Army Stresses Importance Of High School

The Army is stressing the importance of a high school education in a training program which now offers qualified high school graduates a very special opportunity to obtain a college of technical training in one of the Army's branches. The Army's advanced techniques make possible the obtaining of the superior "C" as a college graduate.

There is a high school education and diploma. A high school graduate now has the opportunity to take advantage of more than 100 courses in the reserved for program from which he can choose the course in which he is most interested according to his qualifications and desires.

In addition to the educational benefits available to the young man with a diploma, the Army offers permanent jobs for those who want them, a complete medical and medical care program, survivor's benefits, retirement benefits and 30 days vacation with pay each year, and many other advantages.

For further information on the "Reserved for You" program contact Sergeant Perry at the Post Office in Murray each Monday and Thursday.

WORLD WEEK

Hans Brinker Failed To Stir Ewald; Omnibus Is Stuff

By WILLIAM EWALD
United Press Staff Correspondent
NEW YORK — It's hard to be either for or against something like Sunday's NBC-TV re-run of the spectacular "Hans Brinker." In fact, it's hard to be anything about it since its chief characteristic was blandness.

I must admit at the start that I'm a bit of a show, about the show. My principal interest, quite frankly, is waiting for someone to fall down and go boom. As far as I'm concerned, one figure eight is pretty much like another (unless it's being done in Roman numerals) and an ice show is as successful as its performers who wind up horizontally.

Frank Kitten Charm
Any way, back at the icehouse, "Hans Brinker" had what I guess you could call a kind of frost-bitten charm. The settings and costumes were fetching (partly because in color) and the tunes were about what everybody has come to expect in a TV spectacular — limp and inoffensive. I suspect all songs for spectacles are composed with a checked noodle etched into a blob of caramel.

Like the songs, almost everyone in the cast was inoffensive. Tab Hunter, Peggy King and Dick Button, among them. Only Carmen Matthews and Basil Rathbone brought any real style to the piece, each of them displaying short roles with elegant foolishness, just the approach needed for this sort of thing. Opera star Jarmila Novotna also was on hand, but didn't do much singing. I suppose that Callas stuff is catching.

Hunter did sing a lot and "George Does The Work At Argonne" was a weekly evening show on ABC-TV March 20. Marguerite Piazza has withdrawn as guest from the CBS-TV Victor stage spec on Feb. 19 — Miss Piazza's mother died.

CBS-TV is casting a new show, "Philip Marlowe." Bud Collyer will take a one-week vacation from his CBS-TV chore starting Feb. 24 — Sonny Fox will emcee "Beat the Clock" and John Cameron Swayze will take over "To Tell the Truth."

Gina Lollobrigida is back in as guest on the Feb. 13 "Pat Boone Show" — last week ABC-TV announced she was out. "Long-on-the-air" replaces "The Arlene Francis Show" on NBC-TV Feb. 24. Mike Wallace takes off for Hollywood this week to shoot the pilot film of "Motive," the ABC-TV dramatic show Wallace will host.

LAFAYETTE COACH QUILTS
EASTON, Pa. — Steve Hokus, Lafayette College head football coach, has resigned after a six-year tenure to seek an administrative position in teaching. Under his direction the school team scored 23 wins and 21 defeats. He is 47 years old and holds a doctorate in education.

Chinese Students Sent To Farms

By WENDELL S. MERICK
United Press Staff Correspondent
HONG KONG — One problem is leading to another for the Chinese Communists. Because of shortages of teachers and schools, and the need for more hands on farms, the Peiping regime has shipped three million students to rural areas. It was the penalty for low grades in school.

To bolster this work force, government and Communist Party functionaries who have not displayed the proper understanding of China's socialist movement, also are being sent to farms to lend a hand. The basic problem is one of food. Natural disasters and inefficient planning have slowed the country's food production. And until that production rises sharply, China's industrial program can not speed ahead.

