LIGHT VOTE IS EXPECTED IN STATE

Seen & Heard Around MURRAY

Thanks to Orval Austin for a diagrammed explanation of the picket problem.

We have the oldest printing the new fence. He was so comfortable this morning that we don't know how much painting is going to be done.

When we left he had a chair to sit in, the radio run out the window on an extension cord, and a pitcher of ice water complete with glass.

To add the Tom Sawyer angle, one of his buddies was painting away to beat sixty.

The new school is coming along. Bricks have already been laid up about so high, and the door framing for the furnace room has been put up. When the casement windows are set in place it will really look like a building.

Fred Cotham has remodeled the front part of his building. Looks nice.

Everyone has heard by now that an emergency polio campaign will be held in Calloway County and over the nation.

You might say that is going too far to have another campaign after the long string of them we had in the Fall and Spring. But, here's the story.

Literally thousands of dollars was spent in finding some preventive serum for polio. Anyone knows that a preventive serum is better than the best treatment.

Well, the Gamma Globulin, that got so much publicity last year, accounted for much of the money spent. Here in Calloway County alone, we got over $6,000 of the serum. Most of it was used out around Lynn Grove.

Those folks really appreciated it too, because as Luck Burt said, "We were scared". When the drive came around in January, the people around Lynn Grove dug down in the pockets and gave more than anyone else, on a percentage basis.

There is no doubt but what the Gamma Globulin prevented many thousands of cases over the nation. The only trouble with it is that it is only a short time preventive.

Many thousands more was spent on finding a sure preventive. They think they have it now. This summer will tell the story.

The result of all this research, plus the added load of treatment of past patients, resulted in one thing, a depleted treasury, both on local and national levels.

Kefauver, Clement Far Ahead In Tennessee Election

By THOMAS E. GISH, United Press Staff Correspondent. NASHVILLE, Tenn., (AP)—Sen. Estes Kefauver, successful candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, claimed a landslide victory over Rep. Pat Suttou for a new Senate term. Gov. Frank Clement, who became the state's youngest governor two years ago at the age of 32, just as easily won a new four-year term by trouncing Gordon Browning, a three-time governor. Ray Jenkins, special counsel in the recent Army-McCarthy hearings, was nominated on the Republican ticket to oppose Democrat Kefauver, but Jenkins reiterated he did not intend to run against the former crime-buster in the general election. Kefauver, a liberal in the conservative South, called his triumph a Democratic primary proof that "the state of Cordell Hull and Andrew Jackson believes in forward-looking policies at home and abroad."

Urgent Appeal Is Issued By Brownfield

"A few hours of your time now may mean a new life for a polio patient." This was the urgent appeal issued today by Ray Brownfield, director of the Emergency March of Dimes, in calling for volunteers to serve in the drive Aug. 18-31. "Proper care now for polio patients may make possible for them a full life rather than a bare existence," he explained. "With funds to provide this care we can continue to do something for those who are seriously afflicted." There is work for anyone who wants to help during the current crisis, Brownfield said. "The need for funds is desperate," Brownfield said. "The entire polio patient aid program, the prevention and all the other good work of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis are in jeopardy. Lack of funds can close the only door of hope remaining to many thousands of polio victims who depend on the March of Dimes for help in fighting polio. "We need people to address envelopes and distribute coin collectors," he said. "We need teen-agers and men and women of all ages. Even fathers can take part in the Emergency Mothers' March by acting as baby sitters, as escorts for marching mothers or as dinner-dish-washers while mother goes marching."

Seventy-Six Children Are Examined

Seventy-six children who will enter the first grade at Murray High this year were checked this week at the Murray Health Center. Dr. J. A. Outland, County Health Officer, supervised all examinations and was assisted by Dr. David Colvin, University of Louisville medical student. Assisting also were Mrs. Kenneth Ross, chairman of the Parent-Teacher Association Health Committee and the following PTA members: Mrs. James Rudy Albritten, Mrs. Hugh Houston, Mrs. Frenchie Lassiter, Mrs. Maurine Giebel, Mrs. Buddy Russell, Mrs. John Conger, Mrs. Wayne Jones. Dr. Outland said that he was very pleased with the cooperation he had received from the citizens of Murray and the PTA health committee. He stated that the group of children he examined this year was one of the best he had ever examined. He commented especially on the condition of their teeth and weight. He said that it was obvious that corrective measures had already been taken in many cases. Vaccinations for smallpox were given to the children and many others received shots for diphtheria and whooping cough. Pre-school health examinations were given to county student in the spring. Today the fifth grade is being checked with the following ladies of the PTA assisting: Mrs. Tom Crider, Mrs. J. N. Outland, Miss Laurine Tarry, and Mrs. Kenneth Ross. The ninth grade will be checked next Tuesday, according to Dr. Outland.

