THE DAILY MESSENGER.

VOLUME VI. NO. 224.

MAYFIELD KY., TUESDAY AFTERNOON APRIL 17, 1906.

PRICE 5 CENTS.

Clarksville and The Tobacco Association.

Certain individuals in Clarksville continue to use their influence toward disrupting the tobacco growers' association. All kinds of fairy tales are whispered into the ears of the credulous farmer to induce him to quit the organization, that has rescued him from the domination of a merciless trust, and again place him at his mercy.

Mr. Warfield declines a reapointment as salesman for the reason that the executive committee would not allow him to dictate its policy. If the salesmen are all powerful there is no need of an executive committee; but so long as there is an executive committee it should, and we believe will perform its functions and require its employees to carry out its policies.

The Leaf-Chronicle which did such splendid work at first, now turns a somersault and tells the farmers that they must come to Clarksville to find a buyer! Only a few months ago this same paper was telling these same farmers what a bad set the Clarksville buyers were. And that this was and is literally true is attested by hundreds of farmers who have been shown. If the farmers can, as they do by organization, compel the buyers to pay their price, will the Leaf Chronicle or any tool of the Clarksville clique explain why it is they cannot by the same method compel the buyers to go where the tobacco is stored. The Leaf-Chronicle has told the farmers that the buyers were bound to have their tobacco. The truth of this is undisputed; then why wouldn't the buyers come to Pembroke, Hopkinsville, Guthrie, or elsewhere, if the goods wanted were stored at either of the places? The farmer is not a fool and the organization will stand, even though the Clarksville delegation while posing as its friends, are not losing an opportunity to stab it in the back.

The farmers must realize now and for good that there is but one executive committee, and that the principles and policies enunciated by that committee

They Stand Alone.

Standing out in bold relief, all alone, and as a conspicuous example of open, frank and honest dealing with the sick and afflicted, are Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription for weak, over-worked, debilitated, nervous, "run-down," pain-racked women, and Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, the famous remedy for weak stomach, indigestion, or dyspepsia, torpid liver, or biliousness, all catarrhal affections, whether of the stomach, bowels, kidneys, bladder, nasal passages, throat, bronchia, or other mucous passages, also as an effective remedy for all diseases arising from thin, watery or impure blood, as scrofulous and skin affections.

Each bottle of the above medicines bears upon its wrapper a badge of honesty in the full list of ingredients composing it—printed in plain English. This frank and open publicity places these medicines in a class all by themselves, and is the best guaranty of their merits. They cannot be classed as patent nor secret medicines for they are neither—being of known composition.

Dr. Pierce feels that he can afford to take the afflicted into his full confidence and lay all the ingredients of his medicines freely before them because these ingredients are such as are endorsed and most strongly praised by scores of the most eminent medical writers as cures for the diseases for which these medicines are recommended. Therefore, the afflicted do not have to rely alone upon Dr. Pierce's recommendation as to the curative value of his medicines for certain easily recognized diseases.

A glance at the printed formula on each bottle will show that no alcohol and no harmful or habit-forming drugs enter into Dr. Pierce's medicines, they being wholly compounded of glyceric extracts of the roots of native American forest plants. These are best and safest for the cure of most lingering, chronic diseases. Dr. R. V. Pierce can be consulted free, by addressing him at Buffalo, N. Y., and all communications are regarded as sacredly confidential.

It is as easy to be well as ill—and much more comfortable. Constipation is the cause of many forms of illness. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation. They are tiny, sugar-coated granules. One little "Pellet" is a gentle laxative, two a mild cathartic. All dealers in medicines sell them.

must be supported in spite of the entreaties of those who are about to lose their jobs. It must be remembered that the association was gotten up for the protection of the tobacco growers and not to further enrich those who have for years and years preyed upon them.—Pembroke Journal.

BLOCKADED

Every Household in Mayfield Should Know How to Resist it.

The back aches because the kidneys are blockaded.

Help the kidneys with their work.

The back will ache no more.

Lots of proof that Doan's Kidney Pills do this.

It's the best proof, for it comes from Mayfield.

John Baker, fireman at the Mayfield Coal and Ice Co.'s plant living on north 8th street says:

"For several years I had kidney complaint and urinary trouble. My back was so sore sometimes that I could hardly stoop. At night it was often so bad that I could not lie on it. The kidney secretions were so frequent and accompanied by symptoms of inflammation, and if left to remain deposited a heavy sediment like brick dust. I doctored and used more or less medicine but got little or no relief. I was told about Doan's Kidney Pills and got a box at Leon Evans' drug store. Since taking them I have not been bothered at all with the former difficulties. They cured me and I can not speak too highly for them."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Married For Sure.

L. H. Hopkins and Miss L. N. Norman, of near Water Valley, Ky., were married here Thursday by Esq. J. T. Futrell.

This was the young couple who came to the Squire on Sunday, April 8th to be married. Owing to an all round mistake on the part of those concerned the young people were not properly married on that occasion and so Thursday they came in to try it over again.

