Frank Clement Named Governor By Tennesseans

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Frank G. Clement, his vote-getting ability still as sharp as his speech-making, won the Democratic governorship nomination in Thursday's primary, practically assuring him the office for a third time.

Frank G. Clement

Clement, 10 years older at 42 than when he first was elected governor in 1952, trounced two major opponents, Chattanooga mayor P. R. Oligatti and Memphis City Commissioner William Faris.

With returns in from 2,536 of the state's 2,695 precincts, Clement had 285,705 votes to 190,278 for Oligatti and 185,561 for Faris.

That was about 40 per cent of the vote in a state that does not have a runoff law.

Democratic nomination is practically the same as election in Tennessee. There has been talk of the Republican party running retired Tennessee Valley Authority Chairman Gen. Herbert Vogel in November.

Hoyt Roberts Is President Of Civitans

Hoyt Roberts was elected president-elect of the Murray Civitan Club at a dinner meeting last night at Triangle Inn. The club has a new policy of electing presidents one year in advance and Roberts will not take office until July 1st of next year. Jerald Garrett is the current president.

The club will install a new chain link fence around the playground of the School of New Hope on South Sixteenth.

Hardeman Nix introduced Gene Landolt, president of the Jaycees, and Z. C. Enix, president of the Murray-Calloway County Fair Board. Both Landolt and Enix expressed their appreciation to the Civitans for their help during the fair.

They attributed the success of the fair this year to the help given the Jaycees by other service clubs and individuals. Landolt told the club that the fair grounds should be regarded as being for the community, rather than just the Jaycees. Anyone wishing to use the property may contact his club. Landolt stated, Ralph Bogard was welcomed in to the club as a new member. Other guests present were Lt. Gov. Bill Scott from Princeton, and Bill Crouch and Joe Puryear from Paris.

New Device To Aid X-15 Distance Flights

EDWARDS AFB, Calif. (UPI) — Veteran test pilot Joe Walker, impressed by his first checkout of the X-15's ingenious electronic brain, was convinced today "it can take the ship as high as we want to go."

Walker making his initial test in the No. 3 version of the rocketship Thursday overcame a stability problem which will lead to future flights to possibly as high as 100 miles in space.

Scientists said Walker's flight corrected "excessive yaw"—side-sway motion — unexpectedly encountered by Air Force Maj. Bob White in his epic X-15 climb last month to a world airplane record of nearly 60 miles.

The device which controls such movement, known as the yaw dampener, was readjusted by engineers before Walker's test to its lightest point yet—a slim 1 degree. The flight proved the No. 3 ship, the same one in which White became America's first winged astronaut, had regained its stability.

The yaw dampener is part of the unique automatic control system which helps guide the pilot through space sensing conditions surrounding the X-15 and instantly making necessary flight adjustments.

The two other versions of the X-15, No. 1 and 2, have older preset controls less suited for high altitude flying. Walker said the automatic system in the No. 3 ship reacted "much faster."

Stability plays a crucial role in all phases of X-15 flights, but particularly in the reaches of space where the rocketship has a dangerous tendency to yaw because of the lack of atmosphere.

Two Men Seconds From Death Yesterday

By JOHN D. KENDALL
United Press International
PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI) — Two men were seconds from death Thursday. One a hostage — the other the embittered man with an injured back who held the pistol.

For 12 1/2 hours an unemployed steamfitter held a gun to the head of an attorney. At the same time, an expert rifleman was poised — ready to end the life of Charles E. Milligan, the steamfitter.

But death was made unnecessary when two cunning policemen posing as reporters overpowered the stocky 50-year-old steamfitter.

A hearing into Milligan's industrial compensation case was just getting started when he pulled the gun from a small box.

Grabbed For Gun
His attorney, Stephen Gorey shouted: "No, no, Milligan."

Gorey grabbed for the gun, but the floors were slippery and he staggered. The gun went off. The next thing Gorey remembered, he was lying on the floor. He had been shot in the left thigh.

Milligan allowed him to be taken to a hospital but forced the other six in the room to remain to conduct a hearing into his case.

Police could have killed Milligan anytime they chose. But they were afraid the gun he held next to the head of attorney D. J. Morgan Jr. may have discharged on the firing range.

Five of the six hostages were not allowed to leave the room. The sixth left for water, but went back. It was the only nourishment the seven men involved in the case had during the steamfitter's compensation had the entire day.

Went In Unarmed
Detective Earl Moore and Don Rodriguez went into the room posing as newsmen. Milligan finally allowed five hostages to go, but kept his pistol against the head of the courageous Morgan.

