Foundation.

Conducting the second workshop on June 20 will be Stan Glassman, a sales representative with Great Ideas, Inc., Hauppauge, N. Y. His participation will deal with manipulative mathematics kits and will stress the use of concrete materials in teaching mathematical concepts and computational skills.

On June 21, Fr. Stanley Bezuska, director of the mathematics institute at Boston College, will conduct a seminar on inquiry teaching strategies. He also will present a session at 7:30 p.m. that evening for any mathematics and science teachers or educators in the area wishing to attend. A reception will follow in the ISMEP Resource Center.

Dr. Ertle Thompson, professor of science education at the University of Virginia, Charlottesville, will be the final visiting lecturer to appear, conducting a seminar on June 26 introducing inquiry programs in science and mathematics to the institute participants.

Your Individual Horoscope

Frances Drake

FOR WEDNESDAY, JUNE 14, 1978

What kind of day will tomorrow be? To find out what the stars say, read the forecast given for your birth sign.

ARIES
(Mar. 21 to Apr. 20)

Avoid a tendency toward lethargy. You could make some unusual strides if you put your talents to work. Stress your innate adaptability in unusual situations.

TAURUS
(Apr. 21 to May 21)

A fine outlook! Day will be good for making profitable deals and arrangements. Knuckle down to steady work, forge ahead with a carefully prepared program.

GEMINI
(May 22 to June 21)

Some challenges possible but face them — unafraid. With the Gemini's ingenuity and foresightedness, you should solve all situations handily.

CANCER
(June 22 to July 23)

You may not blaze any trails now, but that shouldn't deter you from being the dedicated individual you usually are. It will pay, too, with gains of enduring worth.

LEO
(July 24 to Aug. 23)

Certain limitations to your success can be overcome if you take time to redefine your aims and expand operations so as to make a wider use of your talents.

VIRGO
(Aug. 24 to Sept. 23)

A better organized routine could help you to bring things up to the mark you desire, maybe set a new record. Plan your day well.

LIBRA
(Sept. 24 to Oct. 23)

Thinking about new ventures will not be enough. Back good ideas with ACTION — after determining their value, feasibility.

SCORPIO
(Oct. 24 to Nov. 22)

A new prospect may be up for consideration but, before accepting, ascertain whether it is what you REALLY want.

SAGITTARIUS
(Nov. 23 to Dec. 21)

Mixed influences, mixed possibilities. How you react, how you meet competition and how you cooperate with associates will be telling points in day's results.

CAPRICORN
(Dec. 22 to Jan. 20)

Despite a few minor obstacles, you should do well now. Work with those who are adept at getting things done, and don't squander your fine talents on trivia.

AQUARIUS
(Jan. 21 to Feb. 19)

Some unforeseen changes indicated. Take all in stride. Be temperate in demands, do not expect the unreasonable and tackle as much as you can without overtaxing yourself.

PISCES
(Feb. 20 to Mar. 20)

A test day of sorts. Select your own course if you prefer, but avoid contention with those who have a program on which you really should work. Cooperation will pay off.

YOU BORN TODAY are a highly imaginative, ingenious and versatile individual. Both intuition and memory are remarkable in the Gemini and you have what amounts to a "sixth sense" when it comes to anticipating the future. There is nothing "supernatural" about this. It is but a result of your constant search for knowledge, keen observation of situations and an uncanny ability to sense undercurrents which helps you to analyze them correctly.

When you take action, therefore, it is with know-how and precision. You work best when working alone but, being extremely adaptable, can produce equally well when mass cooperation is required. Fields in which you could excel: writing, music, journalism, the theater, the law and politics.

Birthdate of: Harriet Beecher Stowe, author; John McCormack, singer; Burl Ives, theatrical entertainer.

Dear Abby

Mother No's Ring-in-Nose

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My mother won't let me get my nose pierced. It's really not dangerous—it's no more dangerous than piercing your ears. All my girlfriends are doing it and I think it looks neat. Some of the guys have even done it. Nose piercing has been done for hundreds, maybe thousands of years in Egypt and Africa. You wear a little gold ring through the hole.

How can I get my mother to let me get my nose pierced? I know a lady who will do it for $5, but you have to have your mother's permission.

WANTS NOSE PIERCED

DEAR WANTS: Sorry, I can't help you do something I think you'd regret. If you want to wear a ring through your nose, get the type that clips on, but you don't need another hole in your head. (P.S. When girls got bored, back in the Stone Age when I was young, we used to make fudge.)

DEAR ABBY: Last year, the manager of our son's Little League baseball team screamed, yelled, jumped up and down on his cap and turned purple in the face every time one of the boys made a mistake. I've seen him get so worked up I was afraid he'd have a heart attack. He constantly belittled the boys, and I've seen him humiliate some to the point of tears. Most of the kids are afraid to get near him when he's angry.

I don't think 8- and 9-year-olds should be subjected to this kind of tension and abuse, do you?

I told my husband that I didn't want our son to play in Little League with that manager anymore. My husband says there is good and bad in all sports, and since we can't change the manager's disposition, we should accept it and let our boy play.

How do you (and others) feel about this?

INDIANA MOM

DEAR MOM: I think you should have a meeting with the parents of the other boys in Little League and discuss it. You may not be able to change the manager's disposition, but you can change managers.

DEAR ABBY: I am marrying a man who has three daughters (5, 7 and 9) by a previous marriage. My fiancé wants his daughters to attend our wedding, and I don't think they should. The girls live with their mother, who will not be at my wedding, so my fiancé will have to look after them during the ceremony. Perhaps I should mention that his daughters are ill-mannered and boisterous; they fight among themselves and don't obey their father, and I'm afraid they might disrupt the ceremony. This is my first wedding and I want it to go smoothly, Abby.

Also I don't know whether the girls' mother has poisoned their minds against me, but they don't seem to like me very much, which makes me uncomfortable.

Please don't use my name, initials or town, just tell me how to handle this. Thanks.

GETTING MARRIED

DEAR GETTING: In order for a marriage to succeed, candor and communication are essential. Start now by telling your fiancé exactly how you feel about his daughters attending your wedding. If you can't be completely honest with him now, prepare for some very difficult times ahead.

Are your problems too heavy to handle alone? Let Abby help you. For a personal, unpublished reply, write: Abby: Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

California's Tax Revolt

By a smashing 2 to 1 majority, hard-pressed Californians have voted to slash their property taxes by 60 percent, or $7 billion a year, sending a much-needed message to politicians in that state and across the nation.

The message is that the people have had enough of soaring taxes and ever-growing government spending. It is a message politicians everywhere should pay attention to, or else find themselves out of office.

In a striking example of direct democracy, California voters decided to limit property taxes to 1 percent of assessed valuations (taxes now average 3 percent). They also limited boosts in assessments to 2 percent a year and required a two-thirds vote of the state legislature to raise other taxes.

All this is widely described as a "tax revolt." In fact California's taxpayers are long-suffering and moderate and had to be prodded into insurrection by an insensitive and pigish political class.