Science Must Replace Religion Says Moscow

LONDON (AP)—Moscow radio said today that science must replace religion in governing the lives of men. Religion, the Soviet broadcast said, "served the exploiting classes and helped them perpetuate their power over the masses." "Religious remnants, based on blind faith, still are alive," it said in a discussion of anti-religious tracts recently published in Moscow. "To overcome them, the active efforts of the people themselves are needed," the radio said. "Mighty means to this end is the active participation of all Soviet people in social and political life, extensive propaganda of the achievements of science and technology and constant improvement of the cultural level of the workers."

Little Interest Exhibited In Election Here Tomorrow

By THOMAS E. GISH, United Press Staff Correspondent. FRANKFORT (AP)—Kentucky Democrats and Republicans choose their nominees for Congress tomorrow in a primary expected to produce no more than a token vote in most races. National interest will focus on the senatorial primaries which feature former Vice President Alben W. Barkley and incumbent Republican Sen. John Sherman Cooper. Both have primary opposition, but have been so certain of nomination that neither has bothered to campaign. On the ballot against Barkley are Jesse Nicholas Ryan Cecil, Louisville; James Logan Delk, Frankfort; and Edward J. Hussey, Louisville. Of these only Delk has campaigned. His theme has been that Barkley at 76 is "too old to go back to the Senate."

Verne Kyle Is Rotary Speaker

Verne Kyle, general manager of the Murray Manufacturing Company, and Rotarian, was the speaker yesterday at the regular meeting of the Murray Rotary Club. Mr. Kyle spoke on the importance of regular attendance, and the benefits that are derived from it. "Regular attendance gives one an opportunity to share in the service of the club," Kyle said. Other benefits he listed were: much information is received, which otherwise would not, relaxation and fellowship is obtained. He said a great deal can be received just by being present at the meetings. Kyle read the Rotary rules of attendance, and announced that the first meeting of each month will be designated as 100 per cent day. The attendance of the club is in the lower 90's normally. Visiting Rotarian was Bob Marshall of Vicksburg, Mississippi. Gene Landolt was the guest of his father-in-law, George Hart, Al Vogle was a guest of Karl Warming.

ASC County Election Meets Planned

The Kentucky State ASC Committee, composed of Jas. R. Rash, Jr., Chairman, of Henderson, and Mr. Charlie B. Gentry, member, of Lexington, announced today a series of public meetings on the coming ASC county elections. The meetings will be held in nine cities throughout the state the week of August 9-13. The Calloway county meeting will be held August 13 at the Kenlake Hotel. The committee said, "We have received many inquiries from farmers throughout the state relative to the coming elections because the procedure is somewhat different than in past years. We wish to give everyone an opportunity to familiarize themselves with how the elections will be held. One of us will attend each meeting, together with members of the staff from the State ASC office. We will go through the election procedure step by step and then have a session for questions that may be raised. The Secretary of Agriculture is very anxious that more farmers participate in the ASC elections and that the community and county committee members, elected are representatives of all the farming interests in a particular community or county. We believe that the new election procedure will bring more farmers into participation as community and county committee members and through them the farm programs can be of greater service to all farmers." The public meetings will be held at Lexington, Louisville, Glasgow, Central City, Ken Lake Hotel, Kentucky Lake, Richmond, Somerset, Hazard and Morehead. Each meeting will start at 1:30 p.m. local time. Both members of the State Committee will attend the meeting at Lexington, then Mr. Gentry will go to Louisville, Glasgow, Central City and Ken Lake, while Mr. Rash will attend the Richmond, Somerset, Hazard and Morehead meetings. Calloway County meeting place will be at Kenlake Hotel, Friday August 13.

WHITHER SMALL BUSINESS?

Merger of two of the nation's largest steel companies serves to remind us consolidations are the order of the day in a great many industries and the public is wondering what the future of small business will be.

Volume seems to be the only avenue to profits under present labor conditions, and since income tax schedules for corporations have been revised, and the excess profits tax repealed, many firms regard mergers as their best bet for future profits.

The public has been well served in the past by huge corporations and some of our greatest developments in science and chemistry would have been impossible without large financial resources available only to large corporations, but thus far small business has prospered right along with the growth of the giants.

When it comes to the point where thousands of small corporations and individually-owned factories and commercial houses can earn satisfactory profits only by pooling their resources with others the time has come for Congress to take another look at some of the laws it has passed during the last twenty years.

We have boasted that the private enterprise system is so tough it can withstand all the abuse heaped upon it by unscientific tax laws and such social laws as wage and hour, unemployment compensation and old age pensions. But maybe, after all, only the big corporations can handle such laws and survive in normal times. And maybe, also, the smaller concerns have appeared to prosper under these laws in recent years because conditions have been everything but normal.

We despise fascism as much as we do communism. But what we may not realize is that fascism is a real threat. It may not be as serious a threat as communism but if, and when, the time comes that big corporations are the only ones that can meet federal tax and labor laws, the time has come to change them.

