CALLOWAY BOY WINNER, NATIONAL MEET

Snow Paralyzes Much Of Nation

FRANKFORT, Ky. (UPI) — Kentucky State Police warned today that roads in all parts of the state are icy and dangerous, six persons having died in two Western Kentucky accidents on slick highways Monday night.

Four Henderson, Ky., men were fatally injured when the car in which they were returning home from a Baptist church meeting at Clay, Ky., skidded on icy U. S. 41A at Dixon, Ky., and collided with another car.

The dead were listed as Forrest Jenkins, 60; James Wyne, 36; Rev. Alston McKinney, 50; and Rev. Rini M. Holman, 60.

Rev. Joseph Thomas Alvey, driver of the car, was injured. Jesse Montgomery, driver of the other car, was not seriously injured.

Edgar Thornton, 51, and Fleming Solomon Bloodworth, 29, both of College Park, Ga., died from injuries suffered about 11:30 p. m. (SCT), when Thornton's car skidded on ice on U. S. 45 near Wingo, in Graves County, and slid broadside into the front of an oncoming Greyhound bus.

One unidentified bus passenger was slightly hurt but driver Clayton McEae of Memphis, Tenn., escaped injury.

Avery Adkins, 30, of Jackson, Ky., was killed Monday when his car ran off Kentucky 110 near Haddix.

The seven fatalities brought the state's toll for the year to 747, compared with 638 through this date last year.

State police said that roads were slick and hazardous in all sections of the state, and that drivers were urged to use tire chains in the Harlan, Hazard and Richmond districts.

The icy condition of the roads kept schools closed again today in many eastern sections of the state, including Pike County, and also closed schools in Calloway, Ballard, Crittenden, Livingston, Lyon and Marshall counties.

The U. S. Weather Bureau at Louisville reported that Bowling Green, London and Pikeville each had three-inch accumulations of snow, while Louisville, Paducah and Evansville, Ind., each had about one inch, and Covington just a trace. Some areas in the eastern mountains still have much deeper accumulations left over from last week's snowstorm.

The weather bureau said that a reading of nine degrees above zero in Louisville at 8 a. m. (EST), was about typical of the rest of the state. Covington recorded an eight above reading.

More snow and temperatures near the zero point are predicted for Kentucky Wednesday and Thursday.

80 Kentuckians In Draft Call

FRANKFORT, Ky. (UPI) — Approximately 80 young Kentuckians will receive their draft notices for the Army in February, figures released Monday by the Defense Department indicated.

The 4,000-man draft call for the entire nation is the same as that for January, Selective Service officials said. A Washington spokesman said contrary to expectations draft calls will not rise until March.

Kentucky normally furnishes approximately 2 per cent of the total draft call.

The temporary increase in manpower will be to insure that the Army has trained replacements for the two-year draftees who were called up in the Berlin crisis of 1961 and will be leaving service next fall.

The February call is 2,000 fewer than this month's and the same as that for October and November.

Eight Feet Drifts

Drifts were as high as eight feet in town and hundreds of cars were abandoned by drivers. Twenty-eight snow plows were keeping most roads open.

Since the snow began falling Wednesday night, United Press International counted at least 76 weather-blamed deaths.

Ohio had 21 dead, Michigan 20, New England 10, New York 4, and Tennessee, West Virginia and Illinois 3 each.

Only emergency travel was recommended through northern Indiana. Southern Illinois also became hazardous today when up to three inches of snow fell.

Season's Coldest Weather

West of the Great Lakes, residents experienced the coldest weather of the season, and cold wave records appeared certain to be broken.

Chicago-early today had a temperature of two above, just one degree above the previous low for this date. Dickinson, N. D., had 12 below and it was 11 below at Minot, N. D., and the mercury was still sliding.

The 66-mile Lake Erie section of the New York State Thruway was closed to traffic Monday night when wind-shipped snow piled two feet deep.

The cold wave was expected to send temperatures into the 20s and 30s, in Florida and growers feared for the state's big winter vegetable crops.

Citrus belt farmers said their crop probably was safe, but they were taking precautionary measures.

Bone Chilling Cold Strikes

A bone chilling cold descended on Murray and Calloway County last night and with it came the snow. Starting at about 10:00 o'clock last night the snow continued at intervals during the night and Calloway residents woke this morning to find yards, fields and homes covered.

A total of 1.7 inches of snow fell during the night and snow flurries fell this morning and more is predicted for this evening and tonight.

All county schools including Calloway High failed to open today because of the snow and ice covered county roads. It is not known at this time whether they will open tomorrow or not. Forecasts of more cold and snow may prevent them from opening Wednesday.