So down to the farms have gone those who have little to contribute elsewhere. Apparently they are there to stay. Not Happy
Said the Peiping People's Daily:
"What is more important is to enable them (the students) to take root, bloom and bear fruit in the countryside."
The students have not taken to farm work.

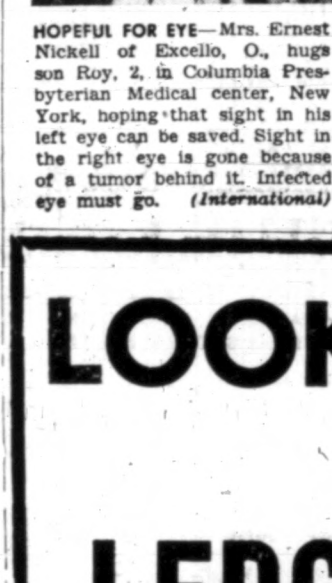

According to information received from many places, the People's Daily said, "there are those students who, up to the moment, are far from satisfied. Hence, we should pay attention to strengthening ideological, political education among (those) students."
Then there are the functionaries (cadres) who have been sent out to be "familiarized" Hai Chung-hsun, secretary general of the State Council (cabinet), reported that "the transfer of cadres to lower levels of physical training is a new problem." He added that "more than 20,000 cadres have been transferred to lower levels."

Mrs. Stubblefield Speaks To H'makers On Growing Roses

Mrs. Bill Stubblefield gave the lesson on "Growing Roses" at a recent meeting of the Cherry Corner Homemakers Club held in the home of Mrs. N. A. Ezell.

Mrs. Stubblefield told the group that anyone could grow roses with a little time and effort. She remarked that the most popular kinds of roses are Bush, Hybrid Tea, Floribunda, Climber, and Rambler. When buying roses, she said, remember the northern grown roses are better adapted for this climate. The culture of roses was explained and Mrs. Stubblefield urged members to keep them well pruned. When cutting roses for the home the first year they should be cut with short stems the next year, cut between the third and fifth leaf cluster; the more you cut flowers the better they do, she said.

The hostess served refreshments in keeping with the Valentine motif to six members and three children. Mrs. Pat Coleman presided at the meeting and Mrs. Ezell read Psalms 23:1-18 for the devotion.

The next meeting will be March 4, at 10:30 a. m. in the home of Mrs. W. D. McCusker. The lesson will be Modern Food Preparation in Oven and Refrigerator. Visitors are always welcome.

Ma's tired of staying home so I thought we'd go into town to dance. I pulled the buggy out to the lean-to, then got out the harness horses. Mrs. Stubblefield Speaks To H'makers On Growing Roses

Mrs. Bill Stubblefield gave the lesson on "Growing Roses" at a recent meeting of the Cherry Corner Homemakers Club held in the home of Mrs. N. A. Ezell.

Mrs. Stubblefield told the group that anyone could grow roses with a little time and effort. She remarked that the most popular kinds of roses are Bush, Hybrid Tea, Floribunda, Climber, and Rambler. When buying roses, she said, remember the northern grown roses are better adapted for this climate. The culture of roses was explained and Mrs. Stubblefield urged members to keep them well pruned. When cutting roses for the home the first year they should be cut with short stems the next year, cut between the third and fifth leaf cluster; the more you cut flowers the better they do, she said.

The hostess served refreshments in keeping with the Valentine motif to six members and three children. Mrs. Pat Coleman presided at the meeting and Mrs. Ezell read Psalms 23:1-18 for the devotion.

The next meeting will be March 4, at 10:30 a.m. in the home of Mrs. W. D. McCusker. The lesson will be Modern Food Preparation in Oven and Refrigerator. Visitors are always welcome.

INCOME TAX FAX

Kentucky Society of Public Accountants, an affiliate of the National Society of Public Accountants

Do you receive meals and lodging from your employer?

Under the code, chances are good they are income tax free to you, as the code says:

"There shall be excluded from gross income of an employee the value of any meals or lodging furnished to him by his employer for the convenience of the employer, but only if—

(1) in the case of meals, the meals are furnished on the business premises of the employer, or

(2) in the case of lodging, the employee is required to accept such lodging on the business premises of his employer as a condition of his employment.