The knot was tied hard and fast this last time and Mr. and Mrs. Hopkins went their way rejoicing.—Fulton Leader.

W. K. C. Alumni.

To the alumni:—Your presence is earnestly requested at the home of Miss Annie Hale on Thursday evening April 19th, at 7:30 o'clock.

Miss Marion Happy Sec.

A Very Much

"Eddified" Affair.

Tuesday morning about 9 o'clock Will Saxton and Katie Settle, a colored couple of Pryorsburg, were married in the court house. The ceremony was performed by Judge Ed Crossland and the witnesses to the affair were Ed Johnston, Ed Bolinger, Ed Hamlet and Ed Settle. Possibly there would have been more Eds present if it had been possible to get them there. Anyway it was very much of an "Eddified" affair.

Lee Tibbs, of the American Express Company is ill today.

Died at Arlington.

Mrs. R. T. Hocker died Saturday at her home in Arlington after being sick for some time. She was formerly Miss Malinda Peck. She was 58 years of age and was born in this county near Lowes. Besides a husband she leaves two children, Mrs. Dora Chenault and Robert Hocker and a large circle of friends to mourn her death. She was a member of the Baptist church and was universally the best loved woman in that part of the county. Every body whom she had ever met loved her. She was a sister of Dr. Rowland Peck, of Lowes and a sister-in-law of Judge J. W. Hocker of Mayfield. The funeral was preached by Eld. W. F. Lowe, of this county, who received her into the church when she was 15 years old and who also solemnized the rights of matrimony in 1873. The Odd Fellows lodge officiated at the interment.

Marriage Feast.

There was a marriage and an old fashioned "infare dinner" at the residence of Mrs. C. R. McClain at Lynnville last Saturday night. The occasion was the marriage of her daughter Miss Cecil McClain to Mr. Marvin Forrest. The ceremony was performed by Esq. Collier of near Dukedom.

The attendants were Herman Grissom, Bessie Caldwell, Chas Turner and Myrtle Jones. The evening was spent delightfully by the young people.

SPRING CATARRH

Evans & Covington Sell Hyomei Under Guarantee of Cure.

The changeable weather of Spring is directly responsible for the prevalence of catarrhal troubles in Mayfield at the present time.

As a result Evans & Covington have had a larger sale for Hyomei the past week than ever before in the years that Evans & Covington has handled this reliable treatment for the cure of catarrh.

If there is a single catarrhal germ in the system, Hyomei will search it out and absolutely destroy it, completely eradicating the trouble. The remedy has made so many cures among Evans & Covington customers that they offer to pay for it themselves if it does not benefit even the worst case of catarrh.

The complete outfit costs only $1., consisting of an inhaler, medicine dropper, and bottle of Hyomei, while extra bottles of Hyomei can be obtained for 50 cents. There will not be even this small expense if Hyomei does not cure, as Evans & Covington will return your money.

HELD OVER.

Roy Kelly, colored, on the charge of entering the produce house of Milton Jones, and stealing a lot of hides, at his trial Tuesday morning was held over to wait the action of the grand jury.

The Stock Show.

A number of stock owners had their stock on display Saturday at the fair grounds but there was not as many as had been anticipated. The horses which were shown were some of, if not the finest, ever brought to the county.

The number of spectators were many and the owners of stock missed a fine opportunity to make a showing.

Old Rusty Charley Wire, who has not been actively in the horse business for several years, brought back fond recollections of by gone days when he was seen to mount "Harrison," the great, and do some of his old time tactics. He is always there with the goods and can make a horse do almost anything but talk.

Death at West Plains.

Mrs. Nannie Johnson, wife of Hodge Johnson, died at eight o'clock Saturday night of tuberculosis of the throat at her home in the West Plains section. She was 22 years old and a daughter of the late John West. Two children are left besides a husband. The deceased was a member of the Methodist church at Spencer's Chapel. The burial took place Sunday at West Plains and her funeral was preached by Rev. Moody.

Sunday Night

At M. E. Church.

The Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies entertained a full house Sunday night at the M. E. church. The evening services were entirely given over to the good ladies of the societies by the pastor.

Mrs. D. M. Patterson presided over the meeting.

Several interesting talks were made by members of the societies and one by Col. Noel Gains, of the Ky. State Guards which were well received.

The music was good and the evening's exercises were enjoyed by all present.

Lively Times Sunday

At Sedalia.

Rob McClain and Chas. Doran, two young men, got into a difficulty Sunday at a singing at the church in Sedalia which resulted in a lively fight.

McClain was hit several times while Doran was not much hurt, but very serious trouble would have resulted if the parents of the boys and friends had not interfered and kept them apart. The trouble came up very suddenly over an old grudge and before it was stopped the singing was broken up and much excitement prevailed among those present.

The boys belong to two good families and their trouble is regretted by their parents and friends.

Called to Meet

In Louisville.

