SIX INJURED IN WRECKS LAST NIGHT

Hallet Adams Dies Suddenly In Florida

Hallet Adams, formerly of this county, died suddenly while working in the yard of the hotel where he was living in Sarasota, Fla. His death occurred Tuesday morning at nine o'clock. He was 63 years of age.

The deceased was a member of a Baptist Church. He had been living in Sarasota for the past few years. Prior to that time he had lived in Detroit, Mich., for about 20 years. He was born and reared in this county.

Survivors are one sister, Mrs. Lottie Thompson, Puryear, Tenn.; five brothers, Bode, Lubbock, Texas, Marion, Paducah, Jim Midway, Ed, Murray, and Charlie S. Murray Route 4.

Funeral services will be conducted at the Max H. Churchill Funeral Home Friday afternoon at two o'clock with Rev. Lloyd Wilson officiating.

Funeral services will be held by Rev. Robert White, J. W. Thompson, Glenn Adams, Joe B. Adams and Alton Paschall, nephews and nephews-in-law.

Burial will be in the Martins Chapel cemetery.

Friends may call at the Funeral Home after eight o'clock on Friday morning.

Accounts Set Up For PTA Empty Stocking Fund

There is an Empty Stocking account at each of the two Murray banks. Mrs. Clarence Rohwedder reported today. The two accounts have been set up so that those persons wishing to make a deposit to the credit of the fund may do so.

The fund is named the PTA Empty Stocking Fund.

Money from this fund will be used to make purchases for the gift baskets which will be delivered to the homes of persons less fortunate than most families in the county.

Anyone wishing to make a donation of food, clothing, toys, or money may do so by calling Mrs. Hargis or Mrs. Rohwedder. It will be picked up.

Items may be sent to the Murray High School by children as they go to school, and toys may be left at the Murray Fire Station where they will be repaired and repainted.

The request has been made to tag the clothing giving the size so distribution can be facilitated.

Senator Frank Carlson, of Kansas, assuring the nation's farmers that President-elect Eisenhower will protect the farmers' income.

"Farmers of this nation need have no fears that their rug will be pulled out from under them by the new administration."

Magistrate W. E. Batt, in a London court, giving a bit of advice to a woman defendant charged with stealing $1.46 from a grocer even though she had a $1400 bank account.

"Why don't you draw out a good whack and have a fling? You never know what good it will do you."

A letter from a repentant slot machine operator to the Internal Revenue Bureau, explaining why he was making a belated report on $60,000 of income.

"I have been talking with the Lord and such a business as I'm in is a sin."

Eisenhower To Be Back In U. S. Tomorrow; To Talk To General MacArthur

By United Press

President-elect Eisenhower will be back on American soil tomorrow.

When the cruiser "Helena" drops anchor off Hawaii, Eisenhower will get one of the biggest greetings in island history. The "Helena" will anchor at Pearl Harbor at 2 p.m. (EST).

The President-elect and members of his official party will go from Pearl Harbor to the national memorial cemetery of the Pacific, where he will lay a wreath at the base of the flagpole. While he is in Hawaii, Eisenhower's headquarters will be at the Kaneohe Marine Air Station.

Before he settles in for his stay in Honolulu, Eisenhower will hold an important military conference tomorrow, with defense secretary-designate Charles Wilson, General Omar Bradley, chairman of the joint chiefs of staff, and Admiral Arthur Radford, commander of the Pacific Fleet. Among the Eisenhower party which will land from the "Helena" tomorrow are some members of the incoming cabinet—Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, Secretary of Interior Douglas McKay, Treasury Secretary George Humphrey, and Attorney General Herbert Brownell.

Eisenhower has focused attention on General MacArthur's plan to end the Korean war by announcing that he is "eager" to talk the matter over with MacArthur at the earliest opportunity.

MacArthur announced last Friday that he has a formula which could be used to halt the fighting in Korea without exposing the country to the danger of an expanded war. And since that time, MacArthur and Eisenhower have exchanged cables on the matter.

In Washington, a high Pentagon source says if MacArthur has any plan which might end the war, it is his duty as "a good soldier" to turn it over to the Army—quickly.