Rodriguez and Moore were unarmed. Rodriguez began to question Milligan as if he were a reporter.

During the conversation, Milligan pointed the gun at Moore while reaching for a glass of water. Rodriguez grabbed the steamfitter's right arm and forced it down and Moore joined the struggle to subdue him. One shot was fired before Milligan was hustled from the third floor chamber.

He was charged with assault with a deadly weapon.

Plans Readied For Stove Plant Sales Meeting

Plans are being quickly readied for the national sales meeting of the Tappan Company which will be held here in Murray next Monday and Tuesday.

Robert Wynan, General Manager of the plant said yesterday that the original idea was to have only one division of the company to come to Murray for a meeting, then this grew to two more divisions, until finally it was decided to have nine of the twelve Tappan divisions of the nation to come to Murray.

The two day meeting will be held on Monday and Tuesday, with sales personnel, district managers and territory representatives arriving in Murray from all directions. They will come from almost all points of the nation including the south, midwest, east and the New England states.

The two day sales meeting will include such topics as sales and marketing problems, and demonstrations and attending personnel will have a first hand look at production, engineering, quality control and the scheduling operations and procedures.

A tour of the local plant will also be held so that all sales personnel can see the Tappan gas ranges develop along the assembly lines.

In February 1968 such a meeting was held in Murray with sales personnel coming to Murray in three groups during a six day period. The discussions, demonstrations and tours were repeated for each of the three groups.

According to the United States Office of Education, the salaries of public school teachers have risen from an estimated $325 in 1900 to an estimated $3,195 in 1960.

He urged the continued support of the college by the people of this area and asked for better support for the drama and music productions which are offered on the campus.

Visiting Rotarians were Turley Stewart of Paris, Tennessee, and Gene Gilliam of Mayfield. Dr. Mathewson of Paducah was a guest of Dr. Ralph Tessenier.

Next Thursday the Rotary Club meeting will be given to a welcome to returning Calloway reservists in the 100th. Division, 349th. Civil Affairs Company of Paducah, and a national Guard unit.

The returning service men will be guests of the Chamber of Commerce and their meals will be paid for by the Chamber. Members of other clubs in the city will also attend the dinner meeting. The Rotary meeting is being used as the time at which the men will be recognized for their service to the county, state and nation. County Judge Robert O. Miller will give the principal address.

Murray Grads Do Well, Dr. Woods Reports

Dr. Ralph Woods spoke to the Murray Rotary Club yesterday on the worth of the college to the area and the standing of its students who graduate.

He told the club that 3681 students enrolled at Murray State last fall and some increase in this number was anticipated this year. Last fall the college experienced an increase of 21 per cent. Dr. Woods told the Rotarians, however the increase this year is not expected to be that high.

The president of the college told the Rotary Club that Murray State graduates have reflected well on the training which they receive at the college. This year eight graduates were offered assistantships in universities of the nation with remunerations from $2200 to $4400. Eddie Wells of Murray received an assistantship at Cornell at $4400 a year.

The college did not have enough graduates to fill all the agriculture positions offered, he said. Twenty one positions could not be filled because of the lack of enough graduates in this field.

Five of the top ten graduates of the University of Louisville, School of Medicine were graduates of Murray State College, he continued.

He commented on the effort of the college to give a solid foundation to the students in the various fields of endeavor. This year seven persons will teach history at the college and all have their PhD degree.

He urged the continued support of the college by the people of this area and asked for better support for the drama and music productions which are offered on the campus.

Visiting Rotarians were Turley Stewart of Paris, Tennessee, and Gene Gilliam of Mayfield. Dr. Mathewson of Paducah was a guest of Dr. Ralph Tessenier.

THE DARK RIDER

A Racing Novel of Suspense by GERALDINE TRAYER

CHAPTER 15

THE MOMENT she awoke in the morning, Julie Pendleton felt the restlessness that was to pursue her all day.

The Kentucky Derby was now only a few hours more than one day away and she blamed the feeling on that. And on the party at the Fabian farm, when she'd left shortly after midnight, though she had known it would go on until almost dawn.

It hadn't been the successful party she'd imagined it would be. The moment that Casey Jeffries left her and walked out of the house, the excitement waned.

Of course, if Casey had remained—but then she was marrying Britt Fabian and not Casey, so there was no reason why she should have missed him. Yet she had, even though she resented every thought about him that came to her mind. Even Della recognized her mood and had no comment or questions.

Julie Pendleton had already driven into town on business, so Julie ate a solitary breakfast and afterward felt at loose ends when she wandered out toward the stables.