In determining whether meals or lodging are furnished for the convenience of the employer, the provisions of an employment contract or of a State statute fixing terms of employment shall not be determinative of whether the meals or lodging are intended as compensation."

This seems to clearly indicate that if you receive meals on the business premises of your employer that they are not taxable income to you, regardless of any employment contract or union agreement to the contrary.

This also seems to clearly indicate that the fair rental value of lodgings furnished to you are not taxable income to you, regardless of any contract to the contrary, if you are required by your employer to actually live at the site of your job. For instance, an apartment house manager's apartment, a chauffeur's or caretaker's cottage, etc. The Social Security tax

APPROVE BASES

ROME — The Italian Chamber of Deputies overwhelmingly approved the government's firm pro-Western policy Wednesday night and rejected a Communist resolution against American missile bases in Italy. Only the Communists and left-wing Socialists opposed a motion supporting the NATO-oriented stand of Premier Adone Zoli's government.

LIGHT OF HIS LIFE—Gary Newell, 3, looks into his mother's eyes as she sees him for the first time with full vision in their Boston, Mass., home. Mrs. Newell recently underwent an eye-tissue transplant surgery, made possible by the Boston Eye Bank. Out of gratitude for his wife's recovery, John Newell will his eyes to the Bank.

JAMES KEENE'S powerful new novel JUSTICE, MY BROTHER!

C H A P T E R 30
AFTER SUPPER, I walked out past the barn and watched the sunset. Edna came out and stood on the edge of the porch. She saw me and died. "Will you hitch on the buggy, Smoke? Ma's sure of staying home so I thought we go into town to the dance." I pulled the buggy out of the barn. They hadn't been harnessing for a few days and were fit as Old Nick out. I shouldered them between the traces and hooked up. Ma had put on her velvet dress and a hat, and the ridiculous hat. As always, I helped her into the buggy and Edna took the reins when I handed them to her.

"I wish you wouldn't mope around here. Smoke?" Ma said. "Luther may come back. I said, 'You go on, Ma. Have a good time.'"

She bent and patted my cheek. "You're such a good boy, Smoke."

I stood there while they drove from the yard, then went over to the porch and sat down. Luther said the only way to be kissed was my stilt on now was that I didn't want to face Julie Hageman after shooting off my mouth.

Night came in quiet and fast. The wind began to pick up, scattering dust along, banging a loose stall door in the barn. Time passed slow when a man is alone. I sat for hours and they seemed like days. Once I went inside to look at the hitching post; a quarter after ten, then, once more I took my place on the porch.

A faint sound coming from the direction of the river pulled my attention up sharp and I sat perfectly still, listening. Then I heard it again. Two horses, and the crack of a buggy. I saw the rig moving toward the yard, and I stepped away from the house.

I recognized Julie Hageman before she saw me, and when she did, she seemed startled because she suddenly sawed on the reins. I held the nervous horses for a moment, then stepped to the off wheel. I could see that she had on a light-colored dress, the kind with a lot of ruffles, and from beneath the hem lace petticoats peeked out.

She said, "I waited, Smoke, but you didn't come."

"I didn't think I'd be welcome."

"We both said things we shouldn't have," Julie said. "Smoke, I just can't stay mad at you."

"You seemed mad at Everett's place when he pretended, but I can't do that with either. She looked at me and waited. Well, are you going to take me to the dance or not?"

"Give me ten minutes," I said and ran toward the house.

Some people would say that a man can't take a cold water bath, change his clothes and slick his hair in ten minutes, but I'll tell you what I did it in eight.

Julie gave the reins to me once I'd hopped aboard and I whipped her light buggy around and drove from the yard. I didn't say anything for a while, not that I didn't have anything on my mind, but I was trying not to put my foot in my mouth again. Yet man-can't drive all the way to town without saying something.

"I'm glad shipping's over."

"I'm glad I got up the nerve to come across the river," she said.