The Executive Committee of the Kentucky Press Association is called to meet in Louisville, next Saturday, at the "Old Inn," to name the time and place of the meeting of the Kentucky Press Association this year.

The New Christian Church.

The committee have decided to purchase the Hale lot 100x150 feet for the purpose of building the new church upon it and arrangements are being made to begin the work on the house at once.

The committee is getting ready to push the work to completion as early as possible.

THE ORGAN GRINDER'S DREAM

By JULIA TRUITT BISHOP
 (Author of "The Runaway Inn," Etc.)

(Copyright, 1903, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

Antonio lived in the Italian quarter, just off Ursuline street, but he also lived like a prince of the royal blood. He had an entire room to himself; for this he was not liked by the other Italians, who dwell whole families together in a room, so that late comers at night had to step over 12 or 15 prostrate bodies to reach their own special corner. They felt, with justice, that he was giving himself airs. Antonio, indeed!—a common Dago with a monkey! They called him a "Dago," with that shrug of the shoulders and outward sweep of the supple palm that express more contempt than other men know how to put into words.

When daylight came a swarm of swarthy men poured out of the dingy houses that made up the Italian quarter. And Antonio, also, arose betimes every morning and was off to his work—he and Manuella. Big, strong Americans who saw them together, often remarked that if they had their way, these lazy Dagos should be set to work. They did not know how heavy the organ was, nor how the straps cut into his shoulders, so that sometimes even the added weight of Manuella seemed to make it unendurable. There were even times when the organ was so heavy that Antonio coughed all night after carrying it. The work about this was that the coughing kept Manuella awake, and that was not good for her. She was apt to be sluggish the next day when she was kept awake at night.

All day Antonio and Manuella went about the streets. When Antonio set the organ down and began to turn the crank, Manuella danced and capered and turned somersaults until the children were frantic with joy. It was worth a great deal to see her put the nickels into the pocket of her little red suit. When the people were gone she went down into the pocket again and gave the nickels to Antonio. Then he got the organ on his back, and Manuella sat on it, with her arms around his neck, and they went on again. Sometimes his luck was poor, but oftener he carried home a little fortune in nickels and dimes. For Manuella was a comedian, and Antonio, without knowing it, was as beautiful as one of Murillo's cherubs.

They went home in the glare of the electric lights, so tired that sometimes Manuella slept on his shoulder and Antonio almost staggered as he walked. But when they had eaten and were rested a little, Antonio started out again with Manuella in his arms, and all at once his step had grown light. He was not going very far—only to Hospital street, where he would find a girl sitting on a doorstep. Her name was Celeste, and she was not an Italian. She was pretty, with a daintiness, childlike prettiness, so that strangers turned to look again, seeing the two together, and sometimes people said: "Don't they make a picture—those two?" They sat on the clean white steps, in the full glare of the arc light at the corner, and Celeste played with Manuella.

"When you go to die, you must give Manuella to me," she said one evening, looking at him and laughing. She had dimples at the corner of her mouth when she laughed.

"I not goin' to die," said Antonio, smiling back at her. "But I give-a you me an' Manuella too."

This was Antonio's proposal. He had been six months coming to it. He felt that it could not be delayed. In a little while it would be too cold to sit on the steps.

Celeste leaned back against the door and looked at him lazily.

"You? An' what I go'n do with you?" she asked. "I wot in de fact try me, an' I tek care of myself; but me, what I wan' of a man to tek care of?"

Celeste laughed as she said it, and tossed her wicked little head. Her eyes were shining—she was very beautiful.

"You not take-a care-a me!" interposed Antonio with swift justification. "I make de money—four hond' dolla'—an' I gotta de one room to me alone. I keep my wife like-a leddy. You take-a me, Celeste,—me an' Manuella."

It was the main fact at issue which had attracted the attention of Celeste. "Four hundred dollar?" she cried. "You ave all dat money? You don't kip it in dat room?"

"Fou' hon'—mebbe more," he said with a pleased smile. "Nobod' know but me an' Manuella. You notta wot no more, Celeste—you be a leddy."

"You tak-a me!" he pleaded, looking into her shining eyes. "You know how you come-a see me once, long-a time, when I play yond'? I been-a wot fo' you all a time since. I make-a my wife live like-a leddy—"

At some distant corner a street organ was playing a waltz, with fife and drum and horn accompaniment. Celeste suddenly sprang from the steps with a gay little laugh and went floating out on the banquette in time with the music, looking like a perverse little fairy blown by the wind. Then she ran to the green gate beside the steps.

"Good-night!" she called saucily, and vanished, but put out her head a moment later to cry, half-mockingly, "Thass right, Antonio—wot hard-an' mek money fo' you wife!"

Antonio went back to his room, his head in a whirl of joy. He hugged Manuella under his coat until she chattered and thrust out an inquiring head.

"You don't know, do you, my Manuella?" he asked in the liquid language he loved; and Manuella curled back into her place and went to sleep again. She did not know.