The state has a progressive income tax (last raised by the fake antitax crusader, Ronald Reagan). As inflation pushed Californians into higher tax brackets during the last few years, money flowed into the state treasury.

Meanwhile the state went through a real estate boom, causing property assessments to rise faster than in any other state. This permitted school, county and local authorities to spend to their heart's content.

That was nice for the politicians, but the ordinary person was caught between higher income and property taxes and got squeezed like a Sunkist lemon. Did the legislature vote tax relief? Not exactly. It voted a whopping raise for itself and for state employees.

In these circumstances it was right and proper that taxpayers used the blunt instrument of a ballot initiative to free themselves from fiscal oppression.

As they always do, the politicians tried to scare the public, claiming that if the initiative passed there would be wholesale firings of police and closings of schools. (Why is it that when the word "economize" is heard, politicians talk about laying off cops and teachers, not their own non-working cronies or office girlfriends?)

To their credit, Californians couldn't be bluffed. And Gov. Jerry Brown, who had warned of "chaos" if the initiative won, now is trying to save his political future by riding with the tax revolt.

He is working to shift the state's surplus of about $5 billion to school districts and localities so they can adjust to the lower property taxes.

California will get by, and in the long run its economy will benefit from the enforced tax cuts and will produce higher revenues for the politicians to play with.

What is most encouraging is that California often sets the style for the rest of the country. One hopes its message spreads to other states where the tax-and-spend set has not yet been awakened. And finally, if we all are lucky, the cry of "Enough!" will reach Washington, source of the inflation that is so vexing the country.

The Democratic Field Grows

FRANKFORT — William (Bill) Cox's announcement last week that he is a candidate for the lieutenant governorship in the Democratic primary next May just about shapes up the field for the two top spots.

He is the fifth to make his intentions known to seek this office. The others are State Senator Joe Prather, James Vernon of Corbin who worked in the Department of Public Information; Supreme Court Clerk Martha Layne Collins; and former state Senator Richard Lewis of Benton.

Cox directed Gov. Julian Carroll's primary campaign for the governorship and later worked as one of his chief advisors, and then went to Washington in the Department of Transportation.

The field for governor on the Democratic side is even more crowded with six candidates, five of them challenging Commerce Commissioner Terry McBrayer, the governor's choice.

First District U.S. Rep. Carroll Hubbard still keeps kicking the political door open for this race and has been a critic of the Carroll administration.

State Auditor George Atkins keeps challenging the governor over his use of airplanes and other actions, and this keeps Atkins' name in the news constantly. It is quite evident that Atkins has won some support from the public in challenging Carroll.

Lieutenant Gov. Thelma Stovall, a name that has been around in state government for more than 20 years, is making a strong bid. Her support has been from labor and women's groups as well as the "courthouse crowd" across the state.

Former Louisville Mayor Harvey Sloan has been traveling about the state quite a bit and seems to have been the first to set up a campaign organization.

Agriculture Commissioner Thomas O. Harris is also in the race and will be depending upon agriculture interests as his strongest base, but he also has other connections in business circles.

Stovall and Sloan are both from Louisville and are likely to split the vote there in Jefferson County which contains about 30 percent of the statewide vote. McBrayer is from Eastern Kentucky while Atkins and Hubbard are both from the first congressional district in Western Kentucky. This portion of the state has had the governorship in the last two times. It could be time for a change.

One of the big questions in political discussions around the Capitol City is will McBrayer choose a running mate among the five candidates for lieutenant governor. Mrs. Collins has always been a strong supporter and close friend of both former Gov. Wendell H. Ford and the Carroll administration. At the same time, Hubbard was a classmate of Mrs. Collins' husband and Carroll spent a weekend in their home in a recent visit to the state.

Prather, president pro-tem of the Senate, also has been a close ally of the governor and served with him in the House. Richard Lewis also has served with him in the House with Carroll and McBrayer. Vernon is the one with the least ties to the administration.

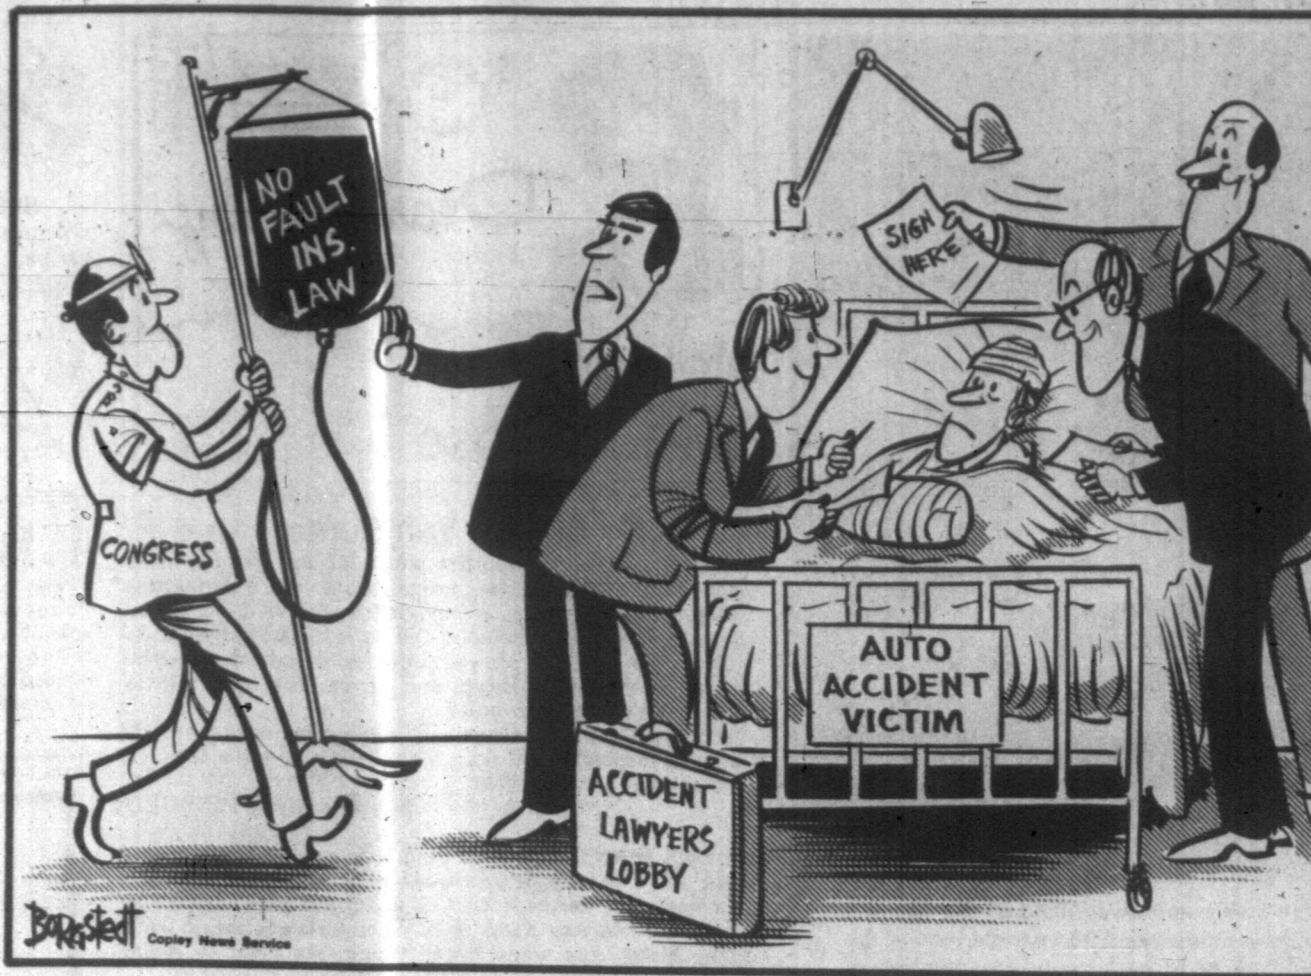

The big question is "Will Carroll's support be to a candidate's advantage or be a handicap?"

