President Reminds Friends And Foes That The Patience Of U. S. Can Be Exhausted

By LYLE C. WILSON
United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON — President Eisenhower is directing a new tough foreign policy which consists mostly of bluff and public reminders to friends and foe alike that the patience of the United States can be exhausted.

The patience of the Congress is just about exhausted already in some areas of foreign policy. That is why Secretary of State John Foster Dulles jolted the people of France this week with a warning that ratification of the European Defense Community plan is long overdue.

American diplomats have been saying that to French diplomats for weeks—but privately. Congress last session tagged half the foreign military aid funds for distribution to the European Defense Community. No community, no distribution of half the funds. It is as simple as that, and the French government long has been aware of those facts.

But the French were not aware of them till Dulles said EDC must be ratified or the United States must take another look at the whole defense picture. Dulles said bluntly, He had to. It will be the job of Dulles and the president during the next session of Congress to explain why the EDC keystone has not been laid in the defense arch.

Not only in Paris, where Dulles addressed the NATO meeting, has Mr. Eisenhower been directing a tough foreign policy. There is no doubt the President spoke bluntly at the recent Bermuda conference to knock over the determination of Prime Minister Sir Winston Churchill to obtain a meeting of the British, French, Russian and American chiefs of state.

Special United Nations envoy Arthur H. Dean got tough last week with the Communists at Paris. He walked out during a tirade by Chinese and North Korean negotiators, who charged the United Nations with plotting the release of 27,000 North Koreans. The Communists specifically charged the United States with acts of "perfidy." Dean asked the Communists to apologize for that.

Children To Get Free Show

Frank Lancaster, manager of the Varsity Theatre, announced today that a free show for children will be held on next Tuesday, December 22 at 9:30 in the morning.

Lancaster said that this program is given each year in appreciation of the patronage of all children throughout the year.

The employees of the Varsity Theatre cheerfully donate their services each year for this show and make it as enjoyable as possible.

He said that the show this year will be the most entertaining of any show ever shown. There will be a Gene Autry feature entitled "Blazing Guns" along with four big cartoons such as Donald Duck in "Slide Donald Slide"; Tom and Jerry in "His Mouse Friday"; Popeye in "Barking Dogs Don't Bite"; and last but not least, Bugs Bunny in "Hair Raising Tale".

Mr. Lancaster and the staff said that they wish to extend a hearty wish to each and everyone of their patrons to see that their children get the opportunity to attend this free annual affair at the Varsity Theatre next Tuesday, December 22.

FIGHT TB! BUY CHRISTMAS SEALS

Dean has been negotiating seven weeks toward arrangement of a political conference to discuss peace in Korea. He was due here today to report to the 16 United Nations members whom he represents. He thinks the Communists will apologize and the talks will reopen.

These tough acts and language are intended to speed, not retard, progress toward the twin goals of United States foreign policy. These goals are peace and security. Dulles' harsh words in Paris, for example, should have put the mothers and fathers of France on notice that ratification of the EDC plan for a joint Western European army may not much longer be delayed if United States defense funds are to flow uninterrupted to help make Western Europe safe for their children.

Farm Policy Up For Study By Leaders

By REX CHANEY
United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON — President Eisenhower and his congressional leaders are studying the question of farm policy today in their marathon conferences to develop a legislative program for next year.

With the secret White House sessions in the second day, Republican leaders indicated that Thursday's discussions gave them a picture of an administration budget showing a deficit of from three to five billion dollars for the next fiscal year.

In addition to farm policy, today's agenda was believed to include legislative proposals involving Social Security and perhaps taxes, foreign aid and atomic energy. Committee chairmen dealing with those and other specific fields of legislation were invited to the White House along with the top GOP leaders of the House and Senate.

The GOP dilemma over farm policy grows out of the argument, which crosses party lines, over extending the present price support program or trying a new approach. The present law, which provides government price supports at 30 per cent of parity on basic crops, expires at the end of 1954.

Many members of Congress favor a long-term extension of the present law with little or no change. Others favor a flexible price support plan along the lines advocated by Secretary of Agriculture Ezra T. Benson.

