Business Decline Has Stopped, Ike

By DAYTON MOORE
United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Eisenhower reported today that the recent business decline has been stopped, and the nation is in a higher, even an improving, state of economic welfare.

The President said the value of the dollar has remained stable, wages have continued to increase, and wholesale and consumer prices have risen only slightly over a year ago.

In a mid-year economic report, Mr. Eisenhower declared confidently that historians of earlier days would have described the period as one of "great prosperity."

Mr. Eisenhower's statement was based on advice from his Economic Council. The council no longer is issuing a formal mid-year economic report.

He admitted that some industries and cities have been seriously affected by economic dips although the declines have been small on an overall national basis.

But he said the administration's economic program being legislated by Congress will help to reduce unemployment and spur private enterprise.

Stating that there are "numerous signs of economic improvement" in the nation, Mr. Eisenhower added these:

A "tendency" toward decreasing unemployment recently; rising retail sales, a high rate of spending by business for capital expansion and improvement, a continuing boom, reduction in inventories, and "great strength" in the stock market.

The President said that an even better economic picture results from a comparison with the first half of 1953, the nation's second most prosperous year.

Compared to 1953, industrial production was up 13 percent, the gross national product rose 14 percent, non-agricultural employment increased 11 percent, personal income was 7.2 percent higher and disposable personal income was up 12 percent.

All these statistics, he said, "suggest a high, or even an improving, state of economic welfare."

Economic historians of an earlier generation, he added, would have felt no hesitation in describing recent times as a period of "great prosperity."

Mr. Eisenhower conceded, however, that some industries, communities, and groups had been "affected seriously" by economic declines although the dip had been small on an overall basis.

Factory employment, particularly in the durable goods industry, has suffered, while agricultural prices and incomes have shown the adverse effects of shrinking export markets and unbalanced production, he said.

But he boasted that the administration's economic program being enacted by the present Congress marks a milestone in constructive legislation.

Polio Epidemic Fought In West

LOS ANGELES, Calif. (AP) — Health officers today fought an epidemic outbreak of infantile paralysis in a covered sprawling Los Angeles County and has touched off a motion picture color.

The nine-year-old daughter of film star Mike Sullivan and director John Ford is among the 500 persons in the county.

One other polio case is reported in Beverly Hills, where the mansions of the stars are located. How special precautions were taken for the community.

Polio has struck 300 persons in the city of Los Angeles alone since the start of the year. It is the worst outbreak since the record epidemic of 1948.

Work Is Resumed On New School Building Here

Work resumed this morning on the new elementary school building on South Thirteenth street, after cessation of work Tuesday and Wednesday.

Rufus Saunders said that the reason for the work stoppage was that stone had arrived at Paris, Tennessee, where the company is building a new church of Christ building.

Brick masons were transferred to that job to do the stone work, he said. It was first thought that a strike on the project had halted work, since a picket was on the scene of construction on Tuesday evening. This was only a minor disagreement, Saunders said.

The walls of the new school are going up now. The walls on the south end of the school will go up first so carpenters can begin the roof, then the walls of the North end of the school will go up.

The school is expected to be completed about January 1.

Another Cool Night In Store Here

By UNITED PRESS
Kentucky faces another night of chilly, blanket weather tonight with temperatures falling into the 50s in most areas. The Weather Bureau also expects scattered showers and thundershowers.

Low temperatures last night, included 51 at Mayfield, 52 at Corbin, 53 at Corbin, 55 at Lexington, 57 at Pikeville, 59 at Louisville, 60 at Bowling Green and 66 at Paducah. Little change in temperature was forecast for tonight.

Yesterday's showers in Kentucky were confined to the southwest portion as far east and north as Owensboro. Henderson reported a inch and several cities reported smaller amounts in that area.

Cool Canadian air pushed southward and eastward today, dropping temperatures as much as 21 degrees from South Dakota and Colorado to the Atlantic Coast.

But elsewhere heat wave temperatures shot up a few degrees. Temperatures of 100 degrees or greater were registered in central Texas, southern Kansas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Mississippi and Alabama and 106 was reported at Little Rock, Ark.

The heat wave in Iowa was blamed for the death of Harold E. Scott 75, director of the Sibley State Bank. He died Wednesday after suffering a heart attack.

In Texas the weekly crop report said range and pasture feed reserves were short due to the prolonged dry weather and farmers were hauling water to soak their fields.