I keep getting messages that county judges across the state are blaming Carroll for doing them out of their judicial powers in the court reorganization even though this was a constitutional amendment voted by the people. Police chiefs is some of the smaller towns also are miffed over this change.

The police chiefs could go to their county judges in the rural counties and get favors done for some of their friends. They've lost this contact. And other county officials don't like the change, but this is not a state-wide feeling; but it is enough to make a difference in a close race.

The campaign won't really get going until after the first of the year, but there are a lot of factors that can make it interesting.

Every administration is able to raise money and swing strong support behind a candidate, but the blessed candidate has to take the thorns with the roses.

What Did We Do Before TV? We Went To The Baseball Games

"What did we ever do before radio and television?"

Every now and then you'll hear someone ask that question.

The answer is lots of things—lots of wholesome, creative, thought provoking, exciting things.

One favorite pastime here in Murray during the summertime, so some of my senior citizens friends tell me, was to go to the ball park and root for the town's independent baseball team, and that reaches back near the beginning of the century.

Evidence of this is the picture below, the original still in remarkably good condition, which my walking friend, T. Sledd, shared with me the other day. How many of the players can you identify without looking at the names?

There were only 11 men on the team, and with one exception all were Murray fellows. Almost every one of them could and did pitch if necessary. "They played about 1910, and was one of the first baseball teams, if not the first, to play in Murray," T. said. "My father was a big baseball fan, and he often took me to see this team play. They played on a field down where the old Douglas High School is now, and it cost a quarter to get in."

Carlisle Cutchin, who went on to help build the athletic program at Murray State and earn membership in its athletic Hall of Fame as baseball and basketball coach, was an infielder and a pitcher on the team.

At first base and also a pitcher was Earl Davis, whose parents lived where Dr. Castle Parker's dental office is today and whose father ran a lively stable located on the court square where Ward-Elkins is now.

The only surviving member of the team, Davis is believed to live somewhere in Missouri today. How interesting it would be to talk with him about their playing days.

Hub Burton was an outfielder and worked for the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis Railroad. Pumpkin Beaman played third base and also worked with the NC & St. L. Railroad. He was a brother of Mrs. Luther Jackson, who lives on Calloway Street. She passed away recently.

Tellus Black lived in Benton and was the only player on the team not from Murray, then a little town of about 2,000 people.

The teams they played generally came in by train as that was the only transportation available at that time. Usually they would play a three-game series and came from Nashville, Jackson, Owensboro, Henderson and the like. "Lots of Tennessee towns—Milan, Union City, Dyersburg and others—had real good teams," T. recalled.

On holidays and special occasions, doubleheaders were played, and many is the time that special trains were made up and ridden to Murray by the Nashville fans when their teams would come here for one of these doubleheaders.

But back to the team: Behind the plate was Hafford Hay, whose father, J. B. Hay, was in the lumber business where the old National Hotel is now. His sister, Mrs. Ruth Filbeck, still lives on Main Street just west of the old hotel.

Clyde Downs, considered one of the best baseball players ever to come out of West Kentucky, played second base. He lived at the corner of 5th and Poplar where the city utilities offices are today. His father was in the tobacco packing and shipping business.

Ziba Williams was a pitcher and a brother of Tom Williams, who will be remembered by many for his soda jerking days at the Dale & Stubblefield drug store.

The shortstop was Will Young, a brother of one of the town's doctors, Dr.

Sam Young.

Taz Miller, who later was in the clothing business with T.'s father, W. T. Sledd, was a pitcher. Later than that, he also was in the clothing business with Wells Purdom and Kelly Dick where the Bank of Murray now is located.

Another pitcher was George Gatlin, a member of a prominent family and whose father owned the Gatlin Building where Jack Benton's Twin Lakes Office Supplies is located today. Mrs. Jim (Eleanor) Duguid, who lives on Sharpe Street, is his daughter.

There also was a fine team of black players in Murray about the same time and which T. called "as good as any in the country," but he didn't remember much about them. Maybe some of you can help us out on them.

Their pitcher was Bert Wells, who, it is said, could pitch from second base. The second baseman was Langford Payton, a tall, lanky, loose player. Goldie Morris was a left-handed pitcher, and another was Bernie Bogard.

Do you remember any of those fellows? Those who can say they—both black and white—could really play baseball.

Bible Thought

Behold, I come quickly: hold that fast which thou hast, that no man take thy crown. Revelation 3:11 What do you have that is worth holding on to for the glory of God? Only he who possesses Jesus as his Saviour has anything eternally.

The president, J. W. Jones, thanked everyone involved and all the members for a very fulfilling and rewarding year. He then handed the gavel to the new president, Mrs. Sue Ford, who adjourned the final meeting of the 1977-78 school year.

During this time she was recommended to take a supervisor's position over sewing projects in eight of the western counties of the state working with this until the projects were closed in 1940. She taught school at Hazel from 1940 to 1942 resigned to take a job with the Western Kentucky Stages working there until 1954.

TVA Suggests Moving Flood-Prone Subdivision

BENTON, Ky. (AP) — Some 26 homes in this town's Longview Subdivision may have to be moved to avert future flooding of Town Creek, according to Mayor Coy Creason.

A study recommends that the houses be moved because the creek is a constant flood threat. Creason said that the Tennessee Valley Authority paid 70 percent of the cost of the study and might be willing to pay half of the cost of moving the 26 homes.

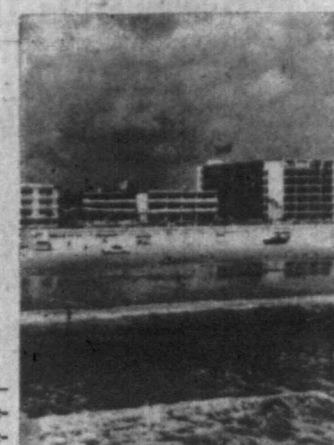

Jones Tinsinger, a TVA civil engineer, said that the utility hasn't decided if it will take a part in the moving but that the financing of the study indicates that TVA is concerned. Tinsinger said that flood control money comes from Congress.