It was a warm morning, the roses, in tight bud, might open a bit in time for the race. The sky was a bright blue, cloudless and promising to answer favorably the prayers of every racing fan that tomorrow would be a beautiful day.

The green fields tempted her, so Julie ordered one of the boys to saddle a slow-gaited mare. This was no day to run Big Blue or go flying over the pasture land on a younger, more eager horse. She merely wanted to ride out where there'd be no telephone, no way to reach her. Soon enough she'd be getting all the phone calls a newly engaged girl expects. It should have been, very exciting, but somehow it was not. She couldn't even arouse her usual enthusiasm over the Derby.

The sunlight and air were exhilarating; the plodding of her slow horse was exactly right and she headed toward the race track between the farms.

There, on the same knoll where she'd seen that strange horse being run like the wind, she stopped and dismounted.

The sound of a motor reached her from a great distance because of the early-morning stillness and she could see Casey Jeffries car moving rapidly toward her along the private road. She had an impulse to rush to where her horse grazed, mount and ride deep into the pasture where the car couldn't follow.

She refused to surrender to the impulse. To have done so would have been a childish act, an admission that she didn't trust herself in the presence of this man, even while she was now formally engaged to another. So she stood there waiting for him, realizing that her heart pounded too fast, that there was in her an eagerness to see him and hear his voice.

He braked the car gradually, pulled out to the side of the road and unlatched his long frame from the narrow space in the old car.

"Good morning," he said cheerfully.

She nodded. "Hello, Casey. I didn't expect you this morning. Have you appointed yourself my guardian?"

"No—it hasn't come to that yet, Julie. I do think you're foolish to ride out alone anywhere in view of what happened. I have another reason for being here."

"How did you know where to find me?"

"Quite simple. I was sneaking around again. I show no favoritism when I'm scuffling. The Fabian Farm or the Pendleton Farm—I get around both."

She wished he wouldn't stand quite so close, wouldn't stare weren't quite such a look of earnestness in his eyes.

"I'm sorry, Casey, but I have to go back to the house—"

"Aren't you interested in why I got up at the crack of dawn and drove out here to see you?"

"I—don't think I am."

"That's too bad," he said seriously, "because I'll tell you anyway. I don't intend to let you marry Britt."

"Julie felt a slow anger rise within her. Casey was presumptuous, egotistical and downright annoying and it was about time she was put in her place. Perhaps then he'd give her some peace of mind.

"And that," she said, "about concludes your welcome here, Mr. Jeffries. Last night you heard my engagement to Britt announced. Any gentleman would concede the fact that I've made up my mind."

"Trouble is," he said, "I don't think you have."

"What must I do, Casey—have I written on the side of the barn?"

"You might try to convince me so I'd never doubt again."

She turned away from him quickly. "If there were—the slightest reason why I should—"

His hand touched her shoulder, drew her toward him, but she didn't turn her head. He spoke softly, his lips close to her ear.

"There's one reason I know of. I'm in love with you. I want to marry you. Isn't that enough? I haven't had a real chance to fight for you, to tell you about myself—"

Now she did turn, very quickly. "It's a little late for that, Casey, but you finally have succeeded in arousing my interest. Go on—tell me about yourself."

His smile was apologetic. "I'm sorry. There's actually nothing to tell."

"I thought not," she said. "What are you hiding, Casey?"

"Certainly not the way I feel about you. Somehow I don't think that announcement last night was your idea. You'd want your father to make the announcement, not Britt's."

"Nonsense," she said. "Everyone knew Britt and I would marry soon. The announcement was mere formality and it didn't make the slightest difference where or when it was made or by whom. Just because we like tradition doesn't mean we're sticklers for propriety. You have no right to question it, or to interfere. You haven't even the right to hate Britt."

"But I don't hate him. I simply don't want you to marry him."

She sighed deeply. "All right, Casey. I'm going to tell you why I picked Britt. I'll tell you exactly how I feel—if, when I finish, you promise to go away and not come back."

"If you convince me, you have my word."

"In the first place," she said, "you concerned yourself over what happened the night of the country club dance when I saw a horse running around that very track down there."

"True—and I'm still concerned."

"That night someone who knew Dad was North and I was at the dance simply took a horse to the private track and timed him. That's all there was to it."

"And I suppose whoever used your track without permission then trapped you in the stall with Big Blue after killing the animal. I suppose this same person turned a dry jump into a water jump so Big Blue would throw you. Julie, anyone who merely stole the use of the track wouldn't go to such ends."

"In fact both incidents can be explained. I don't know exactly how, but I'm sure there's a name. You're not going to frighten me, Casey."

Casey has a warning for Julie. Continue the story here tomorrow.