We have always believed that laws should be tempered to meet the needs of small business. We have also believed that small business is just as important to the nation's economy as big business. There are some goods and services that can be provided better by big business but there are literally thousands that can be provided by small business.

The big outfit can pay any tax rate or any wage scale that may be imposed upon it because it is simple to add these costs to the price of the product manufactured. It is not simple for the little manufacturer or the small business man.

It would be ironical to wake up some fine day and discover the so-called "liberals" we have been supporting ever since 1932 are actually the most fascist-minded politicians in public life. We may discover that they have carried us down the road to state corporation owned, or subsidized, industry just like Mussolini and Hitler led their countries into it a generation ago.

SHEEP FOR SALE

We have decided that we will not hold an auction sale of sheep this year, however, we have for sale a number of registered yearling Hampshire and Suffolk rams and more than 200 Montana black face yearling ewes. Rams are tops and good enough to head a flock and the ewes are large type with heavy bone and good enough for anyone to breed. These sheep can be seen on my farm located on Highway 41 just 8 miles North of Hopkinsville, Ky.

Either I will be there by appointment or someone on the farm will show and sell the sheep at anytime.

Waters and Woods

By Ben Rovin

Twenty years ago you could count the men in Calloway County who had and could use bait casting outfits on the fingers of both your hands. Today a census count could not number the casting rigs or users in the county. This remarkable stride in the sales and use of this type gear might be attributed to the fact that Kentucky Lake is with us, but really it was education to the acceptance of something new here, and untried before, that brought about the change that resulted in more fish for the skillet. The advent of bait casting in this section of Kentucky was as much a boon to fishing as the cane pole was to the line-in-hand-method. And, the flyrod fishermen stand in a class to themselves, it requiring years of patient practice, expensive equipment, and plenty of intestinal fortitude to master the art of placing a feather in a three foot circle at sixty feet. The majority of flyrod owners will never be able to accomplish such a feat. But there is an inexpensive gear available that will make bait casting outfits as obsolete as cane poles, and fly fishermen envious to perform the feats this method will enable one to produce relatively easy.

SPINNING CAN MAKE NOVICE EXPERTS

I personally am a spin fisherman, so please overlook my prejudice, but do consider a few of the merits of spinning over other popular types and methods of fishing used today. There are comparatively few spinning men that fish Kentucky Lake; they are as scarce today as the bait casters were twenty years ago. Yet, spinning gear can perform all that bait casting outfits can do plus the majority of the benefits fly fishermen have. I hope after reading this that I can tickle your curiosity enough so that you will want a closer look at some spin equipment in one of our local shops.

My spinning rod and reel is two years old, and I wouldn't swap it for half a dozen bait casting outfits. I was told that I wouldn't like it until I had tried it for a while, but my first day out sold me completely. I was fishing with three other fellows for sauger pike; one got 1, the others 0 with their bait casting rigs. I strung 27, all taken on 6 lb. monofilament line. I attribute this success to the fact that there was no difficulty in being able to control my casts completely, the invisible line and the small water resistance the thin line had. With the heavy weights it took to "get out" to where the fish were with casting outfits these things were impossible to the average fisherman.

BEGAN IN ENGLAND

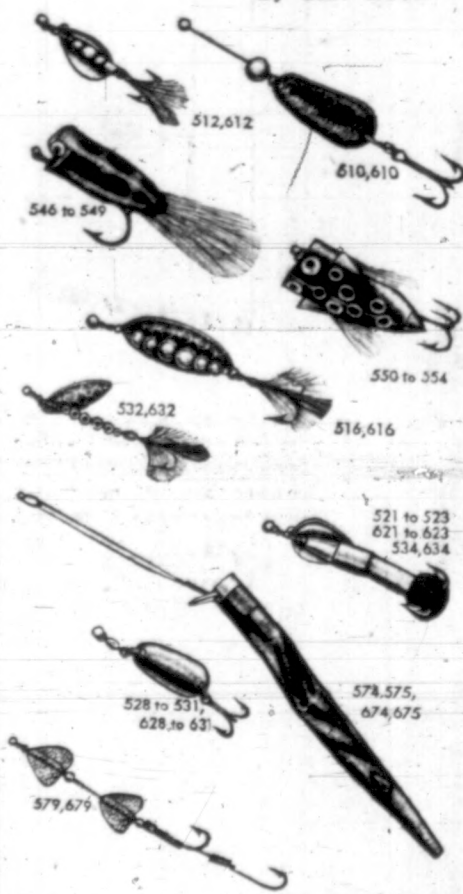

Shortly before World War I, there was a revolutionary type of fixed-spool reel invented by a cotton mill owner named Hillingworth. Over there they called the method "fixed-spool" or "thread-line" fishing. The word "spinning" is strictly an American appellation, which in England refers simply to a form of bait casting. The French were the first to adopt the new idea and they made many improvements in rods, reels, lures and lure manufacturing. The next country to get on the band wagon was Italy, after the Italians the Swiss worked themselves into the deal. All this perfection of material and operation was done before most American fishermen were aware that we were behind in fishing methods.