FRAGRANCE CONSCIOUS MARIETTA, Ga. (AP) — Americans are more fragrance-conscious than ever before. Retail sales of women's fragrances rose 54 percent to $1.1 billion in 1976 from $715 million in 1972, Aromatics International reports.

Fragrances for men showed similar increases as retail sales rose 49 percent to $591 million from $397 million for the same four-year period, the company said.

New Fix-It Manual Helps Women

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures

Women often are amazed to find they're capable of performing repair tasks that formerly were earmarked for appliance shops.

With the number of small appliances in the home proliferating — along with the inconvenience of delivering or mailing such objects to a repair center — it is time to learn how to do it yourself.

Then, too, many people discard potentially good articles, because the things grew old-looking while waiting to be repaired. In addition to toasters, blenders, mixers, waffle makers, can openers, coffee makers and the like there are those chairs that might need re-caning or a table that might need a patch of veneer.

Putting it all together is the "Fix-It-Yourself" manual which is crammed with encouraging solutions that make the job easier. For example, "a bit of chewing gum on the top of a screw driver will hold a screw long enough to start it in an inaccessible hole." (You also get the pleasure of chewing the gum!)

It's a little hint, but it might come in handy when trying to cope with a tiny screw to fit in a tiny hole.

And there are the surprises. If your coffeemaker produces only weak perked coffee, you may not be using it with water of the proper temperature.

For example, the tap water for a coffee brewer should be between 40 degrees and 50 degrees (Fahrenheit), using 1½ tablespoons of coffee for each six-ounce cup, the manual points out. Switch to cold water for electric percolators. If they are filled with warm water, the coffee brew will be too weak. (Other problems could include a clogged perk valve, valve cover and basket, which might require cleaning.)

You can learn how to fix doorknobs, hinges and locks. In fact many lock problems can be solved by a simple repair or adjustment.

Bookbinding, china, porcelain, glass and jewelry repair can be intriguing — you can learn how to make new links, close old ones or repair a ring.

You may want to delegate messy jobs — plumbing or repairing dishwashers, dryers, ranges, ovens, waste disposals, washing machines — to a favorite man. You can take over the chair caning, rushing or upholstery of chairs. Then, too, there are the audio and visual repairs and the servicing of pools and other equipment.

As for fishing tackle, snow blowers, lawnmowers, chain saws, women may not have the interest. But bicycle repair may be something that intrigues you. At least, you'll learn what makes the wheels go around as you pedal up the road.

This book also provides a run-down on adhesives, their properties and uses. The applicators' setting time, strength and flexibility are listed and may save you lots of time and anxiety. Everyone has adhesive problems that just weren't solved the way the label on the bottle or tube suggested, but they may ultimately be useful in repairing another object of different material.

Decrepit Farmhouse Recast Into Cozy Country Home

Who in their right mind would buy a "handyman's special" that was in such terrible condition a bank surveyor described it as "too dreadful . . . to be called a house?" Jack and Wendy Murphy, that's who. And their patience, skill and imagination paid off in transforming an abandoned farmhouse into an appealing and cozy country home.

At the time of purchase, the four and a half acres of wooded hills and meadowland in Connecticut seemed the only valuable part of the property. A careful attic to basement inspection disclosed that the only salvageable part of the house was the heavy posts and beams.

The Murphys with the help of three carpenters spent weeks with crowbars, axes and shovels tearing the house down to its basic structure. Then the rebuilding began. During the work, the Murphys spent weekends sleeping in a second floor "bedroom" whose exterior walls were bare studs and its ceiling, naked joists.

The major renovation took more than a year and the forced air heating wasn't installed until just before winter. There was no fireplace in the house, but the Murphys wanted one. So a mason built one out of fieldstones that were part of an old foundation on the property. It has a fireplace unit that circulates heat to the living room and to two bedrooms above. New floors in the living room are random-width hard pine, V-grooved to look old, and nailed. The nail holes are unplugged to give the room a rustic appearance, but can be snapped out for easy cleaning.

Double-pane insulating glass, which reduces heat loss through the glass area, is standard in Perma-Shield windows. And factory-applied vinyl weatherstripping assures tight closure against air infiltration. The wood core frame in the Perma-Shield Narroline window is also encased in a sheath of rigid vinyl for long lasting, low maintenance protection.

The wood sash are finished on the exterior with a four-step polyurea system that has similar long life.

The living room of the Murphys' home is an elegant tribute to their skill and imagination in converting a "handyman's special" into a cozy country home. Andersen Perma-Shield Narroline windows help by offering the traditional look without the traditional bother.

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — I have heard considerable discussion about whether or not felt underlayment should be placed on a wood deck prior to the installation of asphalt shingles. Should the underlayment be used? If so, what is the purpose of it?

A. — In new construction, you may occasionally run across a roofer who says that the underlayment is unnecessary. It is. It has a number of purposes. One is to insure that the shingles will be applied over a dry roof deck, thus minimizing the danger of buckling and distorting of shingles caused by application over a wet deck. Another is to prevent the entrance of wind-driven rain onto the deck in the event that the shingles are lifted up, damaged or torn by abnormally high winds. Still another is to prevent direct contact between the shingles and resinous areas of the wood deck which, because of chemical incompatibility, would damage the shingles. Failure to provide adequate ventilation in the attic space under the deck is another probable cause of trouble. This can be done with louver vents or exhaust fans placed high in the gables. A cupola also can be used. When there isn't enough ventilation, condensation and buckling problems are likely.

Q. — We have an asphalt shingle roof that is about 25 years old. It looks to be in pretty good condition, but a man we hired to clean the gutters on our house says the shingles are not in good shape. Is there some way we can tell whether he is right?

A. — An on-the-roof inspection by a professional roofer is required to be sure. But there are some signs that will give you a clue, such as an excessive loss of protective mineral granules and cracked, blistered, curled and missing shingles. Check the base of downspouts for signs of granule loss. While it is unwise to go up on the roof to inspect the shingles, you can sometimes make a fairly good inspection from the ground by using field glasses.

Q. — Can we reroof with asphalt shingles over wood shingles?

A. — Yes, if the old roof is in reasonably good condition, with special emphasis on the soundness of the roof deck or supports. Loose or protruding nails must be removed and missing shingles and those that are warped. If it appears that the entire roof is in need of this kind of treatment, you are better off to remove the old shingles.

The WEEDERS GUIDE

By EARL ARONSON
AP Newsfeatures

Next year will be the "Year of the Rose" throughout this nation, symbolizing the close relationship of humans and that flower for thousands of years.

A dozen sponsors have banded together to present the rose as the living symbol of love, friendship and peace.

Although more than any other flower, the rose has been entwined in human history for the past several thousand years, there never has been a concerted effort to acclaim it for what it is, the sponsors said — "the favorite flower of the people."

The 1979 project is designed "to pay long overdue homage to the rose, and at the same time to stimulate an increased public interest, not only in roses, but in all flowers and gardening."