Young Central American Girl, Student At Murray State College, Is Amazed At Freedom Of Young American Women

By Ouida Jewell
Fulton Daily Leader
Coming from a social culture at least 50 years behind ours, at first Vickie Skade was amazed at the freedom of our young women, but now that she has gotten a little used to this country, she likes it here very much.

Vickie, a lovely, dark-haired, brown-eyed freshman at Murray State, is spending a part of her vacation in the home of her roommate, Miss Katee Lowe, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kellie Lowe on Third Street, Fulton, Ky.

The 20-year-old Vickie comes from San Salvador, capital city of El Salvador. She is the daughter of Dr. Juan Saade, a famous bone specialist, who is a Syrian from Palestine. Salvador, a young lady has to have a chaperon at night. It usually being her brother. The young ladies do not openly visit the stores and have the freedom that North American girls do.

According to Miss Saade, ready-made clothes in her country are very expensive, as they come from New York. They have factories that weave materials, but ready-made clothes are not made there.

There are three distinct classes of people, with no breaking over. The Upper Class usually have shoes made to order.

The Upper Class women does not do any work of her own. If she were to pick up a broom, she would be disgraced. Vickie's family has five servants in the household.

Vickie herself worked in a branch of the Bank of London against the wishes of her father, before coming here to school. She is here primarily to learn English, which she studied for three years in high schools, as one can get better jobs by knowing the language well. She worked in the bank as a secretary, and upon her return to her country plans to work again in the same place.

Vickie came to the United States in February, 1953 to study in the Lousine Convent in New Orleans, where she stayed six months.

Through her cousins, who were attending Mississippi Junior College at Senatobia, she heard of Murray State and the group decided to enroll there last fall.

In the group of cousins, there are five from one family—three boys and two girls. They are the Kafati family from San Salvador. Two more of Vickie's cousins, who are attending school at Murray, are Jack Hilsaca of Honduras and Emilio Mahomah of San Salvador. Vickie is a Freshman in Commerce. One of the boys is attending college, while all the others are in the high school department of the Training School.

Vickie plans to attend Murray State at least one more year before returning home.

She likes it here very much. She likes the way we live in the United States better than the way they live in her country. In fact, Vickie said "I love it in America. I feel like an American here."

She misses her family and her mother is quite homesick for her, but the young Central American girl plans to stick it out, until she gets the education she wants here.

Concerning the educational facilities in El Salvador. When a student finishes high school there he has 42 credits in comparison to our 16. When he finishes, he has an education equivalent to two years of college in our country. Just the first eight grades are free or public schools, and just the two lower classes attend these. From the eighth grade on, the fee rises. In high school the entrance fee is about $25 or $30 per student. English is compulsory in their schools as in those in the United States. The high school or college one attends is the one for whichever class you belong to.

In Vickie's home three languages are spoken—Spanish, the native tongue of her country, Syrian, and English. She is next to the youngest in a family of seven. One of her brothers is a Master Accountant and Insurance Advisor, and is called on for advice by several Latin American countries.

Her mother is an expert needlewoman and some of her work is now on display at the Smithsonian Institute in Washington, D. C. A bedspread she made won a contest in the United States and the government asked for it to put on display.

Christmas in San Salvador is similar to ours, except that the presents for the children are put on their beds, instead of on Christmas trees.

"They also have a New Year's celebration, like ours."

Vickie is Catholic, as are most of the people in her country. There is one Baptist Church in Salvador.

El Salvador is a country on the Pacific side of the Isthmus, which is Central America. It is just north of Panama and South of Guatemala, which is south of Mexico.

Vickie hasn't received any mail from home in the past couple of weeks and thinks that maybe the disturbance at Guatemala is the cause for it.

El Salvador is approximately 300 miles wide and 500 miles long, with 13,700 square miles in all. They don't have summer and winter as we do, but have a dry and wet season. The temperature gets around 35 or 40 in the coldest.

The country is bounded by volcanic mountains and one in a while they have an eruption. As Katee put it "Ever once in a while the volcanoes get tired of this old world and let off a little steam."

At first when Vickie arrived in the United States, she couldn't understand our fast talk, especially our figures of speech, but could write English well. Now she is catching on fine.

'Bad Dream' Stranger Surrenders To Police

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — Funeral services for the victim of Louisville's "bad dream" strangler were held today at Sweden Baptist Church in Edmonson County.