BACHE BROWN'S

The man most responsible for spinning in America today is Bache Hamilton Brown. In the late '30's he returned from France intent upon manufacturing spinning equipment in America. Having witnessed the method there and thinking that it could be done over here, his company, the Airex Corporation, a division of the Leland Corporation, was the first American spin equipment manufacturer. Due to the efforts of Brown, spinning became a popular fishing method in some sections of the U. S. Today the Airex Corp. is the leader of the American spinning manufacturers. They make the famous MASTERREEL ARISTOCRAT ($23.95), the VAGABOND ($17.50), and the BACHE BROWN SPINSTER ($12.95), all tops in fresh water spinning reels. Airex also manufactures companion rods for each of these reels.

All the lures pictured at the left are the products of the Airex Corporation, 1460 Chestnut Avenue, Hillside 5, N. J. by Airex. All their spinners are equipped with either nickel or brass spinners and other optional additions. If your eyes are "spinning" at the sight of so many lures, let me help you pick one out. That little Airex Preska Perche just above the Eiskin is, in my estimation, the best one pictured. In fact, the best fresh water bait Airex makes. About two months ago I was fishing off the rocks at Kentucky Dam. I would walk up and down the rocks asking people how they were doing. When I found someone who said "they're not biting today," and most everyone had that on their lips, I would flip out my Preska Perche and bring in a crappie or a stripe bass or sometimes a smallmouth. Each time I would hand the fish to the fellow I was talking to and walk on down the way. That was two hours of the best fishing fun I have ever had. I can imagine that the bait shops were swamped for those little PP's, but these folks need a spin outfit to work it right. These other ob-are good, but for all around and everyday fishing I'll take that PP every time.

A medium to heavy vote is the record through Calloway County today as thousands of persons here go to the polls to elect county and city officials.

THROW A FEATHER FORTY FEET

You can do it with spinning equipment. Spin fishermen can use everything from weightless flies, with the help of a clear plastic bubble, to the 5-8 ounce baits of-bait casters. The most popular weights, however, are in the 1-4 ounce class. See "Know Your Baits" above. Greater distance, equal accuracy, and higher fish production are yours for the taking in spin fishing.

You fish more and lose your temper less when you are a spinning addict too. For, in this method there are no backlashes to untangle, no leaders to tie on and no worries about fish catching possibilities. With my Airex Spinster outfit, I have landed three times as many fish as anyone else in the party on numerous occasions, and made bait casters' eyes pop to see the crappie strings taken on spin equipment when they were doing "Fair, got six so far."

This word of caution! There are many fly-by-night manufacturers making spin equipment that looks good, but if you are going to be satisfied with your new spinning adventures, stick to the well known brands. You won't be sorry then. The Airex Corporation hasn't paid me a dime, or given me anything they make. I use their rod and reel and have found its performance perfect for two years. I say that you can't go wrong there.

GO GET THOSE BASS, HERE'S A TIP TO DO IT Now is the time to be getting those striped bass. They are cutting Kentucky Lake to pieces, and are waiting for your Spinner offering. The better part of fishermen now are after stripes, and justifiably so, but let's not forget those largemouths. August is the time to work those top water lures for junker bass.

J. O. Reeves, our County Conservation Officer, gave us this tip a couple of weeks ago. He said that the bass were hitting at night, on surface lures (He mentioned Lucky 13's and Hula Popper's) fished from the bank. Reeves told us to cast out 15 or 20 feet and retrieve slowly, popping the lure at about two minute intervals. J. O. said that the bass will hit when the bait is about seven feet from the bank. He suggested the rocky points as the best location for getting GOT TO BE ROVING ON, SEE YOU NEXT FRIDAY, OK!!!

Drought Committees Compile Information

LEXINGTON — County drought committees across the state today began compiling detailed reevaluation information on the drought situation for submission to the Kentucky Drought Emergency Committee.

The state committee yesterday requested an immediate survey of each county's conditions for submission to the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

James R. Rash Jr., Henderson, chairman of the Kentucky Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee, said the statewide survey was requested so counties asking for federal drought disaster assistance could be helped more quickly.

Conditions Spotty

The drought emergency committee met in a special meeting here yesterday to discuss drought problems. Nine field agents gave reports showing that drought conditions at present are spotty and often vary widely within the same county. Federal farm experts at Louisville reported similar findings Tuesday.

The field agents said recent rains, which continued through yesterday, made a reevaluation of the state drought situation necessary.