Local motorists had their first taste of driving on slick pavement this winter and stalled cars, sliding cars, and cars with chains were a common sight today.

"They're All Dead - All 37" Is Cry From Deep In Mine

By LAWRENCE R. WERNER
United Press International

CHAMBERSBURG, Pa. (UPI) — The long agonizing wait was over. "They're dead—all 37."

The word came from deep inside an explosion-rattled passage way of Robena No. 3 mine late Monday night.

The dead count was complete. There would be no Christmas this year in many homes in the coal mining communities of Boon town, Mazonia, New Salem, Uniontown, McClellandtown, and Carmichaels.

The tragedy began about 1 p. m. EST, last Thursday.

A devastating explosion ripped through a section of the Froxy Run shaft near here. It snuffed out 37 lives. But for nearly five agonizing days, parents, wives and children lived in hope — and in vain.

The grief-stricken families, who had kept a long and silent vigil, filed out of the small depressing waiting room near the mouth of the deep, miles-long Froxy Run shaft upon learning that none of the miners had been found alive. There were few tears, but the wail and forlorn faces told of their emotions.

Reflects Prayerful Ordeal

Their silent grief reflected a prayerful ordeal undertaken in an abandoned, corrugated iron building nestled in the snow-covered hills of southwestern Pennsylvania.

Despite the evidence against survival, the rescue teams worked determinedly in the miners' tradition of never giving up hope until the last missing man is found.

Only the grim task of recovering the last bodies and identifying them remained. Identification was difficult because of the condition of the bodies.

Dr. Dave Fingle, a U.S. Steel Corp. physician, and Green County Coroner Frank J. Behm said their findings showed the cause of death of the men whose bodies were brought to the surface was the "immense force of the explosion."

"Death was instantaneous," the two men said.

Begin Tedious Search

In a matter of hours after the explosion, rescue teams entered the gas-filled shaft to begin the long tedious search for the trapped men.

Additional teams, gathered to aid the probe under constant danger from deadly methane gas, possible roof falls and the chance of another explosion.

The 24 rescue members were aided constantly by 75 to 80 volunteers.

Hope for the survival of the 37 trapped miners dimmed steadily as the long rescue effort progressed and then ended with the

Four Injured In Frosty Air Jump

AVON PARK, Fla. (UPI) — Two reinforced rifle companies of the 82nd Airborne Division staged a mass parachute jump onto a frost-covered field here today in a reaction test of the nation's brush-fire warfare force. Four persons were injured.

The ground commander, Lt. Col. Kenneth C. Duell of Lagonia, Pa., suffered a broken ankle when he jumped with 460 other paratroopers. Command was taken over by Capt. Alton B. Parker, Lumberton, N. C.

Sgt. Abraham McElmore of Charlotte, N. C., was shaken up when another soldier landed on top of his chute about 60 feet from the ground, spilling most of the air and causing a faster than normal drop to earth.

Spec. 4 David Zirkelback, Anderson, Ind., suffered a twisted ankle and Pfc. William Johnson of Baltimore, Md., sustained a knee injury.

A piece of heavy equipment, a self-propelled anti-tank weapon, was destroyed when it broke loose. The men jumped 13 hours after they were alerted at their home base of Fort Bragg, N. C.

Missionary Will Speak Sunday At Christian Church

Mrs. Ralph T. Palmer, Indianapolis, former missionary to Japan, will speak Sunday at 10:30 a. m. at the First Christian Church in observance of the church's annual Woman's Day.

On Woman's Day the women of the First Christian Church lead the worship service and have charge of the choir.

Mrs. Palmer with her husband served in Japan in evangelism and church development from 1922-1936. In 1937 her husband was appointed executive secretary of the Department of Missionary Selection and Training of the United Christian Missionary Society with central offices in Indianapolis, Ind.

Currently Mrs. Palmer, an ordained minister, is making speaking engagements throughout the country.

In Japan Mrs. Palmer helped with the church schools and carried on social welfare work and evangelism among the women and children and especially among the young people.

A native of Harrison, Arkansas, she grew up at Quann and Dallas, Texas, and received the degree of B. A. in Christian Education, psychology and sociology and M. A. in education from Texas Christian University at Fort Worth. She also attended the Divinity School of Yale University, New Haven, Conn.

The public is cordially invited to hear Mrs. Palmer Sunday at 10:30 a. m.

Charles Eldridge Winner Of The Farm Bureau Talk Meet

A young Calloway County man won the Talk Meet at the national meeting of the American Farm Bureau yesterday, competing against regional winners from the rest of the United States.