"Although immeasurably more ancient in genealogy than man, the rose happily joined him at the dawn of recorded history, and probably before," one rose historian relates, "and has been his inseparable companion ever since. To bear witness to this alliance, on the walls of the ruins of the Palace of Knossos on the Island of Crete, reckoned to be over 4,000 years old, there are well preserved paintings of a yellow rose, probably the Persian Yellow."

"Even further back in time, roses were cultivated by the Chinese as early as the Shen Jung dynasty about 2,737 B.C., and in the 500 B.C.'s the rose was immortalized as the queen of the garden by the Greek poet, Anacreon (563-478 B.C.)."

In the Canadian Rose Annual of 1964, an unknown author wrote:

"In spite of centuries of disturbances, upheavals and turmoil, the rose has persisted of plant Patent Owners, and improved to become an everloving symbol, that, come Association, Roses Inc., Society what may, beauty, shall not of American Florists and perish from the earth and that, Wholesale Nursery Growers of all works of man, none is America's greater."

In a recent public opinion poll organized by Florists Tele-gram and its 13,000 Plants, AP Newsfeatures, 59 floral affiliates, the rose was voted the favorite flower of the nation, getting 126,253 votes.

The nearest runner-up, the carnation, got 39,077 votes. George Washington was the first rose breeder in the country as well as the first president, and one of his varieties, named for his mother, still is being grown. The rose, which originated in Asia Minor, has been cultivated for more than 5,000 years. More than 4,000 songs extolling the rose have been written and it has a prominent place in poetry, it has inspired fashions, designs and sculpture.

The sponsors of "The Year of the Rose — 1979" are:

Geodesic Dome House Suits Couple Remodel

Spending Expands

By RON RUTTI
Mansfield News Journal
MANSFIELD, Ohio (AP) — Three miles down the road from Malabar Farm, a home has sprung up that would make conservationist Louis Bromfield proud.

It is a geodesic dome house and the smiles on the faces of its owners, Wendell and Joan Sayer, broadened each day this past winter as they realized savings in heating costs.

"It is our retirement house," Mrs. Sayer said. The couple has lived in a number of houses in several states. Thus far they say they enjoy this one, inspired by architect Buckminster Fuller, more than they thought they would.

The house is a mathematician's dream. It is made from a combination of isosceles triangles.

"The whole structure is on the outside. It is free standing, which allows for the spaciousness inside," Sayer said.

Sayer got professional help and put the house up in 60

RETIREMENT HOME--Wendell Sayer stands in front of the domed house made of framing shaped in isosceles triangles, which he built as a retirement home for himself and his wife, Joan. The Mansfield, Ohio, couple say they like the structure better than most of the houses they have lived in over a lifetime. Sayer said the house contains only two sizes of triangles and has no interior supporting columns.

Mrs. Sayer admits to some anxious moments during construction. "I envisioned them starting on one side and having it not meet on the other," she said.

The house is on 51 acres Sayer bought, and cost $20 per square foot. He said conventional houses start at $35 per square foot. He said he is certain they save on fuel costs.

"We have an electric furnace for a backup, but we only use that when we go away," Sayer said. A wood-burning fireplace generates the heat inside and Sayer says it is more comfortable than any place he has lived.

The fireplace circulates the warm air, which rises to the top of the house. As the colder air drops, it filters to the basement through vents. Cold air from the basement is returned to the upstairs through a grate at the bottom of the fireplace where it is warmed and recycled.

The dome cannot be seen from the road but many visitors have found their way up the drive.

"A lot of young people have been here to look at it," Sayer said. "I think some will build them. It is perfect for a young couple. It is stronger, cheaper and takes less space."

Though the rate of new home construction is likely to remain stable in 1978, the pace of home improvements is expected to be robust. According to U.S. Department of Commerce statistics, expenditures for home improvements and upkeep in the 1977 third quarter soared to a seasonally adjusted $32.5-billion. This is an increase of nearly 30 percent from the same period in 1976.

And there are as many reasons for modernization as there are home improvement projects. Of growing importance are products and projects designed to save energy and use it efficiently in homes. With the average price of home heating fuel expected to climb even higher this winter, it's easy to see why.

Many home improvement projects involve the replacement of windows and gliding doors. Since energy conservation is often the motivation, a leading window manufacturer, Andersen Corporation of Bayport, Minnesota, suggests that homeowners shop for new windows with energy conservation in mind.

Essential to energy efficient windows are snug fit, adequate insulation and double-glazing. In especially cold climates, triple glazing is recommended. Precision-made windows and gliding doors, such as Andersen's Perma-Shield units, have factory-applied vinyl weatherstripping to reduce fuel-robbing air infiltration.

Double-pane insulating glass—standard in Perma-Shield—conserves fuel by reducing heat loss through the glass areas. Perma-Shield windows and gliding doors also have preservative-treated wood core sash and frames. Wood is used because it is a natural insulator. The wood core sash and frames are encased in rigid vinyl for long lasting, low-maintenance protection.

In extremely cold areas,

Revised View of Windows Boosts Energy Conservation

"Windows are a precious part of our homes. They give us eyes on the outside world; they keep us in touch with it and with the weather, the changing seasons and our neighbors. They bring us natural light and fresh outdoor air to cheer our spirits."

This "ode to the window" comes from an informative booklet entitled, "Energy and Your Home," which is edited by noted science writer Isaac Asimov and published by York Heating and Air Conditioning. Despite the benefits of windows, some architects and builders recommend that a maximum of ten percent of the floor area of a house consist of windows. This view of windows, however, overlooks the role that well-built windows, properly located, can play in energy conservation.

The major problem with windows is that ordinary glass is a poor insulator and that heat loss through ordinary glass is excessive. "On the other hand," the booklet points out, "sunlight also pours the BTUs in during the winter, reducing or even reversing the heat loss. This free solar energy is in the form of short infra-red rays that penetrate the glass much more easily than the 'airborne' warmth created by the heating system. As those rays fall on the floor and furnishings they are converted into heat that is trapped inside, as in a greenhouse."

Andersen Corporation of Bayport, Minnesota, a leading manufacturer of windows and gliding doors, points out that windows with double-pane insulating glass sharply reduce the heat loss through the glass area, yet allow the sun's warmth to penetrate.

Double-pane insulating glass is standard in Andersen's Perma-Shield units. They also have a preservative-treated wood core sash and frame that is encased in rigid vinyl to offer long lasting low maintenance protection.

In extremely cold areas,

Andersen recommends triple-glazing—double pane insulating glass and tight-fitting, separate storm sash.

Excessive heat loss on cloudy days and at night can be reduced by the use of draperies which trap a layer of insulating air between the colder glass and the warm room air.

In summer, excessive heat gain through windows can be prevented by roof overhangs, which guard windows against the high summer sun. In winter, when the sun is low in the sky, the sun's warmth can penetrate. Another method is to use leaf-bearing trees to shade windows in summer and allow the sun to penetrate in winter.

Finally, window location can be an important factor in energy conservation.

The largest window area should face south to serve as a passive solar collector in winter. The smallest window area should face north.

Windows on the east and west sides should be large enough to provide good ventilation and adequate daylight, which help reduce the need for air conditioning and artificial lighting.