This source points out that MacArthur still is a five-star general on the Army payroll.

MacArthur's original plan to end the war—which caused his removal by President Truman—called for economic and military blockades of the Chinese mainland, United Nations attacks on Manchuria, and the use of Chian Kai-Shek's National China Army to invade the mainland from Formosa.

Eisenhower has been holding shipboard conferences with his advisers and cabinet members on his administrative, legislative and economic programs.

And, speaking of economy, the President-elect is said to be considering seriously laying off the presidential yacht "Williamburg" and closing the Maryland mountain retreat known as "Shangri-La."

He is said to feel that keeping these luxuries in operation would not fit in with his views on economy in all government branches.

The board of trustees of the Milwaukee Art Library has ordered a billboard taken removed from the library. The billboard was part of the furnishings of an old Milwaukee mansion given to the city. Many arguments were heard for and against the billboard table.

But most of the library trustees were influenced by one idea: that the table made the library look too much like a pool room.

That's Dr. John Wesley Carr, who has been in school rooms for 86 years. He will celebrate his 87th birthday December 13.

"There are two times when I do not worry," Dr. Carr says. "One is before an event happens. After an event has occurred, it is too late to worry."

First president of Murray State College, the "Grand Old Man" admits he plans and works, but he doesn't worry. He says he has a good appetite and sleeps well.

"As for food, I do not care for garlic. Otherwise bring on the provender," Dr. Carr adds.

Born December 13, 1865, in Lawrence County, Indiana, Johnny Carr studied to school October 8, 1886. Those were rugged days in Hoosierland, but he liked the schoolroom.

And he has been in school ever since: pupil in a one-room country school; Greene County school teacher at 17; high school principal at Bloomington and Muncie, Indiana, 1883-1890; superintendent of schools at Anderson, Indiana, Day-

Art Students Show Creations At Murray State

Art students at Murray State College have turned the Kappa Pi club room in the Fine Arts Lounge into a show window that would please old Santa Claus himself this Christmas.

To go along with the annual Kappa Pi-Portfolio Christmas art sale, Joan Humphries, sophomore from Herrin, Illinois, has decorated the club room in the Yuletide motif.

All of the art work on display has been made by art students at Murray State. Much of it—jewelry, copper and silver—is made on original ideas and could not be found even in Santa's workshop.

In addition, the students are offering a great number of other creations in Christmas cards, textiles, ceramics, water colors, oil paintings and silk screen prints.

The club room will be open to the public December 11, 12 and 13 between the hours of 9 a.m. and 9 p.m.

Six Killed As Tanker Hit

By United Press
A wave of excitement sent hundreds of passengers to the rails of a big liner this morning, while down below.

The Holland-American liner "Masadam" was sailing out of the waterway from Rotterdam harbor—bound for New York.

Suddenly the big ship lurched, the sound of ripping metal split the morning quiet.

Horror-stricken passengers caught a glimpse of a German tanker—dwarfed by the big liner—turning upside down.

Now rescue workers are looking for the bodies of six crewmen believed trapped in the overturned tanker. Four others have been rescued. There's no report of any casualties on the liner.

Two other ships collided last night 35 miles southwest of San Diego, California—the small aircraft carrier "Sitkoh Bay" and the freighter "Sea Fort."

The collision knocked a hole in the bow of the freighter. It was sailing to Los Angeles for refueling before leaving for Japan with 10,000 tons of coal.

Damage to the escort carrier—on a training maneuver—is described as "slight." The crews of both ships escaped injury.

Both ships have sailed into San Diego harbor under their own power. The Sea Fort is managed by the Oran Steamship Company of New York.

Miss Elizabeth Clayton Critical; Crashed Against Bank In Rain

Four accidents were reported by Corporal Brigham Futrell of the State Police, with three of them in Callaway county and the other in Marshall county. The heavy rains are credited with causing most of the accidents.

Seriously injured was Miss Elizabeth Clayton of Buchanan, Tennessee, who is the home economics teacher at Kirksey.