All regional agents said recent rains were extremely beneficial to pastures. They agreed, however, that regardless of recent rains or the possibility of more rains, a hay shortage still will exist in the state.

The emergency committee plans to meet here again Aug. 25 but will meet sooner if the drought situation demands earlier action.

RONALD BLUMENTHAL, 19, is fingerprinted in Brookline, Mass., after telling authorities that he was seized "by an obsession" when he beat and stabbed to death Mrs. Ora Schonarth, 52, divorcee and former dress shop proprietor. SIGNING OVER SUEZ TO EGYPT

In Cairo, Premier Gamal Abdel Nasser (right) signs for Egypt. British War Minister Anthony Head (left) waits to sign.

Cyprus with relation to Suez. Greece is pressing self-rule for Cyprus in the UN. Cypriots favor union with Greece.

BRITAIN'S COLONIAL contraction in the Mediterranean is illustrated here. The agreement signed in Cairo provides for removal of Britain's Suez garrison of nearly 80,000 troops within 20 months, and for reactivation of the base if Turkey or the Arab states are attacked. Elimination of Suez as a base makes Cyprus even more important to Britain.

'FAREWELL' SAID, STAY GRANTED

MRS. FRANCES COUTURIER, Los Angeles divorcee and mother of two children, walks from San Quentin prison in California after "farewell" interview with Caryl Chessman (inset), convicted kidnaper-rapist, before he won an indefinite stay of execution. It came less than 24 hours before he was to enter the gas chamber. Chessman, 32, has been in "death row" six years, and this is his fourth stay. During that time a romance developed between him and Mrs. Couturier.

CHOOSING THE BEST

One cannot exercise too much care and wisdom in the making of life's numerous choices. Therefore, the Christian should guard against allowing the good to become the enemy of the best. If he will only strive diligently to cultivate the habit of choosing the best, he will discover that his spiritual growth will be far more healthy and his Christian service will be much more satisfactory.

This passage is a part of the Sermon on the Mount, which is one of the most solemn and instructive portions of the Word. It reminds us that two things harass the minds of people, anxiety about today and fear tomorrow. Our Lord is not telling us that intelligent forethought and industry in providing for our daily needs and the needs of our loved ones are not good and proper, but He is warning us against the sin of worry.

Our Lord plainly shows that the antidote for worry is trust in God. Worry is simply a distrust of God. Worry is due to one's thinking that God is either incapable of supplying his needs or that He will forget to do so. In the measure that one is anxious about material needs, he shows a lack of faith in the ability, love and willingness of God. Regardless of what thought or concern one exercises concerning material needs, they can only be provided according to His will. He insists that life is more than things, therefore, they should be our servants instead of our masters.

In His attempt to get us to live without anxiety, our Lord points us to nature for some good examples. The fowls of the air neither sow nor reap, and yet they do not go hungry. The birds do not worry about what they shall eat and drink, and yet God takes care of them. Since these inferior creatures are fed by the Heavenly Father, without a care on their part, He will certainly be mindful of His children and feed them. Furthermore, the lovely lilies preach a wonderfully convincing sermon against our carefoll, harassed and troubled lives. The lilies are submissive to the divine will. They appropriate what God provides and share it with others. We are impressed with the fact that the lilies are just what they seem to be and no more. What a fine virtue is genuineness! How repellent is hypocrisy and insincerity. What poor creatures we become when we try to pass as other than we are, and to impress people as being what we are not. Our Lord's illustration of the carefree birds and the untiring lilies indicates that anxiety is unnecessary on the part of the children of God, for our Heavenly Father knows all of our needs. As certainly as He feeds the birds and clothes the flowers, He will feed and clothe the Christian. Since He cares for the least of His creatures, He certainly will care for those who trust in Him.

Christ is saying that the first step toward getting what we need in life is a proper relationship to God and His program. Right relationship to God and devotion to Him and His way of life for us will insure happy, useful and successful living. Our Lord commands us to put first things first, but really intend to attend to first things by and by. Primary things are frequently neglected because of absorption in things which are secondary. Unless His command, to seek first the kingdom of God and His righteousness is obeyed, the promise will not be fulfilled. Give God His rightful place in your life and He will see to it that all these things will be added. Lack of trust in Him reminds us of the words of Elizabeth Cheney: "Said the Robin to the Sparrow: 'I should really like to know why these anxious human beings fret about the worry life.' Said the Sparrow to the Robin: 'Friend, I think that it must be that they have no Heavenly Father.' Such as cares for you and me." Philippians 1:3-11. Pray! was moved to pray for the Philippian Christians. They loved the Lord and His apostle devotedly, and expressed their love by sharing the gospel of Christ with others. Paul prayed that the full tide of their love might be confined to the proper channel and kept free from all that was selfish and impure. He prayed that their love might grow richer in two respects, in an accurate knowledge of the right and in an unusual alertness in applying such a knowledge to the daily experiences of life.