Minnie Hawks, whose ex-husband told police he must have strangled her after an argument, was a native of Sweden.

The ex-husband, William Pawley, surrendered to police after being haunted by a bad dream at work. He said he dreamed that he had strangled his former wife the night. He said the dream became so strong he drove home "to see if she was really dead," and found her body on a couch.

Pawley called his attorney, who advised him to surrender to Jefferson County police. Pawley drove around in his automobile for four or five hours, then picked up his attorney and surrendered.

"Stool Pigeon" Shouts Worker Named As Red

WASHINGTON (AP) — A defense plant worker told the Senate investigating Subcommittee today that the FBI informant who called him a Communist was "a despicable stool pigeon."

The incident occurred as the subcommittee studied Communist infiltration of defense plants.

Louis Passikoff, an employee of the General Electric plant at Schenectady, N. Y., hurled the "stool pigeon" epithet at Joseph D. Mazzei a few minutes after Mazzei said he had sat in Communist meetings with Passikoff.

Chairman Joseph R. McCarthy R-Wis at one point threatened to eject Passikoff from the hearing room for "making speeches" instead of answering whether he was a Communist.

McCarthy also ordered a Capitol policeman to force the witness's wife, Mrs. Passikoff, to sit down when she spoke up as senator from the back of the room. She took her seat before the officer reached her.

When Passikoff called Mazzei, sitting a few feet away, a "despicable stool pigeon," McCarthy interrupted to tell Mazzei, "you shouldn't be disturbed, you have done a tremendous job for the FBI for 12 years."

"I'm used to it, sir," said Mazzei, a Pittsburgh theater operator who testified before McCarthy's subcommittee last year.

Mazzei at that time identified Lou Bortz, a Pittsburgh electrical worker as a Communist who said he had been assigned to kill McCarthy.

McCarthy dropped a cryptic hint of a new case when he said Mazzei was called to Washington to testify about Communism in the Army.

"Last week," he told Mazzei, "you went up in a freight elevator with a security officer and looked through a door and picked out one person at work whom you knew as a Communist."

Mazzei agreed. There was no further reference to the matter immediately.

Mazzei said he was an undercover FBI informant in the Communist party until March 28, 1953. He identified Passikoff as a Communist Party "troublemaker" sent to Pittsburgh from New York in 1948, and later dispatched to Erie, Pa., and Buffalo, N. Y.

Passikoff, on taking the stand, demanded the right to read a "motion" to quash his subpoena. McCarthy examining the document, said it was a prepared statement and that Passikoff was using a "new subterfuge" by calling it a motion.

But he allowed Passikoff to read his document, which charged McCarthy with "conspiracy" with General Electric Co. to get him fired. Passikoff also argued that his case should be delayed until a special Senate subcommittee hears charges against McCarthy.

New Milk Machine Installed At Local Plant

The Ryan Milk Company has introduced into the West Kentucky area a milk vending machine which is located at the Calloway Manufacturing Company.

The new machine is about seven feet tall and three feet wide and has a capacity of 210 one-third quart containers. The containers are shaped like the quart containers and a person can, by use of a selector, obtain regular milk or chocolate milk.

The milk is under refrigeration and kept at 36 degrees. The blue machine has a nice appearance and can fit into almost any surroundings.

In an advertisement in today's issue, the Ryan Milk Company thanks the Calloway Manufacturing Company for allowing the installation of the machine.

Moisture In Land Better

LOUISVILLE (AP) — Recent rains have definitely improved soil moisture conditions in all sections of Kentucky except the south central and southwestern sections, the U.S. Department of Agriculture said today.

The department's weekly crop report said tobacco conditions were much improved and pastures were somewhat improved by the recent rains.

Soil conditions were reported much improved in the northern, eastern and most central portions. Pastures were called "meager" except in eastern counties, about half of normal. Tobacco reports of expected yield per acre are nearly as high as those reported at this time last year.

Corn crop reports varied. While some crops have failed because of heat and drought, many fields in the same fields were expected to yield normally.

Minnie Rated As One Of Best By Chief

By JACK CUDDY

United Press Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The White Sox are touting Minnie Minoso as the best 1 candidate for the most valuable player award and one of his biggest boosters is teammate Phil Cavarretta, who once gained the same honor himself.

Cavarretta, the ex-Cub manager who won the National League's most valuable player award in 1945, insists Minoso is the best player he has seen since entering the American League three months ago.