New Glider Replaces Old Doors

Andersen Corporation has developed a new energy-conserving, low-maintenance gliding door, which is designed to fit nearly 80 percent of the openings in which there are now drafty or otherwise ineffective sliding doors. In addition to the new size, Perma-Shield Gliding Door-II comes in regular sizes.

Replacement of problem sliding doors with Perma-Shield Gliding Door-II, says Andersen, is a fairly simple task, whether done by a professional or handled by a competent do-it-yourselfer.

Years in development, Perma-Shield Gliding Door-II has 35 design improvements. Among them are dramatically improved energy conservation, security and overall performance. Unchanged is the basic low maintenance concept of Perma-Shield—a sheath of rigid white vinyl over a preservative-treated wood core. The combination of wood and vinyl sash and frame provides a natural thermal barrier. Double-pane insulating glass is standard.

Other design improvements include a redesigned thermal break in the sill, improved flashing and more efficient weatherstripping. A sill tank along with other design features enables the door to pass tests for water infiltration far in excess of industry requirements. Other improvements make it possible for the new gliding door to meet or exceed present or proposed security codes.

Tinted and reflective glass are also available as environmental options in the newly-developed Perma-Shield Gliding Door-II.

'Continent' Blends Charm And Ingenuity

"Old World" charm combined with "New World" ingenuity led to the creation of a new $60-million commercial and residential complex known as "The Continent." It is a charming blend of shops, apartments, boutiques, restaurants and office space.

In addition to the living and working accommodations are a movie house, a racquet club with both indoor and outdoor facilities, and the French Market, which handles international gourmet foods.

C.W. (Bill) Bonner, who developed the complex on the North Side of Columbus, Ohio, says, "Our aim was to give Columbus a section comparable to Georgetown in Washington, D.C., or the French Quarter in New Orleans."

Many of the ideas for "The Continent" came from Bonner's father, who compiled ideas and photos during his visits to Europe.

The apartments, which are located over the shops in European fashion, were quickly sold out and there is now a substantial waiting list.

Shops and businesses include banks, clothing, jewelry, art, music, home furnishings and sporting goods. The French Market combines gourmet foods such as truffles, reindeer meatballs, pate and cheeses with an indoor cafe where meals can be enjoyed year-round in 72 degree comfort.

Complementing the 19th Century Mediterranean architecture are the Andersen Perma-Shield vinyl-sheathed wood windows. The use of these units with factory-applied vinyl weatherstripping and double-pane insulating glass is an important contributor to "The Continent's" energy conservation program.

"Conventional windows," Bonner says, "could have resulted in higher heating costs since one of the biggest areas of heat loss is through the windows. Wood is an excellent insulator and with double-pane insulating glass and the permanent tight fit of these windows, our heat loss is minimal."

An additional 186 apartments are under construction at "The Continent" and new shops and commercial businesses are scheduled to be built soon.

HIGH RISERS

WASHINGTON (AP) — The ideas that gave rise to the modern skyscraper were a family production.

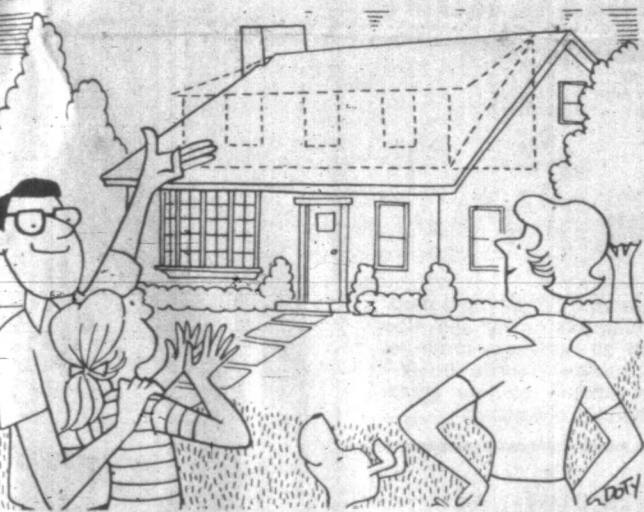

Elisha Graves Otis invented the safety devices that prevented an elevator from falling if the lifting cable broke. Then, at the urging of his son, Otis used his patented inventions to go into business for himself, according to Intellectual Property Owners, Inc. When the elder Otis died at the age of 50 in April 1861, his two sons took over his plant, which had only a handful of employees and was worth about $5,000.

But Charles and his brother Norton were good businessmen, as well as fertile inventors, says IPO, a non-profit group dedicated to preserving the patent system as an incentive to innovation and creativity. They gradually improved their father's steam-powered elevator through 53 patents of their own. By 1872, Otis Brothers & Co. was worth about $400,000. Today, the Otis Elevator Company, built on the family patents, employs more than 50,000 people and does business of more than a billion dollars a year, IPO reports.

WATER SOFTENING

LOMBARD, Ill. (AP) — The industry involved in the manufacture, sale and servicing of water softening equipment consists of over 5,000 businesses with nearly $1 billion in annual sales.

According to a survey by the Water Quality Association, the industry employs 50,000 men and women, serves nearly 11 million families, and over 250,000 commercial-industrial and institutional establishments.

When converting the attic into living space, Andersen Corporation of Bayport, Minnesota, reminds homeowners that any structural changes should match the home's architectural style. If the conversion requires windows, Andersen suggests that they not only match the style of the others, but help conserve energy as well.

Make Addition Suit Architectural Style

Many people considering a room addition as a home improvement project sometimes overlook the most important consideration; that is, making sure the addition matches the architectural style of their home.

A room addition should be planned and built to blend with the general character of your home. Nowhere is this more important than when converting the attic into living space.

Andersen Corporation of Bayport, Minnesota, a leading window manufacturer, points out that the first requirement for a successful attic conversion is sufficient headroom to begin with.

The roof slope, notes Andersen, should give at least seven feet of height to the finished ceiling. Less than seven feet at the side walls is sufficient provided there is adequate height for people to be able to sit down without bumping their heads.

Don't cram two or three small rooms into an attic space that is adequate only for one. Cramped quarters can detract from a home's resale value. Finally, if dormers are to be added, be sure the roof can be quickly raised and closed. Have a maximum time for this written into your contract and discuss with your insurance agent coverage against weather damage while the attic is exposed.

If attic remodeling requires dormers, be sure the windows you choose not only match the style of others, but that they help conserve energy as well. Andersen Perma-Shield units, for example, have double-pane insulating glass to guard against excessive heat loss. In addition, Perma-Shield windows have factory applied rigid vinyl weatherstripping for protection against heat robbing air infiltration.

Additional tips on remodeling are available in a free booklet, which can be obtained by writing Andersen Corporation, Dept. R, Bayport, Minnesota 55003.

After Accidents Last Year—

L&N Promises To Correct Its Problems

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Louisville & Nashville Railroad, meandering from Chicago through coal country to Florida and New Orleans, drove more people from their homes because of hazardous cargo accidents last year than any other railroad.