Miss Clayton apparently lost control of her automobile, a 1950 Dodge two-door, and crashed into a bank just East of Coldwater, on the Coldwater road. It is not known in which direction Miss Clayton was traveling. Her automobile was demolished and Miss Clayton was thrown into a roadside ditch where she lay until discovered by a passing motorist.

She was rushed to the hospital suffering from numerous injuries. Her condition is described today as poor.

Miss Clayton was alone at the time of the accident which occurred about 3:30 p.m. yesterday. Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Acker of Pensacola, Florida were injured when their automobile got out of control. They were coming toward Murray on the New Concord road when the accident occurred. The automobile, driven by Mrs. Acker, veered across the road and struck a bank. Mrs. Acker's right ankle was broken and Mr. Acker received cuts and bruises on the left side of the face.

The car was nearly demolished.

At 7:00 p.m. last night Joe Russell, driving a 1939 Cadillac, overturned several times in front of the Geurin Concrete Works. His car came to rest in the ditch next to the tobacco warehouse on the South side of the road. He was coming toward Murray at the time.

Russell told police that a truck backed out in front of him, and he turned to avoid a collision. He received a back injury.

This morning at 5:00 a clock a truck driven by Buel Mohndro of Murray, and a 1932 Ford truck driven by Jimmie Jones side-swiped on the Paducah highway, near the Stark's Used Car Lot.

Mohndro was driving a 1949 GMC truck owned by Johnny Parker. Both trucks were damaged considerably and Mr. and Mrs. Jones were taken to the Murray Hospital.

Jones was driving a truck owned by Fred Barber.

Trooper Bryan assisted in the Marshall county accident.

By United Press
Former major league outfielder Dixie Walker has dropped out of the running for manager of the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Walker withdrew from the race
Tuesday by accepting a job as coach of the St. Louis Cardinals.
Dixie replaces Terry Moore who was fired after leading with manager Eddie Stanky last season.
Walker had been mentioned as a candidate for the Pittsburgh job along with Fred Hasey and Eddie Sawyer.

Cardinal president Fred Sanchez said it was Stanky's idea to hire
the former Brooklyn teammate.
Stanky explains "Dixie is one of the smartest hitters I ever youngsters."

MSC To Meet Purple Aces Tonight

Undeclared in two starts, the Thoroughbreds of Murray State will try to make it three in a row at the expense of the Evansville
Purple Aces tonight in Carr gym.
In their season opener, the Thoroughbreds, coached by Coach
Evanville, 80-79.

In their two showings the Thoroughbreds have indicated a lot of potential, but have revealed their dire lack of experience at the moment.
Coach Hopman Hodges has only one veteran on this year's squad, the 30-year-old Garret Hodges.
Two freshmen, Jerome C. Hodges and Charles "Doodles" Floyd, are in his starting lineup.

At Evansville, the two teams played the all the way through the first quarter with fast breaks and then the Aces out front with a basket or two. Neither team was ever more than five points in the lead.
Top man in the contest for Evansville was Keith Conley with 27 points, six field goals and 10 free throws. Les Unertall was top man for the Racers with 14, followed closely by Fesher and
Floyd with 14 each.
Much of the first quarter was controlled by the referees' whistle.
The 30-point game against Mur-

by the same route.

New Lens Aid Those Nearly Blind

By United Press

A new type lens may restore to sight and useful work some 75,000 Americans now considerably virtually blind.

Described by Dr. William Feinbloom of New York's Columbia University, the new lens is the first departure in spectacles and magnifying glasses from the spherical. It is parabolic—flattened at the edges. All previous lenses for improving vision have been curved spherically.

Dr. Feinbloom says good results have been obtained with the new glasses with 90 per cent of some 400 patients during the last five years.

A fully automatic pilot for jet planes has been developed by engineers for the Minneapolis-Honeywell Company. It has been ordered by the Air Force for use on the new twin-jet light bomber, the Douglas RB-66.

The device is expected to make jet flying much safer, especially at night and in bad weather, and to reduce pilot fatigue greatly.

Folks around Glenwood Landing, Long Island, will have plenty of pickled herring this winter, but they may go without electricity for a day or so.