Paul also prayed that they might have a discerning love, or the ability to detect the good from the bad, even if they looked alike. He longed for them to have a transparent love, or to be known on the outside for what they were on the inside. A sincere Christian is one who does not have anything made up in his life; he is just what people see him to be seven days each week. There is no place for hypocrisy in the life of a child of God. Paul also asked the Lord that the Philippians might be filled with the fruits of righteousness, as a result of their union with Christ.

Philippians 4:3.

every believer in Christ. In a Paul challenges all Christians to cultivate elevating thoughts. He urges us to meditate on the things which are worthy of praise—things that are true, honest, just, lovely, and of good report. harassed and troubled lives. The lilies are submissive to the divine will. They appropriate what God provides and share it with others. We are impressed with the fact that the lilies are just what they seem to be and no more. What a fine virtue is genuineness! How repellent is hypocrisy and insincerity. What poor creatures we become when we try to pass as other than we are, and to impress people as being what we are not!

Our Lord's illustration of the carefree birds and the untiring lilies indicates that anxiety is unnecessary on the part of the children of God. For our Heavenly Father knows all of our needs. As certainly as He feeds the birds and clothes the flowers, He will feed and clothe the Christian. Since He cares for the least of His creatures, He certainly will care for those who trust in Him.

Christ is saying that the first step toward getting what we need in life is a proper relationship to God and His program. Right relationship to God and devotion to Him, and His way of life for us will insure happy, useful and successful living. Our Lord commands us to put first things first. So many put last things first, but really intend to attend to first things by and by. Primary things are frequently neglected because of absorption in things which are secondary. Unless His command to seek first the kingdom of God and His righteousness is obeyed, the promise will not be fulfilled. Give God His rightful place in your life and He will see to it that all these things will be added. Lack of trust in Him reminds us of the words of Elizabeth Cheney: "I should really like to know why these anxious human beings fret and frown and worry so." "I should like to know why they say, 'Friend, I think that it must be that they have no Heavenly Father.' Such as 'cares for you and me.'" Philippians 1:9-11.

Prayer was moved to pray for the Philippine Christians. They loved the Lord and His apostle devotedly, and expressed their love by sharing the gospel of Christ with others. Paul prayed that the full tide of their love might be centered in the proper channels and kept free from all that was selfish and impure. He prayed that their love might grow richer in two respects, in an accurate knowledge of the right and in an unusual alertness in applying such knowledge to the daily experiences of life.

Paul also prays that they might have a discerning love, or the ability to detect the good from the bad, even if they looked alike. He longed for them to have a transparent love, or to be known on the outside for what they were on the inside. A sincere Christian is one who does not have anything made up in his life; he is just what people see him to be seven days each week. There is no place for hypocrisy in the life of a child of God. Paul also asked the Lord that the Philippians might be filled with the fruits of righteousness, as a result of their union with Christ.

every believer in Christ. In it Paul challenges all Christians to cultivate elevating thoughts. He urges us to meditate on the things which are worthy of praise—things that are true, honest, just, lovely, and of good report. As Christians we should strive to be as much like our Lord now as it is possible for us to be, looking forward to the time when we shall be just like Him.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Dr. H. C. Chalmers

CHOOSING THE BEST

One cannot exercise too much care and wisdom in the making of life's numerous choices. Therefore, the Christian should guard against allowing the good to become the enemy of the best. If he will only strive diligently to cultivate the habit of choosing the best, he will discover that his spiritual growth will be far more healthy and his Christian service will be much more satisfactory. Matthew 6:25-33.

This passage is a part of the Sermon on the Mount, which is one of the most solemn and instructive portions of the Word. It reminds us that two things harass the minds of people, anxiety about today and fear tomorrow. Our Lord is not telling us that intelligent forethought and industry in providing for our daily needs and the needs of our loved ones are not good and proper, but He is warning us against the sin of worry.

Our Lord plainly shows that the antidote for worry is trust in God. Worry is simply a distrust of God. Worry is due to one's thinking that God is either incapable of supplying his needs or that He will forget to do so. In the measure that one is anxious about his material needs, he shows a lack of faith in the ability, love and willingness of God. Regardless of what thought or concern one exercises concerning material needs, they can only be provided according to His will. He insists that life is more than things, therefore, they should be our servants instead of our masters.

In His attempt to get us to live without anxiety, our Lord points us to nature for some good examples. The fowls of the air neither sow nor reap, and yet they do not go hungry. The birds do not worry about what they shall eat and drink, and yet God takes care of them. Surely these inferior creatures are fed by the Heavenly Father, without a care on their part. He will certainly be mindful of His children and feed them.