"Huh?" I stared at her.

"Smoke, can you forget the schoolgirl things I said?"

"Didn't sound schoolgirlish to me," I said.

She reached across and took the reins, pulling the span to a halt. "Smoke, you kissed me the other night, but not the way you wanted to. You kissed me like you thought I wanted to be kissed. She wrapped the reins around the whip socket and took her hands and placed them on her waist.

"Now, I want you to kiss me like you want to."

Whatever folks have said about me, one thing they all know is that I don't need a lot of urging. I'll never forget how soft she felt in my arms, or how her lips answered me in a way I'd always wanted them to answer. My experience with women was limited, sure enough, but I could tell that I'd made an impression. Her eyes had a bright shine in their depths and her smile was for me alone.

"Smoke," she said, "are there really Indian squaws who kiss better than I do?"

The best way to make women shut up, I had just discovered, was to kiss them, which I did. Her arms knickered my hat off and I liked to choke me, but can you name a better way to die? When I released her, I said, "Don't you worry about any other woman, Julie."

I unwrapped the reins and drove on. She put her arm through mine and laid her head against my shoulder. An' that's the way we drove to Ponca City, only it took a little longer than usual because I had to stop three or four times to see if that kiss had lost anything. It hadn't.

The Grange Hall was bright with light and music floated toward us as we tied up in the lot behind. I helped Julie down and we started for the hall. She looked at me and waited. "Wait! I forgot my box lunch." She hurried back to the rig to get it.

"What kind of a ribbon do you have on?" I asked.

"Blue. Are you going to end on it, Smoke?"

"You're darned tootin'! I am! You think I want some other tea dancing with my girl all night?"

Something I said there had the kind of effect I liked, she stepped close to me and pressed her lips against my cheek. I took her hand and we went on in.

The dance had been under way for nearly two hours. Ma and Edna were there and Edna was dancing with Bill Hageman. Julie spoke briefly to Ma, then took her box lunch to a luncheonette's table at the end of the hall. I followed her, moving easy through the crowd. People spoke to me, farmers and townfolk, I saw Vince Randolph and two other farmers by the refreshment table. When I nodded to Randolph, he waved and smiled.

Julie and I swung onto the floor and for the next half-hour time sort of got lost for me. When the set was finished, I got her a glass of punch, turned down a smart of stronger stuff, and took her outside. We sat on a bench under the trees and listened to the noise of people at peace. At the Grange affairs, they sort of put aside their likes and dislikes and to hear them you'd never suspect they were hog-poor and full of trouble.

"I don't see your brothers," Julie said.

"They'll likely show up," I told her. The music began again and I got up, pulling her to her feet. "That's too good to waste," I said. Julie and I whirled about and forgot about everything, except having a good time. By the time this set ended, people were beginning to notice that we always danced together and some talk was buzzing around. We didn't care, but wagging tongues can make up a lot of stories, and to cut some of them short, Julie left me and went over to where the ladies stood in matronly splendor. I needed for Vince Randolph, who stood against the wall sipping his fruit punch. When I sidled him, he said, "You're having a good time, Smoke."

"That's sure gospel," I said. "Where's Wade Everett?"

"Higgins stopped off before dark," Randolph said. "Wade told him he'd be here."

By chance I happened to be looking at the side door when my brother Cord stepped in. . .

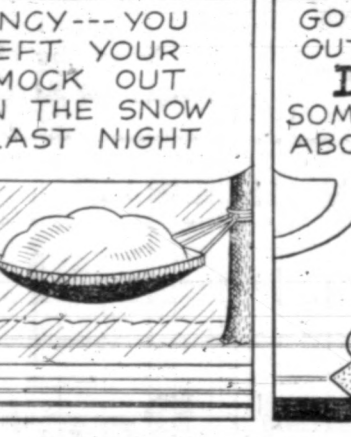

"Someone in this hall is a cattle rustler!" Cord declares. "I want it passed around that I mean to catch that man!" The story continues here tomorrow.