To avoid a party fight over the farm issue in an election year, some Republican leaders feel that the present law should be extended for a year or two. Chairman Clifford B. Hope R-KY of the House Agriculture Committee was prepared to recommend to the President at today's meeting that the law be continued unchanged for the time being.

At the conclusion of Thursday's session Mr. Eisenhower issued a statement in which he predicted "further reduction" of federal spending next year.

Mr. Eisenhower did not say that he expected the federal budget to be balanced in the 1955 fiscal year starting next July 1. But Chairman John Taber R-NY of the House Appropriations Committee told newsmen he thought the budget could be balanced.

Others who attended the meeting were less optimistic than Taber. They said the talk was in terms of balancing the "cash budget." This differs from the regular federal budget in that it includes taxes paid into trust funds, such as the Social Security and railroad retirement funds.

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Dec. 18. —The Swedish Royal Air Force ordered a full investigation today of an airliner crew's report of seeing a saucer-shaped object over Sweden near secret Soviet bases.

Gen. Bengt Nordenskjöld, air force commander-in-chief called in complete reports from all Swedish radar stations after joining the defense staff in promising a detailed inquiry.

Capt. Ulf Christiernsson, pilot of the passenger liner, told the defense staff he and his crew saw the disc-shaped, metallic object shortly after noon Thursday over the southern Swedish town of Hælsjöholm, about 300 miles from the strategic Baltic Coast.

"It was entirely an unorthodox metallic, symmetrical and circular object," Christiernsson said. "I was not at all scared, but curious, very curious."

Christiernsson said the object, which he believed to be a missile, flew faster than sound about 5,000 feet above the ground.

"I can give the altitude nearly exactly because it passed just over the clouds and I saw it perfectly well," Christiernsson said.

Christiernsson said the object headed southward over a low-lying cloud layer which would obscure it from ground observers. He said he watched it for about six seconds before it disappeared in the direction of East Germany's Baltic shore, near the former Nazi research station at Peenemünde, now operated by the Russians.

Academic Freedom Defined At University Of Kentucky

LEXINGTON, Ky. — The University of Kentucky Board of Trustees has amended the University regulations pertaining to academic freedom in an effort to clarify the school's position on the subject and forestall any attacks on its standing as a free institution.

The amendment was prepared by a committee appointed by the board last September. The members being Harper Gatton and Thomas A. Ballantine of Louisville, and two University professors, Thomas Clark and Arny Vandenberg.

In substance, the five points of the academic freedom amendment read, like this:

1. The teacher is entitled to freedom in the classroom in discussing his subject, but should be careful not to introduce controversial matter which has no relation to his subject. Limitations on academic freedom because of religious or other aims of the institution should be clearly stated in writing at the time of the faculty member's appointment.
2. The University teacher is a citizen, a member of a learned profession and an officer of an educational institution. When he speaks or writes as a citizen he should be free from institutional censorship or discipline, but his special position in the community imposes special obligations. The judgment of what constitutes fulfillment of these obligations should rest with the individual.
3. As a man of judgment and mature perspective, the teacher will not allow his interest and participation in public and political affairs to cause his work in the classroom to suffer.
4. If an employee desires to announce candidacy for public office demanding full-time service, or for the Kentucky General Assembly or Congress, he shall sever relations with the University at the time he so announces, but he may be reinstated following the election if defeated or after completing his term of office if elected.
5. University facilities shall not be used for political rallies or for campaign purposes that would further the interests of the candidate or any one party, except that the University may from time to time invite candidates to speak at convocations.

Farmers Suffer Big Income Cut

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18. — Farmers suffered a two-billion-dollar cut in income this year despite a bumper harvest, the Agriculture department said today. The value of the 1953 field crop was about 19 billion dollars compared with the estimated $20,900,000,000 farmers received in 1952 when the harvest was the second largest on record.

However, the 1953 harvest "virtually" equaled 1952 last even though last summer's devastating drought ruined thousands of acres of crops in important farm areas.

The Agriculture Department said the 340,500,000 acres harvested in 1953 was one of the lowest in the last 10 years but record-high yields per acre boosted the volume.

Although the crop quality was "good to excellent," farmers received generally lower prices for their produce, the department said.