Furthermore, the lovely lilies preach a wonderfully convincing sermon against our carefiling, harassed and troubled lives. The lilies are submissive to the "divine will." They appropriate what God provides and share it with others. We are impressed with the fact that the lilies are just what they seem to be and no more. What a fine virtue is genuineness! How repellent is hypocrisy and insincerity. What poor creatures we become when we try to pose as other than we are, and to impress people as being what we are not. Our Lord's illustration of the carefree birds and the untiring lilies indicates that anxiety is unnecessary on the part of the children of God, for our Heavenly Father knows all of our needs. As certainly as He feeds the birds and clothes the flowers, He will feed and clothe the Christian. Since He cares for the least of His creatures, He certainly will care for those who trust in Him.

Christ is saying that the first step toward getting what we need in life is a proper relationship to God and His program. Right relationship to God and devotion to Him and His way of life for us will insure happy, useful and successful living. Our Lord commands us to put first things first, but many put last things first, but really intend to attend to first things by and by. Primary things are frequently neglected because of absorption in things which are secondary. Unless His command to seek first the kingdom of God and His righteousness is obeyed, the promise will not be fulfilled. Give God His rightful place in your life and He will see to it that all these things will be added. Lack of trust in Him reminds us of the words of Elizabeth Cheney: "Said the Robin to the Sparrow: 'I should really like to know why these anxious human beings fret and fume like worry.'" Said the Sparrow to the Robin: "Friend, I think that it must be that they have no Heavenly Father."

Such as cares for you and me," Philippians 19-11. P.L. was moved to pray for the Philippians. They loved the Lord and His apostle devotedly, and expressed their love by sharing the gospel of Christ with others. Paul prayed that the full tide of their love might be confined to the proper channels and kept free from all that was selfish and impure. He prayed that their love might grow richer in two respects, in an accurate knowledge of the right and in an unusual alertness in applying such a knowledge to the daily experiences of life.

Paul also prayed that they might have a discerning love, or the ability to detect the good from the bad, even if they looked alike. He longed for them to have a transparent love, or to be known on the outside for what they were on the inside. A sincere Christian is one who does not have anything made up in his life; he is just what people see him to be seven days each week. There is no place for hypocrisy in the life of a child of God. Paul also asked the Lord that the Philippians might be filled with the fruits of righteousness, as a result of their union with Christ. Philippians 4:8.

The Taming of Carney Wilde by BART SPICER

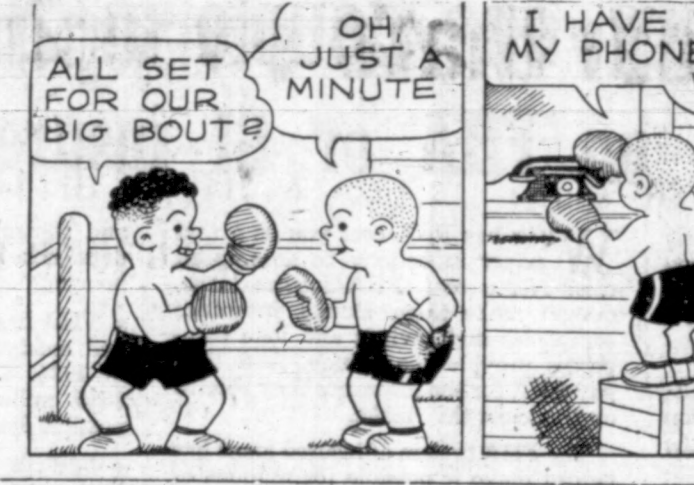

SYNOPSIS A dated scrap of paper marked "John Smith" is sent to Carney Wilde aboard a luxury boat cruising from Cincinnati to Orleans, in the hope of apprehending one Charles Alexander Stewart. This youth, who had absconded with funds belonging to a bank in Philadelphia, and the course of his flight, had killed a policeman. As Wilde sits at the table, he is surprised by the sudden appearance of his occupant, Miss Pomeroy, a professional photographer on her way to the Mardi Gras. The tall, handsome, self-sufficient young career woman, dressed in a sun-point, from her room. Out of a sudden, she is startled and a companion, "Doc" Higgins, who generally refers to himself as a scoundrel and a con-man. They are joined by Ed Bortnick, a small-time banker, on holiday with his wife, a waitress on holiday with the vessel's captain, let it be known that Carney Wilde is aboard on a mission, and now passengers and crew were to avoid him. A Wilde momentary pondering this new handicap, a wire from Captain Bortnick of the Philadelphia police reaches him. Mary Vickers, the fugitive Stewart's girl-friend, has left home for a destination unknown. Can it be Wilde wonders, that the Miss Pomeroy is in search of the missing Mary Vickers?