Now, in a confidential report, the L&N concedes that its "methods to insure safe operation" were wanting. It promises to correct its problems.

The Louisville, Ky.-based railroad, which unlike many other rail lines has generally been profitable, has one of the industry's worst safety records. Its troubles included everything from faulty wheels — $11 million worth — to bad track to locomotives in disrepair.

It has been under unusually intense scrutiny, by the Federal Railroad Administration for the past seven months.

During that period, 23 cars of an L&N train carrying hazardous cargo in Waverly, Tenn., derailed at 35 mph, sending 500 persons fleeing from their homes and killing 16 persons. In Pensacola, Fla., one person died and 1,500 were evacuated when two engines and 35 L&N cars, 17 carrying hazardous cargo, derailed at 35 mph.

In a confidential "Progress Report" submitted May 25 to the FRA, a copy of which was obtained by The Associated Press, the L&N said:

"Over the past few months, the L&N's attention has been forcefully directed towards its compliance with FRA regulations and the safety of its operations. We found, with the FRA's assistance, that the L&N was not in compliance in all areas and that our methods to insure both a safe operation and compliance with regulations were wanting."

Federal pressure included fines, regular meetings with L&N staff, and tough inspections. One L&N official said the FRA over-reacted.

An examination of accident records, FRA track inspection reports and interviews with federal officials reveal that the L&N's problems were brewing long before the federal scrutiny began:

—More people were evacuated in accidents involving hazardous cargo on L&N trains in 1977 than any other railroad. Of a nationwide 11,780 evacuations, 2,855 occurred in L&N mishaps. Illinois Central Gulf Railroad had 2,500 evacuations. Other lines were far behind.

—There are 1,528 unsettled claims worth $1.17 million brought by federal regulators against the L&N since 1976 for alleged violations of safety and personnel rules. That amount is topped only by three larger lines: ConRail, the Chessie System, and Norfolk & Western.

—An examination of FRA cases against L&N in recent years showed allegations of spotty safety inspections and poor record-keeping of those inspections.

One inspector noted in 1975, "The absence of records not only indicates failure to comply with these requirements, but indicates a disregard for the necessity of the actual inspections required."

Stress Fracture May Be Cause Of Foot Pain

Q: Mr. A.S. writes that after the cold winter weather let up, he started taking long walks and gradually started jogging. He developed a sore foot. The pain became so troublesome that he saw a physician. He said that X-rays were negative for a fracture and I had strained a joint or had torn a ligament.

"I followed his advice and rested for a few days. When I started jogging again, the pain returned in the same place. Second X-rays showed a small "stress" fracture."

Mr. A.S. asks, "Why couldn't the doctor have found this fracture on the first X-rays?"

A: Stress fractures are often said to be "hairline." They are thin and without any displacement of the bone so that they may not be easily visible during the first few days. Later, X-rays may show a wider separation or a small deposit of calcium or callus at the site of the fracture.

These breaks were earlier called "march" fractures because they were more frequently observed among soldiers who were required to go for long marches. The army officers occasionally felt that such complaints were not justified and that some soldiers were complaining to avoid hiking, especially when X-rays were negative. However, in these cases, later X-rays often showed a small fracture.

These breaks usually occur in the long bones (metatarsals) in the arches of the feet.

Occasionally, the pain from a stress fracture may be so severe that a cast is necessary to prevent movement of the bone. A walking iron is built into the cast so that the person can get around with reasonable comfort. Most such "march" fractures respond to rest and adhesive strapping or an elastic bandage.

After healing takes place, no disability persists. Having such a stress fracture does not mean that a person is more prone to having another. He or she can return to walking and jogging with the same degree of safety as before the injury.

Of course, it is always advisable to condition the muscles by gradually increasing the amount of walking. Some walking is beneficial before each episode of jogging.

U.S. Withholds Reply To Soviet Spying Charges

MOSCOW (AP) — The United States has made no reply so far to a Soviet charge of spying and complicity in murder against a woman CIA agent who for two years was on the staff of the American Embassy in Moscow.

The Soviet government newspaper Izvestia said Martha D. Peterson, a Vietnam war widow who was the embassy's third secretary, was expelled last July for espionage and that she supplied poison to an accomplice who used it to kill "an innocent person who stood in his way."

The accomplice was not identified, although presumably he was a local Russian. But Izvestia said "also implicated in this espionage" was Robert Fulton, the first secretary of the embassy's political section from mid-1975 to mid-1977, and two visitors from Washington in 1975, S. Karpovich and J. Gruener.

Neither the embassy nor the State Department had any comment, but Western sources in Moscow said Miss Peterson was not declared persona non grata until after her departure. Sources in Washington who asked not to be identified said she was a CIA employee who had been working in a cover job in the embassy's consular section.

Izvestia said the charges against Miss Peterson had been kept quiet at the request of the U.S. It said they were being made public now because the U.S. government on June 1 made public its charge that the Soviet government bugged the U.S. Embassy and because of the espionage trial in New Jersey of two Soviet employees of the United Nations.

The government paper gave this account of Miss Peterson's arrest:

On the evening of last July 15, she parked her car in a poorly lit place in Moscow, changed her dress and took a series of buses to a bridge over the Moscow River, where she put "an ordinary-looking stone" into an archway.

She was detained there, the "stone" was opened, and it "proved to be a cache containing cameras, gold, money and instructions, as well as ampules with a poison."

"The Soviet counter-intelligence service established beyond a doubt that the poisons taken from the cache had been sent to Moscow by the Central Intelligence Agency and not for the first time."

"It was discovered... that the poison that was given to the spy earlier was used by him against an innocent person who stood in his way."

James C. Vernon

Vernon Running For Lieutenant Governor

CORBIN, Ky. — Former

public information commissioner, James C. Vernon, will formally open his campaign for Lieutenant Governor Wednesday, June 14, at 7:30 p.m. at the Rodeway Inn, Louisville.

The Corbin Democrat has been active in both Wendell Ford's and Julian Carroll's state campaign organizations, and while serving as Commissioner of Public Information opened the first International Tourist Office in U. S. History. Kentucky tourism reached the billion dollar level during Vernon's term as commissioner from July 1975 to mid-November, 1977.

Vernon is owner of WYGO AM-FM radio in Corbin. He has served on commissions for four governors and served the Kentucky Jaycees as their president and the U. S. Jaycees as vice president.

Vernon's campaign will be based on citizen participation in state government and raising the activity level of the Lieutenant Governor's position. His background has included work in the health service area, and he expects to address aging and mental health problems in Kentucky.

Vernon will call for "A New Order in Kentucky Politics," based on openness and candor.

Vernon said, "You can expect my wife, Linda, and two children, Jim and Joelle, to be the most aggressive family campaign team Kentucky has ever seen."

State headquarters for Vernon for Lt. Governor Committee will be opened in Corbin in July.

At age 23 Vernon purchased radio station WYGO in Corbin, Kentucky and within three years added an FM station to his holdings. In 1965 he was presented Corbin's Distinguished Citizen's award and the following year selected on to Kentucky's three outstanding young men... the youngest ever selected.