"All things considered," says the 37-year-old Cavarretta, "Mino's ranks right up there with the best players I've seen in my 20 years in the big leagues. He can hit, he can run, he can throw and he can field. It's a combination you don't see too much of these days."

"Mays may have an edge in power," Cavarretta says, "but Minnie is a lot more consistent and he's better on the bases."

Gives 100 Per Cent
Cavarretta is in a position to appreciate Minoso's talents because he might still be managing the Cubs if he had a few players on his club like Minnie.

"Minnie puts out 100 per cent effort every time he goes out to play," Cavarretta declared. "He's the type ball player a manager loves to have."

Paul Richards, who manages the White Sox, agrees wholeheartedly with Cavarretta.

"Minnie has carried a good part of the load for us this season," Richards admits. "Without him we wouldn't be this high."

The White Sox players know Minoso has meant so much to them so far and they realize that their relatively slim chance to overtake the Yankees and Indians rests heavily on Minnie.

During a brief flare-up between the White Sox and the Yankees earlier this season, members of both teams ran out on the field and it looked as if a free-for-all might result.

Minoso was in the front line of the combatants but a White Sox second-stringer pulled him back and said:

Depends on Minnie
"If there's gonna be a fight, Minnie, let 'em pound on me instead of you. If anything happens to you, there go our pennant chances."

Such statements could cause Minoso's cap to stretch but there's no danger of that. Minnie just wants to be "one of the boys" and he'll own the same affable exterior whether he hits 270 or 270.

He isn't quick to forgive his own mistakes on the ball field, either.

More Deductions In New Tax Law

FRANKFORT, KY. — The new Kentucky income tax law may save you some money next year.

Besides requiring employers to withhold tax from salaries paid employees, the new law allows an individual to take advantage of certain deductions and credits which were not permitted before.

This means in many cases that an individual who earned the same income in 1954 as in 1953 will pay less state income tax on the 1954 income.

Some of the new deductions and credits which will be permitted when the 1954 return is filed are:

1. Credit may be claimed for any dependent who is claimed on your federal income tax return.
2. Extra credits may be claimed for persons over 65 years of age or blind.
3. Same treatment of gains and losses from the sale of capital assets as allowed on federal return.
4. If deductions are itemized, these will be permitted:
 - A. Seven cents a gallon Kentucky gasoline tax.
 - B. Three per cent usage tax on automobiles.
 - C. Kentucky income tax paid during the year.
 - D. Higher limit on charitable deductions.
 - E. Higher limit on medical expenses.
 - F. City occupational taxes if paid to city outside Kentucky.

Persons who have questions about the new Kentucky income tax law may contact the Income Division, Department of Revenue, here, or one of the department's district offices in Ashland, Lexington, Covington, Louisville, and Paducah.

He wandered off second base absentmindedly in a game this season and was easily doubled after the next batter lifted a short fly.

Later in the same contest, Richards patted Minoso on the back and told him "nice going, Minnie."

Instead of accepting Richards' back-slap, Minoso preferred to dwell on his previous base-running boner.

"Yeah, I made him happy now," Minnie said in his broken English, "but I sure love up railroad last time."

But you can take it from his teammates, Minoso doesn't derail the White Sox express too often.

Mrs. Dior Not To Worry Over Her Look

ELIZABETH TOOMEY
Press Staff Correspondent
NEW YORK (AP) — A designer who is currently busy covering up the curves of her new dress said today men have nothing to worry about from Christian Dior and his lean-topped look.

She told inside ...

"Covering curves is one thing, and a very alluring one at that," Bill Thomas explained. "Concealing them is something else, and women won't stand for it."

Thomas, a good looking, moustached young man of 32, is the top designer for Universal-International Studios in Hollywood. He's here to do some window shopping along fifth Avenue and to see his latest movie wardrobe for Jane Wyman on the screen in "Magnificent Obsession."

"A woman is much more exciting when she's covered," the ex-GI said. "Jane Russell knows this too. She was delighted when we talked about covered-up dresses for this new picture. She said she'd been trying for that for years."

"I've left her arms bare, but the necklines are cut up to the with narrow straps over the shoulders, but nothing strapless. I don't like strapless dresses on anyone."

Thomas took one trip to Paris recently to look over French fashions for possible Hollywood use, but hurried back a sadder and wiser man.