At the same time the department predicted less meat in the butcher shops this winter and spring but refused to say whether this means higher prices for consumers. It did say prices paid to cattle farmers should remain firm or increase. Retail prices normally rise with farm prices.

The corn crop, fifth largest on record was estimated at 3,176,615,000 bushels. The wheat crop, at 1,168,336,000 bushels, is the fourth largest.

Murderers Die In Gas Chamber One Week Before Christmas

By WARD COLWELL
United Press Staff Correspondent

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. — Carl Austin Hall and Bonnie Brown Heady, who tortured little Bobby Greenlease before they killed him, died painlessly today in Missouri's gas chamber.

The dissolute pair who committed one of the most monstrous crimes in a generation went to their deaths with their bellies full of fried chicken, after a last sensuous cuddling spree that left Hall's pale lips bloated with lipstick.

The great, gray prison by the Missouri River was quiet under a nearly full moon when Warden Ralph Eldson at four and one-half minutes past midnight changed home the two-foot steel lever that loosed the deadly, almond-scented gas into the metal chamber.

Mrs. Heady, 41, the respectable housewife who became an alcoholic held her breath for 25 seconds. Then she gasped. Her head fell forward. Hall, 34, the wastrel on who took narcotics, did not fight death. He breathed in the bright white fumes with no hesitation.

Both were logged on the legal execution report as unconscious within one minute and 15 seconds after Eldson pulled the lever. Hall stopped breathing at 12:12 a.m. Mrs. Heady's breathing stopped two minutes and 10 seconds later.

Thus they died. It was 81 days after they had kidnapped and killed six-year-old Bobby Greenlease, son of a wealthy Kansas City, Mo., automobile distributor. They got $600,000 ransom—an all-time record. Some $303,700 of that sum still is missing.

If Hall knew where it was, he took his secret to the grave with him. He did not speak when asked if he had any last word.

He had tortured the struggling, kicking child-struck him in the mouth and attempted to strangle him with a piece of clothesline before shooting him through the head in a Kansas gas chamber.

He and his double-chinned partner were executed exactly one week before the Christmas anniversary of the birth of One who said: "Suffer the little children to come unto Me."

They died only a few hours after the echoes of Christmas carols floated through the near-zero-cold night as hundreds of residents of Jefferson City paraded in a pre-Christmas procession. The carols could be heard in death row.

What thoughts they stirred in the minds of the downed pair were imparted in secret to the Rev. George L. Evans, an Episcopalian clergyman, who spent five minutes with them just before they died.

"They are prepared to meet Almighty God," he said when he left the detention cell. "They are ready to go."

Then Evans left the pair alone. A penitentiary guard turned his back. It was then, apparently, that Hall acquired the lipstick which smeared his lower face under his black mask when he entered the gas chamber.

Shortly after 1 a.m. two big hearse one black and one gray rolled out of the prison gate alongside the ice-flecked river and took the bodies to the Buescher Funeral Home, four blocks away. A crowd of many of them teenagers, watched at the home. It was expected to take seven hours to embalm both bodies.

The couple, who were convicted,

Orchestra Formed For "Campus Lights"

An orchestra of 26 Murray State College students will soon start practice for "Campus Lights of 1954," annual college musical production of Phi Mu Alpha and Sigma Alpha Iota, national music fraternities.

The musical will be presented at the college auditorium February 18, 19, and 20. The traditional show has often been called Murray State's "second homecoming."

The orchestra was selected during tryouts recently by Director Tom Ferguson, senior piano major from Owensboro, Ky. The director heads a production staff of 17 students.

Three other all-student groups will appear in the show, the director says. They are a 15-girl dancing chorus, a 46-voice singing chorus, and the "Murray Men," a new departure in four-voiced singing.

Rev. Gray Addresses Rotarians

Rev. Harry Wood Gray, pastor of the First Christian Church, was the speaker yesterday at the regular meeting of the Murray Rotary Club. Rev. Gray used as his subject the "Evolution of Murray."

Rev. Gray listed several characteristics which he described as conditions that a good town should have, and said that the scales weighed heavily in the favor of Murray.

He listed the "sense of community" as a desirable characteristic. By this he said, he meant the belief by the citizens in the goodness of the community; the support of the community enterprises; and that the community leaders are Christians.