But even when one has a very light heart, one finds the organ heavy at times, and a cough comes in spite of happiness. All at once it was cold, and fierce winds were blowing. Antonio kept to the sheltered side of the streets, and went home early; but when they journeyed around to Hospital street it was too cold to sit on the steps. A timid ring at the bell brought Celeste, peeping gaily out, crying:

"Oh, but you are a silly! Go back chez vous, wid dat cough. First ting, you will hek youself to die!"

Then she ran away and he tramped back, but he was happy still. She loved him—she had asked him to take care of himself.

Celeste went back to the smoky kitchen.

"It was that little Dago," she said to the man who sat at the other side of the stove. She spoke in French.

"I wish I had the little beast's monkey," growled the man. "Then I could go in with Dufour, in the shop—and we could be married."

"Think of a little Dago organ-grinder having all that money!" she said complacently. "And him so careless with it—keeping it in his room! And what good will it ever do him?—he's not going to live long. And he has no one—he told me so. I would put it in the bank, me!"

The next day was very long, for a cold mist was driving down from the north, and Manuella refused to dance in spite of all his coaxing. She crept under his coat instead, and whined and shivered so that ladies thought her too cunning for anything, and bestowed largess upon her everywhere she went. Antonio's pockets were heavy as he trudged homeward in the middle of the afternoon. He was coughing and filled with dull pains. He would go and look at Celeste's house, and then he and Manuella would go home and eat their supper and go to bed, to save fire.

A carriage was at the door of Celeste's house, a crowd of children and loungers around it, the driver flicking at them good-naturedly with his whip. The whip was tied with a bow of white ribbon. Was anybody dead? Was Celeste—

"Here dey come!" cried the smallest girl, with the largest baby in her arms; and the driver sprang down and opened the door of the carriage. Celeste and a man were coming out, with others following them, and Celeste was dressed in white. The carriage door slammed shut—they were gone.

"What is it?" asked the Italian.

"Why, a wedding—ain't you got no eyes?" was the reply.

The children, finding the amusement over, looked about for more worlds to conquer, and saw a man, with an organ and a monkey, leaning against the wall.

"Mister, le's see de monkey! Mister, make de monkey dance!" they pleaded.

He stood up without speaking, and staggered away. When he reached the stairs he pulled himself up painfully by the railing. After awhile, he was in his own room. Manuella found something wrong, and sprang chattering under the bed. The slow tears crowded to Antonio's eyes.

"You are right, my Manuella," he whispered. "We will go away—we will go back home—"

He thrust his hand under the pillow, and found nothing there—and then he saw that other hands than his had tumbled the pillows and disarranged the bedclothing.

With a groan Antonio fell forward, wondering vaguely what it was that had rushed into his throat.

"I come for the monkey," said a young woman, pushing her way through the crowd of gesticulating Italians, a man following her. "He tell me he give the monkey to me when he die. To me, Manuella!"

Manuella was at bay on a high shelf in the corner, waiting until he should come again. Antonio—and take her into his arms. But when the small hand came near her she sprang up and bit it viciously. The pretty young woman shrieked and a dozen knives and clubs struck at Manuella; but with a wild leap, she was away, and over their heads, and out of the building. A long procession trailed after her, and among them went a young woman with her hand bound up in a handkerchief. Down toward the river sped Manuella in flying leaps.

At the wharf a great boat had just loosed her hold and was swinging slowly out, the tug with its shoulder against the gigantic side breathing heavily, like one over-burdened. With a mighty leap Manuella cleared the space and ran up the net-work of rigging. The people stood on the wharf, watching, until the boat rounded the farthest curve. Away up at the top of the mainmast was a tiny speck. It was Manuella, with her small gray face turned toward a distant land—and home.

Don't Wait for Map.
 About 100 years more will be required to complete the work of making a topographical map of the country, which was begun by the United States government in 1882. This work is being carried on in cooperation with the states, New York, for example, having appropriated annually $20,000 to $25,000 as its share. There has never been a topographical map of the United States published other than rough sketches.

COUNTERFEIT DOGS.

FAKERS PREPARE PRIZE ANIMALS FOR THE MARKET.

Hair Is Dyed, False Skins Sewed On and Various Other Deceptions Are Employed in the Work.

The spurious dog dealer keeps a sharp eye on all the members of the canine species as he walks about; he is prepared to buy a likely animal for five shillings or seven shillings six pence; if he can get it for or without the asking, says Pearson's Weekly.

There are plenty of dogs about and a pug or a black and tan can be bought cheaply enough, but those are not really good animals. The right kind of a dog is scarce and fetches a high price; this is the dog faker's opportunity and he makes good use of it.

Here is an example of the method of working: The dealer has a pug dog of a kind that is not worth a dozen shillings; the dealer has literally "picked it up" for nothing! It has a splendid black nose, but it lacks the line down the back that would make it valuable. This fatal and apparently insurmountable obstacle presents no difficulty to the dealer, who cheerfully and skillfully sets to work to make that dog worth £10 or so.