Charles Eldridge, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Leroy Eldridge, won the top prize in the meeting of the Farm Bureau in Atlanta, Georgia.

He moved to the semi-final ranks when he won the Southern Region championship, competing with speakers from thirteen southern states.

He was one of four semi-finalists, each of whom was a regional winner in the Talk Meet.

Young Eldridge spoke on farm credit with the general topic of how the Farm Bureau can assist in the promotion of farm work.

Eldridge was the youngest of the group of speakers whose ages varied up to the age of 35, thus he competed with not only speakers of his own age, but adult men and women as well.

The Talk Meet was held on Sunday, and the finals in the speech contest were held on Monday.

Eldridge is a sophomore pre-medical student at Murray State College, and a member of Sigma Chi fraternity.

He has won many honors over the past several years in all phases of FFA work.

Young Eldridge has been an outstanding student during his school career, always making top grades. He has accumulated many many honors during his 4-H and FFA career.

One of his early honors was the Junior 4-H district speech title while S. V. Foy was in charge of 4-H work in the county. He continued his work in the area of speech and debate in high school.

The Lynn Grove School has released the honor roll for the second six weeks of study.

Racers Lose No Prestige In Defeat

Three of Kentucky's Ohio Valley Conference teams played outside the state Monday night, and all three lost, but Murray State suffered no loss of prestige as it held powerful Bradley to a 79-78 decision at Peoria, Ill.

Western Kentucky did not lose prestige, however, as the Hilltoppers lost a conference tilt to Middle Tennessee—a unanimous choice of coaches for the conference cellar—by a 96-82 score at Murfreesboro, Tenn.

Eastern Kentucky's Maroons, a pre-season pick to be a strong OVC contender, still was without a victory in three games after blowing an eight-point lead and losing a 63-59 decision at Toledo Monday night.

The Maroons now have met and been beaten by three Ohio college teams—Miami, Dayton and Toledo.

In other Kentucky college games, Georgetown netted five points in the final 32 seconds to edge Campbellsville, 78-76, and now has two victories over Campbellsville by a total of three points; and Centre downed Berea, 69-65, after trailing 36-35 at halftime.

It took a pair of free throws by Rich Donley in the final 15 seconds for unbeaten Bradley to hand Murray its first defeat, after the Thoroughbreds had cut a Bradley lead down to one point at 77-76.

Donley then sank his free throws to ice the game, although Scott Schlosser added another field goal for Murray with four seconds left. Max Herndon had 31 points for Bradley and Jim Jennings paced Murray with 18.

Western's setback at Middle Tennessee cast serious doubts on the Hilltoppers' ability to defend the OVC title, and seemed to indicate that their season-opening loss to David Lipscomb wasn't as much a fluke as it appeared to have been.

Middle Tennessee, which has only a 10-man squad and took a 103-59 thrashing from Morehead Saturday night, got 22 points from center Bennett Jent, from Hazard, Ky. Three other Raider starters also are from Kentucky, and coach Bill Stokes is a Western Kentucky alumnus who never played basketball while he was on the Hilltop.

Eastern grabbed a 40-32 lead over Toledo after a tight first half that saw the lead change hands six times before intermission arrived with the score tied at 30-30. The Rockers then blasted into an 41-point lead as Ray Wolford led the scoring with 25 points. Rupert Stephens had 16 for Eastern.

Highly Touted Bradley Hard-Pressed To Eke Out 79-78 Victory Over Visiting Murray

Highly-touted Bradley University had to rely on a sensational performance at the free throw line to eke out a 79-78 win over a gallant Murray State squad at Peoria, Illinois last night.

It was the 85th win against seven losses for the Braves on their home court. Bradley is a member of the tough Missouri Valley Conference and has compiled an outstanding record playing one of the more rugged schedules in the country.

Murray trailed most of the contest but gave the hard-pressed Braves few opportunities to relax. Bradley jumped into a 9-3 lead at the outset and led by 11 points, its biggest margin, at one point in the half.

Coach Cal Luther's undaunted Thoroughbreds, apparently unimpressed by Bradley's home court record, refused to bow and doggedly sliced away at the margin.

The Braves charged to the front and twice held leads of one point but were never quite able to take command. Murray trailed by five points at halftime.

Bradley's big Mac Herndon who contributed 11 of the Braves' 22 out of 28 free throws, used the foul line for a three point trip to the basket on four separate occasions in the first half. The big gun wound up with 31 points for his evening's performance.