Millions of six-inch herring have crowded for several days into Hempstead Bay, and have clogged up the cold water intake of a big powerhouse. The intake water cools the plant's generators and if the herring close in completely, the powerhouse would have to shut down.

A 20-man crew is waging a life and death struggle, trying to shovel the herring away and keep the pipe clear. Folks from far and near are carting the fish home.

Has 4-Year Record Improving Pastures

Fifty-three years ago, Knox Brown of Spencer county started a pasture improvement and conservation program on his farm. That he has done a good job was proved recently when he was named the district aster pastureman by judges who had inspected many other good farms.

The main-points in Brown's pasture program, observed Nevin I. Gabel, county agent for the University of Kentucky, have been the control of weeds, fertilization and keeping pasture land in pasture. In addition, new clovers and grasses have been used on the farm. All but three acres of the 341-acre farm have been limed, and all fields that indicated a need for phosphate through soil tests have been so treated.

Car Dealer Licenses Expire At End of Year

FRANKFORT, Ky.—Automobile dealers' licenses expire Dec. 31 and should be renewed immediately, Robert A. Thompson, director of Local Relations for the Department of Revenue said here today.

The cost of a dealer's license is $25.50 which includes the certificate and one plate. Each additional plate costs $9 and they are furnished only on order. It requires about three weeks for delivery of additional plates so orders should be placed now with county clerks.

Thompson also called attention to the law covering use of dealer plates. They can be used legally in demonstration sale, and delivery of dealers' motor vehicles. A list of names and addresses of them—heretofore dealer plates must be filled with the county clerk's legal use of plates can be had by application of dealers' licenses and a penalty.

John Marshall, Stephen Field and John Harlan all served as judges for 34 years.

Education Program Is Available

A new consumer education program on food is now available in Kentucky. H. Layton Lindsay, manager of the Kroger Carbon-dale, Ill. branch which operates stores in this area, announced today.

The plan, developed by the home economics division of the Kroger Food Foundation in cooperation with merchandisers and home economics leaders in several states, was reviewed and approved at a meeting of Agricultural Extension Service, Vocational Homemaking, and Kroger Co. officials in Louisville recently.

Designed to assist teachers of home economics and leaders of homemakers clubs, 4-H clubs, and Future Homemakers of America chapters with studies of food information, the Kroger Consumer Information Program offers field trips through stores, warehouses and bakeries coupled with informative food data.

Supply, price, grades, quality, and varieties of food are among the subjects included, with special items receiving emphasis when desired. New foods on the market and new methods of distribution may be discussed, as well as shopping hints and how to buy for economy, efficiency, and good nutrition.

Tours may be arranged through local Kroger store managers, or local Kroger store managers, or by writing Mr. Lindsay at the branch office in Carbondale.

Kenland Clover Leads 35 Kinds

Kenland clover appeared to be thriving best, when 80 farmers this fall inspected the 35 clovers being grown experimentally at the State Reformatory farm in Oldham county. The clovers were seeded in 1951 on land that was as near uniform as possible. All plots received the same treatment. A eight made last spring and again this fall found that more Kenland plants had survived than plants of any other variety. The tests are being made through the cooperation of the Reformatory and the Experiment Station of the University of Kentucky.

CHAPTER TWENTY-ONE

Brian looked up, and pulling Emily to her feet, threw his arms around her and, taking her in a vise-like hold, kissed her as she had never been kissed before. It was completely useless for her to struggle for freedom; since she had no choice but to accept it. When Brian finally released his grip to the extent of holding her at arm's length, he looked down at her with savage eyes.

"Now kiss back, darling, and then we'll really get someplace," he said, drawing her toward him again.

"No, we won't. Let me go, Brian. You haven't any right—"

"I've every right. I'm a free man and you're a free woman and I'm so much in love with you that I'm not going to wait for you another day."

"You'll have to."

"And what'll make me, I'd like to know? Not you, my dear. I tell you, all you need is—"

"I will make you. I won't marry you. I can't. I'm in love with someone else."