The unfortunate creature is fixed tightly in a wooden box or framework. At the top there is a slit in the wool of the same dimensions as the line that is wanted on the dog's back. A powerful dye is laid on through this slit and then it is "fixed," to use a photographic term.

This last process is done with nitric acid and those who have had to deal with that chemical will not need to be told that the animal suffers great pain for three or four days. When the victim of the faking process has recovered its appearance is so changed that it is doubtful if its own mother would recognize it.

Exactly how long the deception would remain undetected depends upon the thoroughness or otherwise with which the transformation work has been done. The dye lasts a long time, but it does wear off ultimately.

Perhaps the most curious method of altering a dog's appearance is that of sewing another skin over the original covering. The Chinese are reputed to be past masters in this art and to have practised it for the purpose of getting diamonds out of the Kimberley mines. A valuable dog has, we will assume, just died; its skin is taken and, after a slight preparation, is sewed round another dog.

This double skinned animal is sold to a lady fond of the particular kind of creature which this dog now impersonates, and the dealer has done a good thing. In human beings a "thick skin" is supposed to render the owner more comfortable, but the artificially thick-skinned canine is distinctly uncomfortable in its new garb.

A lady who had bought a dog like that and had given it a bountiful supply of food was greatly worried on seeing the creature lie down and give vent to expressions of pain. A vet, hurriedly summoned to examine the animal, horrified the kindly dame by unceremoniously ripping up the dog's skin with his pocketknife.

It was not such a dreadful deed as it appeared; in fact, it was only like the schoolboy unbuttoning his waistcoat after a good dinner. The extra wrapping was so tight that it did not allow for natural expansion. The dog was a poor cur not worth having when denuded of its false skin.

Russian Terrorism.

The "terrorist" element of the Russian revolutionary organization is resorting to frequent assassinations in revenge against civil and military officials who have manifested special harshness in putting down revolutionary demonstrations. The agents of the terrorists often are women, who show great courage and ingenuity in carrying out their designs. Many minor officials have been murdered, and numerous attempts have been made upon the lives of higher officials. Gen. Bogdanovitch, formerly vice governor of Ufa province, and Lieut. Gen. Sakaroff, formerly chief of staff of the viceroy of the Caucasus, in January. A bomb was thrown at Gen. Kourloff, governor of Minsk, in January, and on February 9 Admiral Chouknin, naval commander at Sebastopol, was shot four times by a woman who gained admission to his office, and was killed by the sentry as she tried to escape.—Youth's Companion.

WOULD BE KEPT ALIVE.

Man Wanted to Work Would Not Be Incapacitated for Doing the Same.

Samuel Gompers, the reflected chief of the American Federation of Labor, was pointing out the good that unions had done for workmen.

"In France," he said, "there are few unions, and a French bricklayer told me the other day that wages were, in consequence, unreasonably low there."

"The bricklayer said with a laugh that a friend of his in Nice out of work, bought on the Avenue de la Gare a newspaper. He took the paper home to his attic in the squalid Rue Felix, and his wife, after turning to the advertisements, said, eagerly:

"The very thing! You must look into this, Marcel. It says a man is wanted at the Palais de la Jetee, and he won't be worked to death, and will be paid enough to live on."

"The man started."

"Won't be worked to death?" he muttered.

"Yes," said his wife; "and paid enough to live on."

"He frowned."

"Ha," he said. "Some catch about that."

TERRIBLE SCALP HUMOR.

Head Covered with Humor Sores, with Loss of Hair—Another Speedy Cure by Cuticura Remedies.

"All my life I had been troubled more or less with humor in my scalp, but about a year ago it became worse, and my scalp was covered with little sores, which itched so it nearly made me crazy; my hair also began to get dry and fall out. I tried all kinds of hair restorers with no effect, and I was nearly discouraged; but one day I was reading in a paper what the Cuticura Remedies had done for scalp diseases, and decided to make a trial. I got a cake of Cuticura Soap, a box of Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Resolvent Pills. I used them according to directions, and soon noticed a difference; the tiny sores on my scalp began to heal, the itching stopped, and my hair began to grow thick. I have used only the one cake of Soap, one box of Ointment, and one vial of Pills, and now I have no humor on my scalp and my hair is soft and silky. Miss Mayzie C. Atkins, Box 32, East Orleans, Mass., Mar. 19, 1905."

Just about the time a man gets comfortably fixed in his favorite chair with the evening newspaper, his wife thinks of what some caller told her during the day.

The trouble about accumulating money is that just about the time a man begins to get somewhere near what he wants, he dies and is compelled to give it all up.

It would be much easier to do the right thing if people were not generally ready to take it for granted that they wouldn't.

Many a man who would scorn to accept money is bribed with flattery and doesn't know it.

A CURE FOR DEBILITY

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills A Reliable Remedy for the Weak, Ailing and Bloodless.

When the body is weak and the blood thin it is sometimes difficult to find the cause unless a wasting illness has preceded, or the sufferer happens to be a girl on the verge of womanhood.