The second characteristic was the "freedom from control of evil forces." Rev. Gray explained that in some towns, gangster force, liquor rings and gambling forces controlled civic and political circles.

The third item listed by Rev. Gray was the fact that Murray had institutions of culture and higher learning. The city has good schools, an outlet for art and music expression, and the influence exerted by educators in Murray State College, he said.

Rev. Gray ended his listing by saying that Murray had genuine and sincere people. He said that church activities were strong in the city.

Rev. Gray also had several "cautions" and several "wishes" to present to the group of Rotarians.

The "cautions" included: be watchful of the control of the community by poor leaders; don't change too much—continue to be ourselves; keep our local flavor; fight social distinction and accept a person for what he is; and fight to hold our normal and religious status.

His "wishes" included: that Murray be the heart of the Kentucky Lake recreation area; that the city park be beautified and made a year round place of activities; that more money be spent on shrubbery and other items to beautify the city; that public school music be emphasized more.

His final wish was that "more cooperation could be had between the churches of Murray."

The speaker was introduced by Bob Parry.

Visiting Rotarians were H. H. Lovett, Sr. from Benton and Frank Harwood of Paducah. Leon Burken brought a guest to the club. The club will meet next Thursday, Christmas Eve. President Divilbiss reminded the Rotarians, Al Hughes, Four Rivers Council Boy Scout Executive will be the speaker.

COMFORTING REPORT

Supreme Commander General Alfred M. Gruenther reported to the Council of Ministers meeting in Paris that there is no way to describe the build-up of NATO forces since President Eisenhower took charge in Europe in 1951 except to use the word "FANTASTIC."

In view of his report there is no wonder that Secretary of State John Foster Dulles has warned France unless the great Republic immediately approves what has been done and what will be done, that the United States must necessarily review its foreign policy with a view to recalling our troops. For there is an end to any nation's efforts to help a friend and ally, unless he helps himself.

A revealing feature of the Gruenther report is the information on how weak Western Europe was in 1951 at a time when Soviet Russia had a military force strong enough to march to the English Channel and the Mediterranean Sea. Probably no American other than Eisenhower could have built a NATO force such as the one now in being.

We often hear that our forces are "on paper," but the Gruenther report doesn't sound like our military forces are merely in the "blue-print" stage. When he said we have 34 2-3 "standing" divisions, and that we can put 45 divisions in the field in 30 days, that we have 1,700 planes ready for action with 4,000 available in 30 days it gives weight to the speech delivered last week by President Eisenhower.

Adlai Stevenson said in Philadelphia that the Republican Administration has replaced the Roosevelt "Four Freedoms" with the "Four Fears," but we think the opposite is true. We have gone from one emergency into a greater one for the past twenty years, and it is the New Dealers and Fair Dealers who "fear" to go back to a peace-time economy for they have always feared depression worse than war.

In 1951 when former President Truman called General Eisenhower back into the harness it was because he was "afraid." When he "fired" General MacArthur it is because he was over-confident. If our forces had been over-run in Korea, and Soviet Russia had given her Chinese puppet the aid some feared she would give her, Truman would probably not have hesitated to call MacArthur back into active service.

Mr. Stevenson is wrong when he says the Eisenhower Administration is dealing in "fear." It is restoring confidence, not only in the United States but throughout the world. Some may believe he and Dulles are merely carrying forth the foreign policy of Truman and Acheson; but they are scoring one diplomatic and military victory after another where the Truman-Acheson team chalked up nothing but defeats.

And, as Senator Albert Gore recently said, when President Eisenhower has something to say about foreign policy our enemies understand him even better than his home-folks. The reason is that as Allied Commander he made no threats he was unable to back up. Others threatened to invade Northern Africa, Italy and France, but when Eisenhower made the threat our forces were already dropping by parachute, storming ashore from landing craft and successfully bombing enemy supply routes and depots a thousand miles back of the front lines.

Last week the President offered to "pool" our atomic resources for international peace-time use along with those of England, Canada and Soviet Russia. That is, with the consent of Congress. This week his lieutenant in Europe, General Gruenther, announced that atomic weapons are now being made available to NATO forces. Neither the President's offer, nor Gruenther's announcement, are in the nature of "threats." The Russians, however, will have no difficulty understanding either of them.