He gripped her elbows hard. "You say you're in love with someone else. How long has this been going on?"

"In a way, it's been going on for years."

"You mean, before Roger died?"

"Don't look at me that way, Brian. It wasn't—I didn't. I let him go her arms and stood facing her squarely. "And I know you're doing me the truest thing you can. I know you weren't ever disloyal to him. This other thing you're talking about—it was something you didn't expect, something you didn't even know existed. This other man—does he know how you feel?"

"I think he must. Of course I never told him so. But, before he went away—"

"Before he went away where?"

"Why, he's been in the service, too, Brian. And, before he left Boston—"

"Please let me finish, Brian. He had—he'd attempted a little light love-making. Nothing like we'll, nothing like what you did just now," she added, her color deepening still further. Only one very casual kiss and a few more or less casual remarks. The sort of thing that used to be called flirtation, I believe. I don't think I was the only woman he kissed casually and talked to that way. I think it was more or less natural for him to do so. I'm sure he was very attractive to women generally, and I suppose that type."

"Yes, I know all about that type. In fact, we had one in our office. He broke off suddenly. "You don't mean to tell me—"

"Then he interrupted himself again. "Go on," he said curiously after a moment's pause.

"Perhaps you don't know as much as you think you do about that type, Brian. Emily said calmly. "Because when this man I'm talking about really had a chance to make all kinds of love to me, when I'm afraid I might have tried to stop him, he didn't do it. He had just as much to do with saving his marriage as I had myself. But before he went away, he did tell me that he loved me. He did say that it things had been different, he thought he'd had a right to say that much. I'm not sure whether he did or not, but I know he thought so. I know he wouldn't have done it unless he had."

"And you didn't hear from him again before Roger died?"

"Never directly. Not once."

"But you've heard from him since?"

"Yes. Naturally he wrote me letters of condolence."

"With his tongue in his cheek?"

"Was your tongue in his cheek when you wrote me after Roger died, Brian? You say you've been in love with me for years too! Please be fair! . . ."

"He didn't ask you outright to marry him?"

"Brian, I don't think you have a right to ask for so many details. The letters have been wonderful. They've made me very happy. They've given me something to live for again. Don't you remember, you said yourself you didn't know what would happen to me if Roger died? Well, these letters have made me content to wait. They've raised me to that state of expectancy you talked about."

"And now you've heard that this man's coming home?"

"Yes, I had a letter this morning. He said he wasn't sure yet when he could get here, but sometime this week. He said he'd let me know. He said—oh, Brian, he said he had something very important to tell me, something that couldn't wait any longer."

Her voice, which at first had been so quiet, then troubled and then calm again, suddenly rang out with gladness. She looked up at Brian with shining eyes.

"I meant to tell you about this today anyhow," she said. "I was all ready to when—you interrupted me. I wanted you to know that you'd been right, that I did have something worth waiting for. I didn't bring you here to the attic accidentally or casually. I brought you because I knew no one would find us here, because we'd be undisturbed, because I didn't want anyone to break in on us while I was telling you something so important. And I thought after I told you, we would have a second drink—just a little one. A—sort of toast. I didn't dream, you see that you felt the way you did—the way you do, I'm terribly sorry. Brian, I think a lot of you. But I'm not in love with you. I couldn't be. You understand that now, don't you?"

"Yes, I understand that now."

"So of course you don't want to drink the toast? Of course you'd rather go downstairs."

"But of course I do want to drink it! Of course I wouldn't dream of going downstairs until I had."

He leaned over and picked up the two glasses that had been set down on the floor. Then he lifted one of the old hand-blown bottles with the GOOD HOPE label chained about it and poured out the fragrant old rum. This sugared a little in its flow, and when the glasses were filled, it showed a rich, warm color, one that had mellowed with long years and with much voyaging to distant parts of the world. Brian put the old bottle back in its place and, after handing Emily her glass, raised his own.

"I can't toast you personally," he said, "because then you couldn't drink with me and of course that's what I want you to do. So let's drink instead to your married happiness—with a husband who loves you better than anyone else in the world!"