Obscure influences, something unhealthy in one's surroundings or work, may lead to a slow impoverishment of the blood and an enfeeblement of the whole body. When a serious stage has been reached there seems to be nothing that will account for it.

Mr. C. E. Legg, of Tipton, W. Va., has found a successful method of treating weakness and bloodlessness. He says:

"I used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for weakness caused by a lingering malarial fever that began in the spring of 1896. The worst effects of this were indigestion and a bad state of my blood. I was anemic, as the doctors say. People generally would say that I didn't have blood enough, or that I didn't have the right kind of blood; mine was too thin. My kidneys and liver were out of order. I was badly annoyed by sour risings from my stomach. There was a good deal of pain, too, in my back and under my right shoulder blade."

"How long did these troubles last?" "For over two years. For four months of that time I was under the care of a physician, but his medicine did me no good. Meanwhile I learned of the cures that had been wrought by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

"You owe your cure to these pills?" "I certainly do, and I also know that they are helping others to whom I have recommended them. They have real merit and I know of nothing that would take their place."

TIPS FOR THE TABLE.

Bending the head to drink is inelegant.

The arms should not be allowed to rest on the table.

A well-bred host does not urge a guest to eat more.

A gesture of dissent is sufficient to say one does not take wine.

It is impolite to assure him that there is an abundant supply.

A hostess does not apologize. A guest does not see anything amiss.

Lifting a small plate from the table while eating from it is provincial and common.

"COFFEE JAGS."

The Doctor Named Them Correctly.

Some one said "Coffee never hurts anyone." Inquire of your friends and note their experiences.

A Phila. woman says:

"During the last 2 or 3 years I became subject to what the doctor called 'coffee jags' and felt like I have heard men say they feel who have drank too much rum. It nauseated me, and I felt as though there was nothing but coffee flowing through my veins."

"Coffee agreed well enough for a time, but for a number of years I have known that it was doing me great harm, but, like the rum toper, I thought I could not get along without it. It made me nervous, disordered my digestion, destroyed my sleep and brought on frequent and very distressing headaches."

"When I got what the doctor called a 'coffee jag' on, I would give up drinking it for a few days till my stomach regained a little strength, but I was always fretful and worried and nervous till I was able to resume the use of the drug."

"About a year ago I was persuaded to try Postum, but as I got it in restaurants it was nothing but a sloppy mess, sometimes cold, and always weak, and of course I didn't like it. Finally I prepared some myself, at home, following the directions carefully, and found it delicious. I persevered in its use, quitting the old coffee entirely, and feeling better and better each day, till I found at last, to my great joy, that my ailments had all disappeared and my longing for coffee had come to an end."

"I have heretofore suffered intensely from utter exhaustion, besides the other ailments and troubles, but this summer, using Postum, I have felt fine." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

There's a reason. Restaurant cooks rarely prepare Postum Coffee properly. They do not let it boil long enough.

AFGHAN CABLE PATTERN.

This Is One of the Knitted Slumber Robes and One That Has Attained No Little Popularity.

Materials—Six skeins maroon Scotch yarn, 4 skeins of old gold. Two needles of bone, wood or rubber No. 8.

Cast on 20 stitches with maroon, knit across plain once.

1st row—Slip 1 (over, narrow) twice, seam 11 (over, narrow) twice.

2d row—Slip 1 (over, narrow) twice, 11 plain (over, narrow) twice.

3d row—Slip 1 (over, narrow) twice, seam 4, turn and now knit for the cable as follows, on the 4 seamed stitches only: () slip 1, 2 plain, turn, slip 1, seam 3, turn (), repeat from (*) till you have done 10 of these little rows, then draw the needle out of the 4 stitches and leave the cable on the right side of the knitting (the side away from you), take 4 stitches from the left-hand needle on to the right hand, pick up the 4 stitches of the cable on the right-hand needle again, and knit off the remaining stitches from the left-hand needle by seaming 3 (over, narrow) twice.

4th row—Like second.

5th row—Like third.

6th row—Slip 1 (over narrow) twice, 4 plain, turn, and knit for another cable on the 4 plain stitches only: () slip 1, seam 3, turn, slip 1, 3 plain, turn, repeat from () till you have done 10 little rows, then draw the needle out of the 4 stitches, and leaving the cable again on the right side of the knitting (this time the side next you) take 4 stitches from the left-hand needle on to the right hand, pick up the 4 stitches of the cable and knit off the remaining stitches from the left-hand needle by knitting 3 plain (over, narrow) twice.

Repeat from 1st row till the strip is length desired; bind off; do 3 more narrow stripes, then 3 stripes of old gold. These stripes may be crocheted together with black if desired. Finish with knotted fringe.—Eva M. Niles.

GRAY VERY FASHIONABLE.

The Color Is Immensely Popular In Paris This Spring Both with Dressmaker and Milliner.