CHAPTER TWELVE "YOU EVER meet anyone named John Smith?" I asked sourly. "Or do all your friends have exotic names?" "Old John," Doc mused. "Now I haven't thought of him for years, not since I used to borrow his name for use in hotel registers. We used to call him John the Man when he was operating his emporium of euphoria in Carson's Bend, California, only a dry-man's spit from the blue laws of Santa Barbara. Huge fellow. Shook hands once with Sitting Bull. Had a routine salutation all his life afterwards. Shake the hand that shook the hand that scragged General Custer." Big fellow, as I said. Bigger than you even, by an inch or two. Then Doc cocked his head and eyed me quizzically. "All right," I grinned. "But is there a word of truth in anything you've said?" "A word? Sure," Doc said readily. "Old John really was big." "That's the true word?" "The only one," Doc exploded in a light flutter of laughter that sounded like popping balloons. "Young fellow, you need a drink. You're far too bright-eyed and alert for this time of day. A righteous man should be brooding on his sins of yesterday. I recommend a sparkling glass of Natchez nectar, a drink whose recipe is so secret that even I forget it half the time. How about stopping ashore and tossing..." "Not today," she said in a light, rippling voice. I turned from the railing, and she was approaching. Doc bowed low and whipped off his hat and said: "I remind myself of a previous engagement, which I shall make in just a moment, if you will excuse me, Miss Pomeroy." He walked off along the deck, and I was still smiling when I looked at her again. We watched the rouabouts bring in the big gangplank. The boat shuddered as the engine turned over. Then we backed out into the river and she turned to me. "You forgot this," she said softly, and thrust the telegram into my coat pocket. "Who is Eli?" "A friend," I said. "It was his bank Stewart robbed." I said. "But he sends me regards." "Don't look so grim," she said in a voice that was almost a whisper. "I can't stand it. I get so frightened." "What?" "For you," she said insistently. "It's not me... oh, let's go and get breakfast. I think I'm getting hysterical." "Not you," I said. I took her arm in mine and we turned toward the staircase. "But I'm sorry about the ugly face. I was thinking about Charles Alexander Stewart." "I know what you were thinking about." I stepped back to let her go in first and I watched her long straight back, the erect, balanced walk. She would know, I thought. It wasn't sensible that she should, but it was all of a piece with the unlikely magic between us. We sat at the far end, taking two places together. Most of our tablemates had finished. Miss Pomeroy had decided on oatmeal, bacon and waffles and some creamed chicken. "Hope I can make enough money to feed you properly," I said, taking up a beaker of orange juice. "Oh, I always eat a big breakfast, but I take it with a magnificent smile. It's the only meal I can take my time with and really enjoy. Lunches and dinners are so likely to become business things. But breakfast—ah, breakfast is for me." I said: "You get up early. You eat big breakfasts. Do you think we could find something we like in common?" "And again I could see only her eyes as she turned to me, "Oh, yes," she said. "Amen," I agreed. "But you don't go for long walks or grow prize petunias or read Kafka, do you?" "None of them," she answered quickly. "I take taxis and grow older day by day and develop discontent in a small apartment—and I read anything that comes my way and a lot I have to go find." "Ain't that wonderful?" I breathed. "And just think how many girls I might have picked you..." "You pick or get picked?" Russell slid into the chair opposite me. "Poor fellow," he said lightly. "He thinks he had something to say about it." "Crew has to sign the payroll today," Russell said. "They'll be filing into the purser's office all day. You could park there and oggle each one and I could promise the deck and point out the sights to Miss Pomeroy." Miss Pomeroy laughed and winked at me. She reached into a pocket and put a small cowhide case on the table. "I'm a working girl," she

John and Mary, one couple in 20,000,000 thanks to an FHA or GI insured loan

JOHN and MARY have realized their most cherished dream—"a home of their own." Yet John's income is modest. His savings were small. How did they manage?

They managed by securing an FHA-insured house loan. Twenty million Americans have already enjoyed the benefits of FHA's many housing programs. John and Mary's loan was for a new home. Their down payment was small. Now they pay less per month than they formerly were charged for rent. And, pride in home ownership has enriched their lives in a way no other single investment could.

Is this FHA loan story remarkable if it has happened twenty million times?

Yes, because only in America does it happen. For here, private industry and FHA together have produced a miracle of new construction, building and improving millions of homes, far outstripping any other nation's efforts to house its people.

- The Federal Housing Administration (FHA) operates as a federally owned and controlled insurance company. It does not make loans, plan or build housing.
- FHA has insured $33 billion in loans and mortgages since its establishment in 1934. $18 billion is still in force. $345 million in reserves cover any possible losses.
- FHA is wholly self-supporting from income received for insurance services from banks, insurance companies, savings and loan companies, and other institutional lenders. Its estimated income from 1953 operations was $100 million, which was placed in its reserve fund. FHA doesn't cost taxpayers a cent.
- Twenty million families have received FHA-insured loans, improving housing available to more than 40 million persons.
- Average price of a new FHA-insured home in 1953 was $10,515. Eighty percent of families buying new FHA-insured homes last year had incomes between $3,500 and $7,000.