"No wonder Dior got the idea to flatten the bosom of his dresses," he said. "Have you ever seen those French mannequins? I never saw such flat-chested girls in my life."

Hollywood glamor queens occasionally go shopping for Paris originals, just like any other woman who can afford it. But even before Dior's new flattened bust-line, Thomas said those French dresses just don't fit Hollywood's better known figures without letting out seams here and there.

Bustlines Altered

"I would say that the number of fashions per capita in Hollywood was about the same as the average town," he said frankly. "But when the stars bring back Paris originals, we usually have to let them out across the bustline."

"Hollywood has no intention of giving anyone the boyish look. Every man in the world likes to see a figure. If a woman lacks natural curves, she should pad them. It gives her more self confidence."

Dior's Idea Of Flattening Bustline Seen By The American Designers For Months

By ELIZABETH TOOMEY
United Press Staff Correspondent
NEW YORK 10 — American designers got behind the idea of flattening the bustline today and said they'd seen it coming for months.

Instead of objecting to Christian Dior's "hippy silhouette" introduced in Paris, which decreed a flatter bosom curve and new accent on the hips, a majority of American designers expressed a surprising "I could have told you so" reaction.

Dior's only taking the next step in a trend that already started here, when fall collections previewed earlier featured looser lines and fewer curves, they pointed out.

"You cannot shrug this idea off," said Harvey Bern, a dress manufacturer who introduced straight-lined jackets into his usually curvy collection for next fall. "It is part of a trend that is already started. Dior's clothes are bound to have an effect."

Says Idea Not New
Designer Ben Zuckerman claimed that some of Dior's designs, hailed as startling in Paris, were almost identical to clothes already shown here for fall.

"Clothes with the boyish feel are coming in," Zuckerman said. "I do not believe women will want to lose their waistline or their high, rounded, bosom, but they just won't be emphasized so much."

All of the designers emphasized that there'd be no return to binding the bustline to flaunt it, as fashion-conscious and well-endowed young women did in the Flapper Days.

"This is not to do away with curves, just do away with false curves and give women a natural line," insisted one young designer. "It has been in the wind a long time. It's about time we got away from the unnatural line of waist"

cinchers and built up bosoms." Sees Twenties Influence
"Subconsciously all of us are designing things that look a little like the 1920's," admitted Mollie Parnis, the designer whose clothes are favorites with Mrs. Mamie Eisenhower.

"American women never will give up completely all the things they've fought so hard for, however," she added, "like dieting to have a waistline and the right to look sexy."

Designer Cell Chapman agreed that women "will not willingly hide their figures in a tube," but that a "softer feeling definitely is on its way."

John C. Conover, executive director of the Corset and Brassiere Association of America, said that "only a year ago Dior told women to lift their hemlines and discard their girdles." He said American women decided they'd continue to dress as they look best, and suggested that perhaps "Mr. Dior has forgotten his experience of last year."

Marcantonio Denied Catholic Funeral

NEW YORK 10 — The Chancery of the New York Archdiocese has denied former Rep. Vito Marcantonio a Roman Catholic funeral and burial.

Marcantonio's wife and his mother had requested a solemn requiem mass for the fiery left-wing politician but the Chancery turned down the request Tuesday. "He had not practiced his religion in a great many years and was not reconciled with the church before his death," a Chancery spokesman said.

The ruling forbids any Catholic priest from officiating at Marcantonio's funeral scheduled for Thursday afternoon.

Marcantonio died of a heart attack Monday while walking to his law office. He had planned to run for Congress again this fall.

Leader Advocates Dropping Atomic Bomb On Kremlin

ELKINS PARK, Pa. (AP)—An educational and religious leader has advocated dropping an atomic bomb on the Kremlin within 10 years as a means of destroying Communism and "preventing the deaths of millions."

Dr. Allan A. Macae, president of the faculty of Faith Theological Seminary here, said Tuesday that
"with the atom bombs and the hydrogen bombs that the free world has in its hands now it could probably put an end to the center of the Kremlin with the loss of a comparatively few thousand men."

"Wait 10 years and millions will be killed on both sides with the balance of power having shifted to the side of the slaves of the Communist autocrats," he said.

Dr. Macae warned 1,300 churchmen from 43 nations attending the 3rd plenary Council of Christian Churches that "unless the Western nations stir themselves from their lethargy and proceed to use the temporary industrial and scientific advantage that is theirs and destroy Communism; there is nothing human to stop the Communist world revolution."