Murray which lost starter Stan Walker after five and one half minutes of the second half via the foul route, received a standout performance from substitute John Nemoiu. Nemoiu tossed in 12 points and contributed to the Racers' work on the boards. Bobby Gosbel, who substituted for Scott Schlosser favoring an injured ankle, also turned in a creditable performance with seven points.

The Racers knotted the count at 38-all with 14 minutes to go in the contest only to have Bradley run away to a 55-58 lead. Trailing by nine points with nine minutes left, Murray began to press and went into a 1-3-1 zone.

With six minutes left the Thoroughbreds trailed by six points. Three minutes expired without Murray being able to trim the margin. Then slowly the determined Racers pulled within three points, 74-77.

Murray picked up a field goal that sliced the lead to one point, 77-76, and got another try at the two-pointer. Bradley countered with two points and Murray had 16 seconds left in which to overcome a three point deficit. Scott Schlosser drove in for a lay-up that cut the gap to one, 79-78.

The Braves then held the ball out of bounds as the seconds ticked off a clock that steadily counted the Racers out of the running. As the pass came in-bounds Murray forced a jump ball with one second on the clock. But Murray was never able to get off a shot in the fleeting moment of play.

Jim Jennings was the high point man for Murray coming on strong late in the game to tally 18 points for the evening. Jennings was followed by Schlosser with 15; Varnas with 10, and Nanciu with 12.

Laverne Tart was the only other Brave to reach the double numerals with 16 markers.

Murray easily out-scored Bradley from the field but couldn't match its free throw performance.

The Racers hit a respectable 12 of 16 but this was far short of Bradley's sensational 22 of 23 free throw attempts.

The Thoroughbreds return by plane this morning to prepare for a home stand Saturday night against Kansas State College.

Junior Coed 'So Excited' Over Honor

"I didn't have any idea. I just can't believe it," exclaimed Marcia Chumbler, "Miss Murray State" for 1962-63.
Miss Chumbler was presented Friday night at MSC's basketball season opener with New Mexico State.
In a campus election Nov. 27 eight "Campus Favorites" were chosen. Miss Chumbler automatically became "Miss Murray State" by receiving a plurality of the votes for these top eight candidates.
A junior from Mayfield, Miss Chumbler is an elementary education major. She is secretary of her class, "Sweetheart" of Tau Kappa Epsilon, varsity cheerleading captain, candidate for "Shield Queen," and "Football Queen" attendant.
Miss Chumbler is a member of Sigma Sigma Sigma sorority, Alpha Epsilon Rho, radio-television fraternity, and Association for Childhood Education.
Last year she was selected "Mountain Laurel Queen," "Miss Kentucky," and was a "Miss USA" and "Miss Dixie" finalist last summer.