URGE JOB CUTS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Council of State Chambers of Commerce has suggested that some government job vacancies should go unfilled to help give a pay raise to federal employees. The council said in a statement Sunday that by reducing the government's work force through normal attrition and rigidly limiting the number of new jobs, the cost of a modest pay hike would be defrayed.

RED EXTEND PLANS

CINCINNATI, Ohio (UPI) — The Cincinnati Reds have extended plans to train at Tampa, Fla., through the spring of 1963. New facilities will be added to permit the Cincinnati club and its minor league affiliates to train at the same camp.

REED SEEDS FIRST

SOUTH ORANGE, N. J. (UPI) — Whitney Reed of Alameda, Calif., and Wimbledon champion Karen Hantze Susman of San Antonio, Tex., have been seeded first in their respective divisions for Monday's opening of the Eastern Grass Courts tennis championships.

BRIEF YOUNGSTER ABOUT HOSPITAL

URBANA, Ill. (UPI) — Children may react more favorably toward a hospital stay if they're accustomed for it in advance.

Mrs. Millicent Martin, child development specialist at the University of Illinois, says a child's idea of hospitalization may be different from that of an adult. Since children usually can't visit hospitals, it's especially important for parents to explain what to expect. The best preparation is for parents to visit the hospital or find out as many details as possible from the doctor. The child will want to know what will happen during the day, what his room will look like, the doctors and nurses will do, how he will feel, and, of course, if Mommy will be there.

Answer the child's questions truthfully, but simply and calmly. Telling him things in a humorous way helps to build up favorable impressions. Still another way to help: provide him with a picture book about children's experiences in the hospital. Let him help pack his things. Besides the necessities, include a few toys, books, and a favorite teddy bear or doll. Be sure you know what toys the hospital provides, if any, and what kind it permits.

DAY CLAIMS EXAGGERATION

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Postmaster General J. Edward Day said Sunday that magazine publishers had exaggerated the effect of a proposed postal rate increase on their operations.

Day, in a television interview said two-thirds of the cost some magazines said the bill would force them to pay actually would be for advertising mail to get new subscribers. He predicted Senate approval of the House-passed bill.

Superstition Strong Among Designers

By GAY PAULEY UPI Women's Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — When milliner designers say they're on pins and needles, they could be talking either about tension before the opening of their new collections or about superstitions which pervade their workrooms.

That designers are among the most superstitious persons in the apparel industry for some reason. None of them can explain why. But several, as they worked on their fall and winter designs to be shown to buyers and the press in early July, took time today to list some of the good and bad luck symbols of their trade.

Almost all agreed that a box of pins dropped on the floor means a good sales season. A hat dropped on the floor also will be a hit. But put a hat on a chair and no matter how attractive it is, it's a flop at the sales counter.

Hat On Chair "I nearly faint when I see someone put a hat on a chair," said Mrs. Sally Victor. Mrs. Victor also opens all of her fashion shows with a gray hat because her first hit collection began with that color. She also rips apart an old hat for the makings of at least one new one in her collection.

Mr. Fred, head of John Frederies, believes peacock feathers on a hat bring bad luck. The color green is evil. To try on a hat backwards is back luck, and one pin left in a hat after it is sewn, means the customer will return the hat.

To Mr. John, if the seamstress sticks her finger with a needle, the customer who buys the hat will be married soon.

The designer, Mr. Arnold, holds that if the women in the workroom toss pins at the designer before the opening of a collection, this will bring good luck, like throwing rice at a wedding. If a designer buys a new scissors, this means he or she will be in the business seven more years.

Must Duplicate To designer Emme, the sale of an original model means it must be duplicated before the original leaves the salon or that particular style never will be successful. Several milliners believe that a threaded needle never should be passed from one seamstress to the next without its first being placed in a pin cushion. Relaying the needle directly means the breaking of a friendship.

Don Marshall, who was a theatrical designer before he turned to hat making, doesn't like to hear whistling in the workrooms. This, he said, is like the actor's not believing in whistling in a dressing room, because it brings bad luck.

To Marshall, the box of pins dropped on the floor means a rush of orders, and to the girls in his workrooms, a pair of scissors dropped with the point toward one means a pink slip in her pay envelope, as superstition goes.

Make your own place mats in any size and shape you wish, by cutting oil cloth shapes with pink-ing shears.

TWO TO BE HONORED

NEW YORK (UPI) — Two veteran National Leaguers will be honored at the Polo Grounds next month by the New York Mets. Stan Mustaf of the St. Louis Cardinals will be given a "night" on Friday, Aug. 17, and the Mets' own Gil Hodges will be honored on Friday, Aug. 24.