Dior's Idea Of Flattening Bustline Seen
By The American Designers For Months

By ELIZABETH TOOMEY
United Press Staff Correspondent
NEW YORK 12 — American designers got behind the idea of flattening the bustline today and said they'd seen it coming for months.

Instead of objecting to Christian Dior's "bumpy silhouette" introduced in Paris which decries a flatter bosom curve and new accent on the hips, a majority of American designers expressed a surprising "I could have told you so" reaction.

"You can't take the next step in a trend that already started here, when fall collections previewed earlier featured looser lines and fewer curves, they pointed out.

"You cannot shrug this idea off," said Harvey Berlin, a dress manufacturer who introduced straight-lined jackets into his usually curvy collection for next fall. "It is part of a trend that is already started. Dior's clothes are bound to have an effect."

Says Idea Not New
Designer Ben Zuckerman claimed that some of Dior's designs, hailed as startling in Paris, were almost identical to clothes already shown here for fall.

"Clothes with the boyish feel are coming in," Zuckerman said. "I do not believe women will want to lose their waistline or their high, rounded bosom, but they just won't be emphasized so much."

All of the designers emphasized that there'd be no return to binding the bustline to flatten it, as fashion conscious and well-dressed young women did in the Flapper Days.

"This is not to do away with curves, just do away with false curves and give women a natural line," insisted one young designer. "It has been in the wind a long time. It's about time we got away from the unnatural line-of-waist."

cinchers and built up bosoms."

Sees Twenties Influence

"Subconsciously all of us are designing things that look a little like the 1920's," admitted Mollie Parnis, the designer whose clothes are favorites with Mrs. Mamie Eisenhower.

"American women never will give up completely all the things they've fought so hard for, however," she added, "like dieting to have a waistline and the right to look sexy."

Designer Cecil Chapman agreed that women "will not willingly hide their figures in a tube," but that a "softer feeling definitely is on its way."

John C. Conover, executive director of the Corset and Brassiere Association of America, said that "only a year ago Dior told women to lift their hemlines and discard their girdles." He said American women decided they'd continue to dress as they look best, and suggested that perhaps "Mr. Dior has forgotten his experience of last year."

Marcantonio Denied
Catholic Funeral

NEW YORK 12 — The Chancery of the New York Archdiocese has denied former Rep. Vito Marcantonio a Roman Catholic funeral and burial.

Marcantonio's wife and his mother had requested a solemn requiem mass for the fiery left-wing politician but the Chancery turned down the request Tuesday. "He had not practiced his religion in a great many years and was not reconciled with the church before his death," a Chancery spokesman said.

The ruling forbids any Catholic priest from officiating at Marcantonio's funeral scheduled for Thursday afternoon.

Marcantonio died of a heart attack Monday while walking to his law office. He had planned to run for Congress again this fall.

Leader Advocates Dropping Atomic Bomb On Kremlin

ELKINS PARK, Pa. (AP)—An educational and religious leader has advocated dropping an atomic or hydrogen bomb on the Kremlin within 10 years as a means of destroying Communism and "preventing the deaths of millions."

Dr. Allan A. Macae, president of the faculty of Faith Theological Seminary here, said Tuesday that "with the atom bombs and the hydrogen bombs that the free world has in its hands now it could probably put an end to the center of the Kremlin with the loss of a comparatively few thou- sand men."

"Wait 10 years and millions will be killed on both sides with the balance of power having shifted to the side of the slaves of the Communist autocrats," he said.

Dr. Macae warned 1,300 churchmen from 43 nations attending the 3rd plenary Council of Christian Churches that "unless the Western nations stir themselves from their lethargy and proceed to use the temporary industrial and scientific advantage that is theirs and destroy Communism, there is nothing human to stop the Communist world revolution."

The Taming of Carney Wilde by BART SPICER

CHAPTER SEVENTEEN
That evening the doctor came to my room and told me: "I'm taking Russell in to the Paducah hospital. I think it might be best if you have X-rays taken. Since I'll have an ambulance for him, I hoped I might persuade you to go him."

"Not a chance," I said. "Why do you so eager to get rid of me?"

The doctor said: "I'm responsible for the welfare of passengers, and you need proper rest and medical care."

"I'm not sick," I said. "How is Russell?"

"All right, really. But I hate to see chances."