Has 4-Year Record Improving Pastures

Forty-three years ago, Knox Brown of Spencer county started a pasture improvement and conservation program on his farm. That he has done a good job was proved recently when he was named the district adviser pastureman by judges who had inspected many other good farms.

The main points in Brown's pasture program, observed Edwin L. Goshel, county agent for the University of Kentucky, have been the control of weeds, fertilization and keeping pasture land in pasture. In addition, new clovers and grasses have been used on the farm. All but three acres of the 34-acre farm have been limed, and all fields that indicated a need for phosphate through soil tests have been so treated.

Car Dealer Licenses Expire At End of Year

FRANKFORT, Ky. - Automobile dealers' licenses, expire Dec. 31 and should be renewed immediately, Robert A. Thompson, director of Local Relations for the Department of Revenue said here today.

The cost of a dealer's license is $25.50 which includes the certificate and one plate. Each additional plate costs $9 and they are furnished only on order. It requires about three weeks for delivery of additional plates so orders should be placed now with county clerks.

Thompson also called attention to the law covering use of dealer plates. They can be used legally in demonstration sale, and delivery of dealers' motor vehicles.

A list of names and addresses of county clerks and addresses of dealers' offices is available at the Department of Revenue.

John Marshall, Stephen Field and John Harlan all served as justices for 34 years.

Education Program Is Available

A new consumer education program on food is now available in Kentucky. H. Layton Lindsay, manager of the Kroger Carbonado, Ill. branch which operates stores in this area, announced today.

The plan, developed by the home economics division of the Kroger Food Foundation in cooperation with merchandisers and home economics leaders in several states, was reviewed and approved at a meeting of Agricultural Extension Service, Vocational Homemaking, and Kroger Co. officials in Louisville recently.

Designed to assist teachers or homemakers clubs, 4-H clubs, and Future Homemakers of America chapters with studies of food information, the Kroger Consumer Information Program offers field trips through stores, warehouses and bakeries coupled with informative food data.

Supply, price, grades, quality, and varieties of food are among the subjects included, with special items receiving emphasis when desired. New foods on the market and new methods of distribution may be discussed, as well as shopping hints and how to buy for economy, efficiency, and good nutrition.

Tours may be arranged through local Kroger store managers, or by writing Mr. Lindsay at the branch office in Carbonado.

Kenland Clover Leads 35 Kinds

Kenland clover appeared to be thriving best, when 80 farmers this fall inspected the 35 clovers being grown experimentally in the State Reformatory farm in Orlanham county. The clovers were seeded in 1951 on land that was near uniform as possible. All plots received the same treatment. A final made last spring and again this fall found that more Kenland plants had survived than plants of any other variety. The tests are being made through the cooperation of the Reformatory and the University of Kentucky.

CHAPTER TWENTY-ONE
BRIAN jumped up, and pulling Emily to her feet, threw his arms around her and, taking her in a quick kiss, held her as she had never been kissed before. It was completely useless for her to struggle for freedom; since she could not escape the embrace, she had no choice but to accept it. When Brian finally released his grip to the extent of holding her at arm's length, he looked down at her with a smile.

"Now kiss back, darling, and then we'll really get someplace," he said, drawing her toward him again.

"No, we won't. Let me go, Brian. You haven't any right."

"I've every right. I'm a free man and you're a free woman and I'm so much in love with you that I'm not going to wait for you another day."

"You'll have to."

"And what'll make me, I'd like to know? Not you, my dear. I tell you, all you need is—"

"I will make you. I won't marry you. I can't. I'm in love with someone else."

He gripped her elbows hard. "You say you're in love with someone else. How long has this been going on?"

"In a way, it's been going on for years."

"You mean, before Roger died?"

"Don't look at me that way, Brian. He let go her arms and stood facing her squarely. "And I know you're telling me the truth, he went on. "I know you weren't ever disloyal to him. This other thing you're talking about—it was something you didn't expect, something you didn't even know existed. This other man—does he know how you feel?"

"Before he went away where?"