TODAY'S SPORTS PARADE

Reg. U.S. Pat. Off.
By OSCAR FRALEY
United Press Sports Writer
NEW YORK, Dec. 18, (U-P)—There is at hand today an All-American football team which is C3-H5-N3-78.

That's nitroglycerin, Mac! This outfit is the "all-chemical" All-American and it is labeled by the Chemical and Engineering News, which selected it as the "most scientific eleven" ever assembled. It also dispenses the theory that all football players are meatballs with matching heads.

The team lines up this way: Ends, John Steinberg for Stanford and Bob Luttrell of VPI; tackles, Ed Patterson of North Carolina and Bruce Bosley of West Virginia; guards, Bill Moyer of Franklin and Marshall, and Jimmy Cooper of Delaware; center, John Henn of Princeton; backs, Fred Wyant of West Virginia, Marvis Watson of Stanford, Dave Woolwine of VMI, and Dick Balzhiser of Michigan.

If you listen to the annual wailing and moaning of molar players more or less get the idea that football players is a whole major in the mechanics of putting the eight ball in the side pocket. The purist theory is that the majority of the gridiron guys need an interpreter to cash their weekly pay checks.

That's the usual penalty for being big and wanting to play football.

But this "all-chemical" outfit shows there's a miscalculation somewhere in the saline formula.

As example, Boyer and Balzhiser as well as being fine football players carry a straight "A" average in their studies, while Luttrell attends VPI on an academic scholarship.

There is another rather startling bit of evidence in this all-dynamite eleven. The South long has been branded as an out-and-out football factory where if a lad can play good enough they'll even provide reclining chairs for his classroom siestas.

Well, sir, it may come as something of a jolt to the finger pointers in the rest of the nation to figure out that five of the 11 players on this brain and brawn outfit are from the South—and this team is selected on both counts.

Three are from the East, where it long has been rumored no football is played, while there are two from the West and only one from the rather goodly gridiron land of the Midwest.

Don't get the idea, either, that these guys are football "stiffs" being used for window-dressing.

Steinberg was fourth in the nation in pass receiving. Henn is captain-elect of the Princeton varsity. Bosley and Wyant were named to the all-Southern Conference team. Luttrell is a three-year letterman at VPI and Woolwine is hailed as one of Dixie's finest backs.

No H-2-O on the brain here. These guys prove that you can make good grades and play good football, too!

Later Chateaufort felt guilty and returned to apologize to the proprietor, Sylvester Reus. While he was talking to Reus, police arrived and arrested him.

Mrs. T. C. Venable, president, opened the meeting by reading the Scripture from the first chapter of John followed with prayer. During the business session it was voted to empty the treasury and that it be used to the greatest advantage toward finishing the church.

The program on the subject, "Together We Seek To Make Peace-makers," was given by Mrs. Jack Belote who used the Christmas story for the basis of her discussion.

ANGEL OF PEACE

"Peace on earth, goodwill to men," Luke 2:14

To celebrate the Christ-child's birth... The angels sang of peace on earth... And ever since God's folks have toiled... To build that peace though often foiled... By war and hatred... They have sought... Through faith and works till they have wrought... This attitude where now we feed... Our former foes who stand in need... We clothe their naked, heal their ill... And seek God's peace through world goodwill.

Farmers Put Orders In

Farmers in Kentucky's 77 designated drought disaster counties had ordered 4,394 tons of cottonseed products, 330,129 bushels of oats, 74,020 bushels of corn, and 1,563 bushels of feed wheat in the U. S. Department of Agriculture drought emergency program through December 11.

Reduced prices for these feeds in the program are corn $1.00 a bushel, oats 50 cents a bushel, wheat $1.10 a bushel, and cottonseed meal $35 a ton. Oats are no longer available because current orders are expected to exhaust stocks.

Five of the 77 counties also reported last week that they have issued certificates to eligible farmers which entitle them to purchase from dealers 2,807 hundred-weight of mixed feeds at reduced prices. Under this program, feed mixers replace grains and meal in feeds sold at reduced rates by submitting the certificates, obtained from farmers, direct to the Commodity Credit Corporation.