Never has gray been so popular among the master dressmakers. It is used in Paris for everything from tail suits to ball gowns, with motor coats and street veils and afternoon gowns to correspond. Admiration was given the startling gray costume worn by an American girl which was of a peculiar new cloth exactly resembling suede kid. The color was pearl gray, with several rows of sable on the hem of the corselet skirt, and with little scrolls of the sable on the bodice. The blouse was a coarse meshed Brussels net in the same shade as the cloth, and the toque and stole were of chin-chilla. The hat had several gardenias well to the front and there was worn with it a long veil in an embroidered net in a subdued shade of violet.

This is a Parisian notion also—the contrasting veil and the gray veil is a special fancy with the black, dark blue or mauve hat. A spotted net of blue which comes extra wide and is finished either with a hemstitched border of chiffon, or an uneven border of gray lace. It is also worn with all gray confections and one of the prettiest bits of millinery is a soft, round crowned and narrow brimmed felt of gray, with the crown covered with gray chiffon swatched around it. It is draped around an ostrich plume to match, stretching toward the back on one side and meeting shorter ones under the brim at the back.

In Paris, afternoon gowns are specialized, and one of the best houses has put one forth of pale gray taffeta mousseline, with lace and slightly darker gray velvet on the bodice. There are also bows of the velvet run through little round buckles which are covered with silver bugles.

THE POPULAR CARNATION.

A Mistake to Think This Fragrant and Beautiful Flower Cannot Be Grown by Amateur.

The impression obtains among home gardeners that carnations can't be raised except by a professional florist, when the fact is there are two or three varieties that can be easily grown by any amateur. The Margaret sorts, for instance, started from seed sown in the spring, will produce flowers all summer and fall, after which they can be potted up for flowering during winter. The choice varieties should be sown in May outdoors, transplanting when large enough, and they will make thrifty clumps by fall, which will give large quantities of flowers early the following summer. The plants are very hardy and require but slight covering and little care during the winter months. The popularity of the carnation should make it a favorite of every florist and a permanent fixture in the home garden.—Farm and Home Sentinel.

Swiss Cream.

Put a layer of sponge cakes in a glass dish and pour over them as much sherry as they will soak up. Put one pint cream, or half cream and half milk, into a lined saucepan and bring to the boiling point; pour it gradually on the four eggs well beaten, one-quarter pound loaf sugar, and a few drops of essence of almonds; pour back into a jug, set into a saucepan of boiling water, stir until it thickens; take the jug out of the water, stir the mixture until nearly cold, then add a tablespoonful of brandy; when cold pour over the sponge cakes. Garnish with crystallized fruit.

CAVE HIM SPECIAL RATES.

Hotel Man Knew How to Please His Patrons and Benefit Himself.

It was one of those automatic hotels, where, if you want anything you go and look for it and don't find it, and where the landlord is a not an est man until the next morning, when he says: "Two dollars, please." He never fails to be on hand then, relates a writer in Talent.

"Now, my 'damagers' had sent me a little slip, giving me special rates of $1.50 single, and $1.25 double, and I thought it was a pretty good thing."

So in the morning I presented my little slip, saying:

"You gave us special rates, I believe, $1.5 a day?"

"Yah, dot us right," answered mine host. "One dollar and a half is special."

So I paid him 15 cents, on which he made at least $1.30, and went my way, rejoicing as much as I could.

I strolled down to the depot with a commercial missionary, who seemed very much pleased about something, and presently in a very high state of chuckle, he said:

"Mr. Hawks, I laughed with you last night, but I had to laugh at you this morning."

"What's the joke?" I asked, for I didn't see any.

"That landlord gave you a special rate of $1.50 per, didn't he?"

"Well, that's the joke; his regular rates are one dollar a day."

Upside Down.

"So you don't believe in College education?"

"No, sir. After graduation I nearly starved to death practicing law."

"But you look prosperous now."

Following is a copy of the concluding paragraph of a long letter, dated March 17, 1904, received from the mother, received by Dr. S. B. Hartman from Hon. J. W. Yerkes, Commissioner of Internal Revenue, which explains itself:

"By reason of the changes made in the formula under which Peruna is now produced and placed upon the market, and by reason of the analyses made in this Bureau, and the opinion of the Surgeon-General of the Public Health and Marine Hospital Service, above quoted, this office is of opinion that Peruna when prepared according to the formula now used contains sufficient drugs to render the preparation one beyond the ruling of this office of date September 12, 1903, and therefore persons compounding and selling same will not be required to secure a special tax stamp, either as rectifier, wholesale dealers or retail dealers of spirituous or vinous liquors."

WHO SHE WAS

SKETCH OF THE LIFE OF LYDIA E. PINKHAM

And a True Story of How the Vegetable Compound Had Its Birth and How the "Panic of '73" Caused it to be Offered for Public Sale in Drug Stores.