Then the captain came and I got of the bed, where I had been sitting.

"I brought your mail, Mr. Wilde," Jellicoe said. "And Mr. Jellicoe to see you."

The slim, dark man was about 6' I guess. He had a tight, nervous face with thin lips that smiled shy with an effort. He wore a dark suit, and they were worn with six air of resolute unobtrusiveness. That is a dead giveaway. The man was a cop, possible for me to see to your privacy for a few minutes, Mr. Wilde?" he said.

I took the telegraph company's envelope from Capt. Jellicoe and looked at it before I answered. "Well, now," Jellicoe said heartily. "I'm captain."

"What do you want, captain?" the young cop said.

"We want you to leave?"

"You don't mind," the captain said to himself and left.

"I see the buzzer," I said. "There was no surprise in the man's face. He brought out a small case and opened it. I didn't need more than one glance. I was numbly on the edge of the buzzer. I felt slightly sick. Cops didn't matter much, not local. But this thing a lot of people of J. Edgar's boys and he didn't have no interest in whether I got Stewart. Whatever I had, they would want. And he was."

"Just a minute," I said. I ripped it from Grodnick and read: "Working Sessions in Cincinnati. Trace of girl. Alarm out. FBI Alert."

When I looked up, the FBI man held out still another yellow envelope, this one with the back flap wide open. "He sent you another telegram. Naturally, we were interested."

This one read: "Howard Sessions not known in Cincinnati. References faded. Have asked Louisville to trace. FBI notified. Good luck." I folded them together and put them in a pocket. "You got here fast," I said.

He smiled and let it pass. "I wonder if you could come into town with me, Mr. Wilde?" he asked politely.

"For what?"

"A few questions. We'd like to get a statement."

"Can't you do it here?"

"Rather do it properly. If you don't mind. He smiled again, showing me nice white teeth, but no warmth.

"And if I do mind?"

"A little pointless now, isn't it?" He sat on the edge of a chair and looked at me solemnly. "As you said, we got here fast. Our Louisville office has been on the teletype all day to Philadelphia. I have a list of questions to ask. They'll take some time."

"If you know what's known in Philadelphia, you've got everything I know."

"We'll have to be sure of that," he said flatly. "I'd rather be nice about it, Mr. Wilde, but I'm afraid I'll have to insist."

I stood up.

"Okay, let's go."

I went with the FBI man. We rode in a taxi for a few blocks and stepped at a small one-story post-office building. The FBI man rang the night bell and we stood on the steps waiting for the watchman.

"Not the police station?" I asked.

"We can keep this pleasant, if you want," he said.

We went in and walked past a long row of gridded windows to a corner office. The FBI man had the key in his pocket. He opened the door, flipped on the lights and stood aside for me.

It was a barren room with a steel desk and a chair near the door, another desk with a padded swivel chair in the far corner. On the floor stood a small cowhide suitcase and a square blocky case covered in dark canvas.

The FBI man rolled the swivel chair out from behind the desk for me. Then he lifted the canvas case, unzipped the lid and raised it, displaying the double reels and simple controls of a tape recorder. "I can bring in a secretary if you prefer. Rather use this. Makes a quick and simple record."

"Good enough," I said. "Provided you keep it running all the time we're talking."

"What do you mean by that?"

"I don't want any editing done, not if you're planning on making official use of that tape."

A small, wiry smile tipped the corners of his lips. He didn't answer. He plugged in the power cord, switched on the motor and watched the brown tape begin threading slowly onto the empty reel. Then he attached a small universal microphone and balanced it on the desk in front of me. He pulled up a chair and leaned forward.

"Statement of Carney Wilde," he said, speaking very distinctly, private detective of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. Made to Malcolm Herbert, FBI special agent at Paducah, Kentucky, Tuesday, February 10, 1954. Statement made voluntarily with no element of coercion, no threats or promises of immunity. Will you confirm this statement, Mr. Wilde? But first your name and address for the record."

I stated my name and address. Then I got out a cigar and began the usual search for my lighter. "I cannot confirm," I added, "that implied threats were not used to bring me off the Dixie Dandy."

Herbert rose quietly, went to the recorder and switched it off. "We'd best get this straight," he said stiffly, with no heat. "The situation in Philadelphia was that you were wounded, and because you were not immediately available, our office did not question you about the robbery of the Jonas Herbert. So you could not be charged with deliberately withholding evidence. We don't know that you have withheld anything, but I'm going to find out. You are now being questioned by a special agent in official discharge of his duties. Refusal or unwillingness to supply information is a serious matter. The least that will happen is the loss of your license. And probably you would be prosecuted."