"Way, he's been in the service, too, Brian. And, before he left Boston—"

"Please let me finish, Brian. He had—he'd attempted a little light love-making. Nothing like—well, nothing like what you did just now," she added, her color deepening still further. "Only one very casual kiss and a few more or less and then he was gone. The sort of thing that used to be called flirtation, I believe. I don't think I was the only woman he kissed casually and talked to that way. I think it was more or less natural for him to do so. I'm sure he was very attractive to women generally, and I suppose that type."

"Yes, I know all about that type. In fact, we had one in our office. He broke off suddenly. "You don't mean to tell me—"

He began. Then he interrupted himself again. "Go on," he said curtly, after a moment's pause.

"Perhaps you don't know as much as you think you do about that type, Brian. Know this man, I'm talking about really had a chance

Anti-Racket Law Asked

By United Press
Medical societies in New York have been asked to help draft a law forbidding doctors to engage in prescription racketeering. Attorney General Nathanial Goldstein made the request after prosecution officials forced six wholesale drug firms, which were partly owned by doctors, out of business. The doctors were accused of writing prescriptions so worded that they called for common drugs under the private brand names of the firms involved. Goldstein said the practice resulted in enormous increases in the cost of the prescriptions.

A group of Boston University scientists led by Dr. Henry Lemon, has worked out a system of measuring the chemical changes which cancerous cells bring in male hormones.

The research is expected to lead to much more knowledge of the chemical nature of cancer. It was described at a meeting in New York of the American Federation For Clinical Research.

At the same meeting, president Laurence Rockefeller reported significant gains in the five-year cure rates for various types of cancer in patients treated at the Memorial Center for cancer in New York. The five-year cure rate for throat cancer, he said, has jumped from 11 to 22 per cent; for paranasal sinus cancer, from 17 to 33 per cent; for malignant melanoma, from 11 to 31 per cent; and for breast cancer, from 31 to almost 50 per cent.

Generals Use Of 'Copters Criticized

By United Press
Front line American officers complain that some generals have made the helicopter one of the worst nuisances ever invented. They admit the helicopter is of tremendous value for the evacuation of wounded from the front. And they don't take exception to its use for that.

But it's what generals use them for that irks these officers. Each general has his own private helicopter. And most of them now rarely use any other form of transportation.

Some of them even have helicopter landing strips smack in front of their division headquarters, one officer says.

"I know of one general who spent his time hovering over the front lines. Ever time he saw a soldier without a helmet or trying to take a cat-nap, he would call the ground commander on the radio and chew him out. Did you ever hear of such nonsense?"

Other officers tell of a corps commander who used his helicopter to catch speeders on the road below. And one veteran engineering officer tells of a general who inspected roads by flying over them in a chopper.

"There is only one way to inspect roads," this officer said indignantly, "and that's by riding on it."

Front-line officers also say that generals now can drop in at any time and just about any place, forcing them to drop whatever they are doing and pay attention to the visitor.

"Before the brass used to think twice about visiting the front when it meant driving over bumpy roads," they complain. "Now you have no protection at all."

There were 115 officers on duty at the end of the report period. The figure does not include 45 cadet troopers who were in training at the time and who graduated late last month.

Bad Weather Increases Careful Driving Need

FRANKFORT, Ky., Dec. 9 — Winter weather and increased holiday traffic call for Kentucky motorists to drive with extra caution during December, according to Charles B. Jones, executive secretary of the Governor's Committee for Highway Safety.

He warned drivers to travel at reduced speeds, be sure their vehicles are in good mechanical order to use chains when roads are icy and to be sure that windshields provide proper vision. He also cited the danger of pedestrians loaded with Christmas packages, and unable to see approaching traffic.

Bikes should be pumped slowly when stopping on a slick surface, and the interval between vehicles should be greater during bad weather, Jones added.

Kentucky traffic deaths through last Tuesday totaled 697 for 1952. There had been 676 deaths at the same period last year. The total for 1951 was 740.

A great saving of time is gained by "slip coaches" attached to the rear of express trains on British railways and released 400 yards from non-stop stations. Cuttings of grape vines from Spain were transplanted to New Mexico in the days of the first missions.