This remarkable woman, whose maiden name was Estes, was born in Lynn, Mass., February 9th, 1819, coming from a good old Quaker family. For some years she taught school, and became known as a woman of an alert and investigating mind, an earnest seeker after knowledge, and above all, possessed of a wonderfully sympathetic nature.

In 1843 she married Isaac Pinkham, a builder and real estate operator, and their early married life was marked by prosperity and happiness. They had four children, three sons and a daughter.

In those good old fashioned days it was common for mothers to make their own home medicines from roots and herbs, nature's own remedies—calling in a physician only in specially urgent cases. By tradition and experience many of them gained a wonderful knowledge of the curative properties of the various roots and herbs.

Mrs. Pinkham took a great interest in the study of roots and herbs, their characteristics and power over disease. She maintained that just as nature so bountifully provides in the harvest-fields and orchards vegetable foods of all kinds; so, if we but take the pains to find them, in the roots and herbs of the field there are remedies for the various ills and weaknesses of the body, and it was her pleasure to search these out, and prepare simple and effective medicines for her own family and friends.

Chief of these was a rare combination of the choicest medicinal roots and herbs found best adapted for the cure of the ills and weaknesses peculiar to the female sex, and Lydia E. Pinkham's friends and neighbors learned that her compound relieved and cured it and became quite popular among them.

All this so far was done freely, without money and without price, as a labor of love.

But in 1873 the financial crisis struck Lynn. Its length and severity were too much for the large real estate interests of the Pinkham family, as this class of business suffered most from the fearful depression, so when the Centennial year dawned it found their property swept away. Some other source of income had to be found.

At this point Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was made known to the world.

The three sons and the daughter, with their mother, combined forces to restore the family fortune. They argued that the medicine which was so good for their women friends and neighbors was equally good for the women of the whole world.

The Pinkhams had no money, and little credit. Their first laboratory was the kitchen, where roots and herbs were steeped on the stove, gradually filling a gross of bottles. Then came the question of selling it, for always before they had given it away freely. They hired a job printer to run off some pamphlets setting forth the merits of the medicine, now called Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and these were distributed by the Pinkhams sons in Boston, New York, and Brooklyn.

The wonderful curative properties of the medicine were, to a great extent, self-advertising, for whoever used it recommended it to others, and the demand gradually increased.

In 1877, by combined efforts the family had saved enough money to commence newspaper advertising and from that time the growth and success of the enterprise were assured, until today Lydia E. Pinkham and her Vegetable Compound have become household words everywhere, and many tons of roots and herbs are used annually in its manufacture.

Lydia E. Pinkham herself did not live to see the great success of this work. She passed to her reward years ago, but not till she had provided means for continuing her work as effectively as she could have done it herself.

During her long and eventful experience she was ever methodical in her work and she was always careful to preserve a record of every case that came to her attention. The case of every sick woman who applied to her for advice—and there were thousands—received careful study, and the details, including symptoms, treatment and results were recorded for future reference, and to-day these records, together with hundreds of thousands made since, are available to sick women the world over, and represent a vast collaboration of information regarding the treatment of woman's ills, which for authenticity and accuracy can hardly be equalled in any library in the world.

With Lydia E. Pinkham worked her daughter-in-law, the present Mrs. Pinkham. She was carefully instructed in all her hard-won knowledge, and for years she assisted her in her vast correspondence.

To her hands naturally fell the direction of the work when its originator passed away. For nearly twenty-five years she has continued it, and nothing in the work shows when the first Lydia E. Pinkham dropped her pen, and the present Mrs. Pinkham, now the mother of a large family, took it up. With women assistants, some as capable as herself, the present Mrs. Pinkham continues this great work, and probably from the office of no other person have so many women been advised how to regain health. Sick women, this advice is "Yours for Health" freely given if you only write to ask for it.

Such is the history of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; made from simple roots and herbs; the one great medicine for women's ailments, and the fitting monument to the noble woman whose name it bears.

Egg Predicts War.

Mrs. Pate Williams, living four miles north east of the city, found two curious kinds of hen eggs a few days ago in her hen house and there is a "curious" kind of feeling among the people in the community. On the egg shells were the following words, the letters of which were raised on the shell: "There shall be war". For fear that they were not eggs and some kind of an imitation, Mrs. Williams broke them open to see how they looked and was straited to see two well developed eggs.

An Ideal Heroine

Barbara Winslow, Rebel

By ELIZABETH ELLIS

"There is something exceedingly winsome about Barbara; she is such a merry madcap of a girl, and yet as feminine as one could wish or imagine." Brooklyn Standard-Union

"Barbara is an alluring creature—a girl of brave heart, sweet spirit, high courage, and fascinating moods and qualities." Chicago Record-Herald.

"Barbara is one of the most winsome of the seventeenth century heroines we have encountered in fiction." Detroit Free Press.

A girl who masquerades in man's attire, fights a duel with a King's officer, disarming him, and then falls desperately in love with him, is the heroine of this charming tale. Barbara is an entrancing creature, whether in petticoats or doublet and hose. Her acquaintance is well worth making.