County drought committees in designated counties accept farmers' applications for these feed and also accept applications for reduced freight rates in the Federal-State emergency hay program operated by the Kentucky Department of Agriculture.

THE CAT'S PAW

CHAPTER THIRTY-THREE
CHARLOTTE crossed the street and headed west. She turned in at the crownstone house and pressed a bell. She gave three long and three short rings. When the buzzer sounded, she slipped inside and began the long climb.
No wonder people went to the grove to get motto. Anything to postpone coming home to places like this. Home! A poor refuge this, a poor port. Here was nothing to the eye to dwell upon, nothing to feed and lift the spirit. All was colorless, and by and by the faces matched. And the out-look.
New Year's Eve is making me very philosophical.
Her mother opened the door, and Charlotte walked into the room. Her mother closed the door and ooked it hastily, then folded Char-lotte's arms.
"Poor baby," she murmured, "poor baby. All for what?" She began to cry, as though it were relief, and now it was Charlotte who comforted her. She made her sit down, and seeing her mother's brown, drained face, felt as old herself, and as spent, as disem- powered with the world.
And now her mother simply sat, and her fingers picked at the arm of the chair.
"I'm the one should be dead," she said by and by. She waited, then the flat voice went on, "You were a beautiful baby, people used to stop and look at you when I took you to town. And I kept you nice. Pink. Pink was always your color. Do you have a pink dress now?"
"No. But I have a pink blouse." "That's nice, but you must get a pink dress, a soft shell shade." The glazed eyes stared, seeing into the past. "You were so smart, too. You could say the whole alphabet before you were two, you were always tagging at my heels, and I taught you all kinds of things. I wanted you to grow up to use your head."

"Like you," Charlotte was sorry as soon as she said it.
But her mother didn't even seem to realize the words had been spoken.
"If I could only go back," she said. "If I could live the last four-teen years over again, I never meant wrong. Somehow things have always piled up, for twenty-five years."
She's sick, Charlotte realized. Terribly, terribly sick.
"Listen!" Her mother suddenly lifted her head, and her finger flew to her lips. The amber eyes dilated. "Somebody's outside," she whispered. "They keep coming back, creeping along the hall, standing by my door."
Charlotte listened. "There's no- body there," she said. "I'll show you." She opened the door and looked out into the emptiness of the hall. But her own heart beat crazily.
"I thought..." Her mother stared at her hands. "I must wash my hands," she said. She went to the bowl and lathered them ex- travagantly, making gushing sounds with the suds. "If we could just go to California," she said, drying her hands. "Sit in the sun and rest in California where no one would know. Here they might know, they're fitting it together, and they're going to know, Char-lotte."
"Maybe."
"It didn't work out."
"We mustn't give up."
"I just tried to help you."
"I know. Let them find out, they're so clever. That's why I had to get here tonight, to tell you to wait. That has been you calling the police, hasn't it?"
"Yes, to put them off, to confuse them, but I was clever and care-ful, so they couldn't trace the call. I went to a different phone booth each time. Like in the sub-way, then I'd get on a train and ride away. She sighed heavily. "But I can't keep it up, I'm so tired. I get the feeling now I might say things wrong, I can't seem to keep clear and coherent any more." She rubbed her fingers across her forehead, back and forth, up and down.

"There's still a chance," Char-lotte said. "We must wait. Swear to me you'll wait. Mother."
"Mother. You called me Mother. That's the first time, you always avoided it, I've known. All right, I'll wait. All life is a waiting." She began to walk up and down. "I've tried to analyze your atti-tude," she went on, "but it baffles me."
"You're just complicating some-thing simple," Charlotte said. "Scratch any attitude of mine, and you'll find self-interest."
Her mother stood at the win-dow, looking down. Suddenly she wheeled around, and her eyes darted as though looking for escape. "Some man is coming in," she said. "He was standing across the street. He followed you here, he's coming for you."
"Stop it," Charlotte said, "you're imagining again. Yet a child thrilled through her, and she found herself listening, too, barely breathing. It wasn't possible. But of course the name over the bell was Charlotte Morgan.
The steps on the bare stairs mounted, coming closer, and now, down the hall, suddenly stopping, like her next. Next the knock.
"Open up," the voice command-ed. "Police."
"Let me do the talking," Char-lotte whispered to her mother. "Say as little as possible."