A New CREASEY Thriller
A ROCKET FOR ROLLISON

WHAT HAS HAPPENED?
Why is lovely Kate Lawson presented from London Airport on his return from a two-week business trip to the United States for Mailing Motors? How does she find a brutal method as stark as a sharp knife? How does she find an airport doctor, Mike Kennedy, obviously instantly smitten by Kate? How does she find the Hon. Richard Rollison, the FBI, who brought into the case by Dr. Kennedy, uncover the murder?
Rollison saved Kate from a would-be murderer named Bennett who was with the dog at the airport. Bennett had a look at Kate's doorsteps, Carby, who subsequently slipped away after Rollison had taken from the intruder's pocket a list of addresses. Driving to the first address, Rollison found a dead Alastair, a murdered girl, and Maurice Holmes, killed in a case. Curiously, the house was a house to Holmes, a man who had been seen by Jeremiah Whitaker.
After Rollison informed Kennedy that police had questions to ask the doctor, Kennedy went off with Rollison's man Jolly talking him. The two narrowly missed being run over by a new design of the automobile. Meanwhile, having identified the murdered girl as Jane Kennedy's sister, Rollison succeeded in making Bennett talk the mastermind behind an scheme to ruin Mailing Motors, a man named Thompson who uses the name lancelet Thompson. Bennett admitted being at the airport to the house of death after attacking Kate Lawson. Bennett, Rollison said, "I have secrets of the Mailing 'Rockets' have been wrested from him. The latter would be killed."
Rollison knew that Bennett was fired by Mailing Motors and plotted revenge with Thompson in a ruthless scheme to bankrupt the Mailing shareholders.
CHAPTER 25
BENNETT stopped pacing the room, stretched out towards the cigarettes on the desk, and hesitated as he asked: "May I?"
"Help yourself." Superintendent Grice said, and as the man lit his cigarette, he went on: "Are you quite sure of what you've told us?"
"Thompson made that clear all along," Bennett answered. His eyes held a desperate look, and he drew in the smoke as if his life depended on it. "I know that murder was intended. I'd drilled myself into agreeing, and—" he gulped. "There was another reason why I didn't find it so hard as I should. I hated Holmes as much as I did, Wedlake."
"Why?" Richard Rollison interrupted.
"Holmes got this American job which I wanted. I'd practically been promised it, two years ago, and then Holmes got it over my head."
"Do you know why?"
"When I was fired, Wedlake told me I'd lost the American job because I was suspected even then of selling Mailing's out—but it wasn't true. Someone may have made the board think I was, but if they'd really given me a chance to defend myself, if they'd told me when they first began to suspect I could have proved that I wasn't working against them."
So the chip had been on his shoulder for about two years, Rollison realized, and was partly due to Maurice Holmes getting this piece of a job.
"Did Thompson say why he meant to have Holmes killed?" asked Grice.
"For the same reason that he said Kate Lawson had to be. Holmes knew me, and if he gave me away to the police I might be able to give a lead to Thompson. I'm as sure as can be that Thompson killed my sister June because he wanted to make sure that no one could give him away. He knew I don't know for certain who he is."
"Have you any idea?" asked Grice.
"No, I haven't the faintest. But Thompson knew June had, although she would never tell me. He'd always warned her that we would run into real trouble if she did, and—well, since she'd known Thompson, June was the easiest person in the world to handle. She changed: absolutely. All she seemed to care about was money and expensive clothes. I suppose the truth is that each of us had all it takes to be a criminal even before we realized it. Thompson must have known that."
Bennett's eyes were burning, as if he had an almost unbearable headache. "I had the faintest idea who this Thompson really is. I'd tell you."
"What general description can you give us?" asked Grice.
"He's my kind of build, about my height, too," Bennett answered. "I should say I'm slightly taller. He's an older man, about an inch long, as if he'd had a nasty jagged tear there at some time. He's dark-haired, and the beard was obviously a false one—he never made any attempt to hide that fact."
"And can't you give us any indication where to find him?" asked Grice.
"Absolutely none at all."
"What about Carby and Bell?"
"You saw Carby," Bennett said to Rollison. "Bell is a taller, thinner man, in the easy fifties I'd say. They're both pretty tough, though they're not up Thompson's street in any way. They're non-commissioned types, and Thompson's what we usually call a gentleman. There was bitterness in that sneer. My head feels as if it's going to burst! Can I have a couple of aspirins or something?"
"I'll lay some on," Grice promised, and pressed a bell. "A bit later, I'll get you to dictate this statement, and then sign it, Bennett."
"Oh, I won't close up again," Bennett assured him. "I thought my only hope was to say nothing at all. I knew if I once started to talk it would all come out. See—I suppose I ought to say thanks to you both for treating me like a human being."
"Forget it," Grice said.
WHEN Bennett had been taken out, Grice walked to the window and looked out for several seconds. When he turned round, he was smiling faintly, although there was a shadow of anxiety in his eyes.
"That's how far fear will drive some men," he said. "I ought to hate the sight of him, but instead I almost felt sorry for him."
"I shouldn't waste your pity," Rollison said, heavily. "But I know what you mean."
"You worked that trick all right, anyway," Grice went on. "Now we've got to judge where it takes us."
"Not near enough to Thompson or Holmes," Rollison said gloomily.
"No. I've a feeling that Bennett's right, too—that Holmes will be murdered when he's told Thompson all he knows. We haven't a clue to Thompson's identity, either."
"Distant clues, surely," said Rollison, more thoughtfully.
"Holmes and Kennedy. Find Holmes, and—" he broke off. "All right, all right. There's another man on Thompson's list if we can believe the sign."
"Dr. Kennedy?"
"Yes. It isn't reasonable to believe that last night's attack was on Jolly. Jolly couldn't have known anything," Rollison said. "Kennedy seems to be in danger from Thompson, whatever the reason Bennett might be right when he says that Thompson ordered him to kill Kate Lawson because she could recognize him again, but there could have been some additional reason which Thompson didn't speak of."
"Just what is on your mind?" demanded Grice.
Rollison said, softly: "I think we ought to take it for granted that Kennedy, Kate Lawson, and Holmes are all in danger, and that there might be more attacks on Kennedy and Kate. If there are, it will be because each of them can help us to find Thompson. Right?"
"You could be."
"Thanks," said Rollison, but obviously his mind was racing. "I asked Bennett's chaps to keep an eye on Kennedy, and I warned Kate not to leave her flat until we've given her the all clear. I think I'll go and see her again, now. She might know more than she realized, and it's even possible that she knows more than she wants to tell us."