Vernon has played an active civic role. Along with leadership of the Kentucky Jaycees he has served two terms as Director of the State Chamber of Commerce, was a member of the Bicentennial, Historical, and Film Commissions. Vernon held director positions on the Lincoln Heritage Trail Foundation and Kentucky Derby Festival and Mountain Laurel Festival committees.

THE SAVIN 8-YEAR BUYER PROTECTION PLAN. WE OFFER MORE YEARS BECAUSE WE HAVE MORE YEARS TO OFFER.

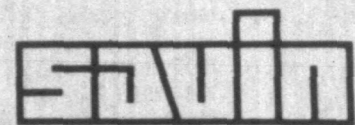

In order for us to offer an 8-year Continuous Maintenance Agreement on all our Savin plain paper copiers, you must know that we're sure nothing serious is going to go wrong.

The most reliable copier you can own. We designed the Savin 700 series copiers to work superbly. And they do.

Every step we took uncomplicated the whole copying process. First we reduced the distance paper has to travel before it becomes a copy. Then we developed a unique liquid toner system to replace the standard powder. We created an electronic brain to scan every original and make razor-sharp copies every time. On one side or two. We made paper loading a snap with cassettes that switch from letter to legal size in a second. Our 780 model has a document feed with automatic collating of both copy and original and it can copy multiple originals at a very fast 20 per minute. And our new 760 model copies documents as large as 11"x17" with no moving top.

What all this means to you is a practically jam-proof copier that we back with greater confidence than even Xerox is willing to match.

Contact us for the complete story. And this is one story, you can be sure, that has a happy beginning and a happy ending.

We've seen the future. And it works.

Easterly Renounces Latest Turn Of Events In 6th District

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — While 6th District Republicans oil their machinery to pick a new nominee for Congress, Tom Easterly, the Democratic nominee, has denounced the latest turn on events.

He said in a news conference Monday that the withdrawal of Mary Louise Foust, his Republican opponent, "is a perversion of the democratic process" that sets an ominous political precedent.

"It means that any time a party realizes it made the wrong choice in a primary, it can wheel and deal to get the nominee out of the race and put in a more appropriate candidate in terms of hindsight," Easterly said.

He said that perhaps state law should be changed to prevent future situations of that kind.

Miss Foust, 68, of Shelbyville, who was unopposed in the GOP primary, announced Saturday that she is pulling out of the race because of what she called overwhelming financial backing for Easterly from state labor interests.

But Easterly, a 38-year-old state senator from Frankfort, said one "could tell from her statement that it was not her own idea. The statement was illogical and inaccurate."

Besides, he said, "we all heard in the last two weeks that the Republican Party wanted to find a more appropriate candidate."

Meantime, Laban Jackson of Shelbyville, chairman of the 6th District Republican organization, said Miss Foust "called the shot as it is."

He said he would call a convention "within reasonable time" so that GOP precinct leaders from the district's 17 counties can select a new candidate, "hopefully this coming weekend."

He listed as suggested candidates his own name plus those of former state Sen. Joe Graves of Lexington, state Sen. Larry Hopkins of Lexington, Don Robinson of Harrodsburg, state Rep. Art Schmidt of Cold Spring and Phil Thompson of Georgetown, who heads the state Chamber of Commerce.

Hopkins seems to be drawing much attention because he is an active critic of the Democratic administration with gubernatorial plans next year.

Jackson said by telephone that district Republicans would hold a closed meeting at Lexington tonight during which selection of a nominee for November would come up.

Easterly's news conference Monday varied between casual comments about his willingness to take on any opponent in the fall to indignation about the Republican move.

He said he thinks the GOP hierarchy pried Miss Foust out of the contest "at best by a promise of non-support" and possibly with a pledge to support her for auditor in 1979. Miss Foust has held that post several times.

"It appears that the Republicans will nominate a

The Mt. Horeb Free Will Baptist Church will be host for the Kentucky Annual Conference, Inc., starting Wednesday, June 14, and continuing through Friday, June 16.

Special welcomes will be extended by the officials of the Murray City Government and the Murray Police Department on Wednesday, according to the pastor, the Rev. Richard Drew, who invites the public to attend the services each evening at 7:30.

Slave Day Planned By Flag And Rifle Corps

The Calloway County High School Flag and Rifle Corps will have a slave day to raise funds for its activities on Saturday, June 17, from eight a.m. to four p.m.

Persons having jobs to do should call 753-8333 or 753-3257.

candidate in 15 minutes in a smoke-filled room," he said.

Easterly called himself a friend and admirer of Hopkins and said "I don't believe he is going to lend his name to such a political maneuver."

State law now provides for a party to pick a nominee when there is a vacancy. Easterly suggested it should be changed to ban anyone from running "if they have not filed in a timely manner."

Easterly upset Democratic incumbent John Breckinridge of Lexington in last month's primary.

Cancer Victims Often Suffer From Malnutrition, Study Shows

WASHINGTON (AP) — A leading cancer researcher says many of that disease's victims die of malnutrition before the devastating ailment becomes fatal.

That opinion was offered on Monday to a Senate nutrition subcommittee by Dr. George L. Blackburn, a member of the Harvard Medical School faculty, who said many cancer patients die of malnutrition because treatment for the disease kills their appetite.

"No better example exists than that of the late and distinguished senator, Hubert Humphrey, whose changed physical appearance dramatically reflected a deteriorated nutritional status which all too frequently accompanies the disease process in cancer patients," Blackburn said.

Humphrey died Jan. 13 after a long struggle with cancer of the pelvis. Although his physical appearance deteriorated noticeably in the final months of his life, he continued to display an exuberant personality and zest for politics.

Blackburn said Humphrey's "determined struggle to maintain a relatively normal lifestyle is an unusual exception to the pattern observed in most terminally ill cancer patients in whom weight loss, weakness and depression produce a lingering, bedridden illness."

He said that more than half the weight loss that occurs in cancer patients can be prevented through recently developed feeding techniques. "Most feeding therapies are extremely simple if physicians will but recognize their importance and become familiar with the methods," he said.

But Humphrey's doctor, University of Minnesota chief of surgery John S. Najarian, told The Washington Post on Monday that Blackburn was wrong about Humphrey.

"Hubert Humphrey died of his cancer and nothing else and certainly not of malnutrition," Najarian said.

"We could have kept him in the hospital day and night and fed him intravenously, so when he died he perhaps wouldn't have been as thin. Or we could let him die at home, unencumbered by intravenous feeding."

Unemployment Down In W. Ky.

Western Kentucky's unemployment decreased from 14,225 persons in March to 11,183 in April, according to Robert MacDonald, chief labor market analyst for the department of Human Resources.

The rate unemployment for that same period dropped from 5.6 to 4.2 percent. Union County had the lowest rate as 2.1 percent while Marshall County had the highest at 8.7 percent. Calloway County's jobless rate stood at 3.8 percent.

"The decrease can be attributed primarily to seasonal factors," MacDonald said. The unemployment rate in western Kentucky for April 1977 was 4 percent. This April's rate for the entire state was 4.1 percent.