Father Hopes Child Will Survive

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (AP)—The father of a two-headed baby said today he had been given "at least some hope—about one chance in 100—that the child would survive."
The American Medical Associa-tion said it knew of no other case in which a two-headed baby ever was born alive, although several such rarities were known.
The father revealed Tuesday that he had given the baby, which has four arms, two faces on the sides of its head, and a "comb" of hair on its back, a chance to live at James Whitcomb Riley Hospital for Children. The names were "Danie Kaye" and "Donald Ray."
Dr. Vance Lindsay, who deliv-ered the baby at Washington, Ind., said that the child was born with a "normal" delivery, probably would have been fatal to the child and the mother.
The youngster has two normally-formed heads with separate noses, two shoulders and four arms. The upper appendages are attached to a single row of ribs at the chest. Physicians listened the upper part of the baby's body to that of Siamese twins.
The 44-year-old father, a laborer at Petersburg, Ind., said he had been contacted by a "circus man" regarding the infant, but rejected the overture. He previously had appealed for financial help in caring for his other five children.
"I'm a poor man," the father said. "I've always been a poor man, but I have always been able to take care of my own children."
... just because this one is dif-ferent it's no exception. I don't need anybody like a circus man to help me."
He said he signed both names on one birth certificate.
There may be a possibility of surgical separation of the extra members if one head should fail to survive, he said physicians told him.
However, doctors said separation

Dr. John D. Van Nuy, dean of the Indiana University Medical Center, said surgery now would be "improbable."
Doubt was expressed in some quarters that the child might ever walk if it reached adulthood with two heads because of lack of coordination. It also was believed that the interlocking nervous sys-tems might cause like sensations in the surplus members. That is, an ache in one head might be felt in the other, or a scratch on one arm might cause a pain in the op-posite extra arm also.
Doctors said the condition of the child remained satisfactory, al-though still listed "critically ill."

VIENNA, Austria (AP)—Adver-tising posters of two pretty female legs sheathed in sheer stockings were ordered removed from city billboards today.
The Ministry of Interior ruled they must not be shown "where minors under 16 years old are able to see them."

Hunting Season
Claims 300 Lives

By UNITED PRESS
About 300 persons died during the fall hunting season, a state-by-state tally showed today.

The survey showed 189 killed by gunfire, 71 of exertion-induced heart attacks, 21 by drowning, and nine from miscellaneous causes, including freezing, for a total of 290.

In addition, scores were injured. Many of the gunshot deaths involved teen-agers. In Ohio, the average age of those killed was 14.

Of the 11 gunshot deaths in Illinois eight were teen-agers.

Several persons were shot while cleaning their guns, which they had believed empty.

Pennsylvania reported the most shooting deaths, 17, and also the highest overall total, 32.

Michigan, where deer hunting is a major sport, had 15 gunfire deaths and a total of 28.

Kentucky had 12 deaths, all from gunfire.

Ohio, which had only five shooting deaths, led all other states reshould not be selected haphazardly."

A pamphlet entitled "Toys and Books" is available from your Calloway County Health Department and makes good, sound reading these days before Christmas.

Just as the stocking shall be hung by the chimney with care, so should the toys that are hung there be selected with care.

Toys for the child three to six years of age should help meet the child's needs for experimenting and self-expression as well as his fun'n frolic. Toys such as swings, bicycles, jigsaw puzzles, gardening tools, drums and paint sets are fine.

For the toddler one to two the toys should be large and simple, and by all means durable, like blocks, rag dolls, chairs and stick horses. For the infant, place a rattle, ball or stuffed animal under the tree. Children this age like homemade toys—spools, a pan to beat on with a spoon, clothespins, anything simple. Many times these toys are far more amusing than the most expensive.

"Toys and Books" suggests toys for older children that may be homemade, and throws a hint that books are nice gifts. A very young child enjoys books with brightly colored pictures.

Be sure the toys are safe for all ages, watch sharp edges, be sure all toys are painted with lead-free paint and remember that broken toys are dangerous and should be thrown away.