"And that doesn't constitute a threat?" I asked. I located my lighter and lit my cigar. "Put all that on your recorder, along with the sugary bit about no coercion."

"You're going to be difficult, Mr. Wilde," Herbert asked lightly.

"Not me," I said. "Ask your questions and get your answers. I'm not hiding anything. And from now on, leave that recorder running or I'm going to insist on a police stenographer."

"Very well," Herbert switched on the machine and sat down again. "Tell me everything you know about the Jonas robbery."

MCCARTHY PROBE GROUP BANS TV

SEN. ARTHUR V. WATKINS (R-Utah), who heads the 6-man Senate Committee to probe charges against Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy, tells reporters in Washington that the group voted to ban television and direct radio coverage of its sessions. Watkins said that he thought "it a fair assumption" that the hearings will not be held until the Senate completes its legislative program. Standing (left to right) are: Sen. John Stennis (D-Miss.) and Sen. Francis Case (R-S. D.), both members of the special committee. (International Soundphoto)

FIRST VERTICAL TAKEOFF

ITS SIX-BLADED PROPELLER in full lift, the U. S. Navy's Convair XPY-1 climbs straight up from runway at Moffett Naval Air Station, Calif. This is the first time a fighter plane has ever taken off vertically. A main use of this plane would be in convoy protection, since it could take off from a cargo ship deck. It rests on its X-shaped tail assembly. (International Soundphoto)

MILK VENDING

We want to thank the Calloway Mfg. Company for allowing us to install A MILK VENDING MACHINE in their factory.

The management did not have to be "sold" on the idea, they said, "We are for anything that will be beneficial to our employees and the dairy farmers of this county."

We are grateful to their employees for their patronage of this machine.

Milk vending is a new venture in Murray, and for that matter, in this section of the state.

This first machine is an experiment. If it proves successful, we will approach other factories and schools in Murray about placing more machines. All this is an effort to increase the consumption of milk and thereby furnish a market for more Grade A Milk for our dairy farmers.

SECOND 'JOE MUST GO' TRY

LEROY GORE, the Sauk City, Wis., editor who heads the "Joe Must Go Club," meaning recall movement against Senator Joseph McCarthy (R), Wisconsin, shows in Washington a collection of petitions said to carry some 300,000 signatures against the senator. This is Gore's second recall movement, to culminate after the November elections, McCarthy's seat is not up for decision this year, however. (International)

Take Boy Fishing And Save Time

BBY HARMAN W. NICHOLS, United Press Staff Correspondent WASHINGTON (AP)—Art Brown's philosophy is this: "If you take a boy fishing, you don't have to hunt for him." Art, a local radio-disc-jockey and TV character WWDC, practices what he preaches every time he has a day off. "Take those kids out, give 'em a reel and a rod and a chance to tangle with a blue fish or even a perch," he told me, "and you won't have any trouble with them. They'll stay out of the jailhouse and off the streets." Love Kids Art and his wife, Bertha, have no children of their own, but they love kids and forever are doing things for them. The radio man does a lot of work with youngsters and when he takes a bunch of them for an outing he calls on the police boys clubs or other groups interested in youngsters for a quorum. The word has gotten around and there is a waiting list for any old boatful. "Get a boy interested and you keep him on a straight line," he said. "They're all good boys, but it is important for them to acquire a hobby early in life. Get 'em to learn to love the outdoors." Take Bobby Vines, a 12-year-old from a little town in Maryland. He was a guest of Art's on a recent trip. "I had him in a boat less than 20 minutes and made a spin fisherman of him," Art said. "I taught him how to hold his gear and how to cast it. The lad is hooked with a fine hobby." Brown loves fishing and is an expert at wetting a line himself. On his TV show each Wednesday night he tells the fisherman of the area where the fish are biting and what lure to use. And he puts in a good natured plug, usually, for the sports store he owns. This Brown fellow spins platters, spins yarns, and is one of the best organists in the country. And he loves horses. "As a matter of fact," he told me, "I've got a little filly we plan to call 'Spinnette' on account of her as a 2-year-old next year. Like to have my colors 'solid brown.' Get it?"
