Nurses Program Endorsed Last Night By Council

Routine business of the city was carried out by the Murray City Council last night with mayor Leonard Vaughn presiding. The council passed a resolution endorsing the establishment of a four year nursing program at Murray State College. At the present time the college offers a three year program and applicants complete their fourth year in Hopkinsville or Owensboro where the hospitals there qualify for this type work.

With the construction of a new hospital here in Murray which will qualify under the program, applicants can take the full four year program here in Murray with their first year at the new Murray Hospital.

City Attorney Wells Overbey was directed by the council to draw up an ordinance imposing a 30 percent penalty on water, sewerage and sanitation department bills paid after the tenth of the month. At the present time the sewerage and sanitation bill has the 10 percent penalty, but the water bill has a 5 percent penalty.

Bids were opened last night on some fire hose for the Fire Department. Two bids were received. The Howe Fire Apparatus Company of Anderson, Indiana bid $1.18 a foot on two and one-half inch hose and 90¢ per foot on one and one-half inch hose.

Midwest Fire and Safety Equipment Company of Indianapolis, Indiana bid $1.15 a foot on the two and one-half inch hose and 84¢ per foot on the one and one-half inch hose. Midwest was the low bidder even after deducting a discount offered by Howe.

Three hundred and fifty feet of the larger hose was purchased and 700 feet of the smaller hose was purchased. City Water System Superintendent Rob Huie announced to the council that the system had received bids on a new water pump with a 150 horsepower motor. The bids were reviewed by Chester

Dr. Little Is Speaker At Rotary Club

Dr. Joe Little, Vanderbilt Hospital Department of Pediatrics, was the speaker yesterday at the Murray Rotary Club.

Dr. Little has specialized in cardiology since his graduation from the Vanderbilt School of Medicine in 1943. In speaking to the Rotarians, he traced the development and growth of the Kentucky Children's Heart Clinic and the Itinerate Heart Clinic program in the state of Kentucky.

Dr. Little was in both programs from the very beginning in Kentucky, and helped to formulate both projects and develop them. Over 2,000 children have been screened by the clinic, he said, and 200 have received operations for heart ailments. Today in Kentucky there are now eleven separate heart clinics, he said.

He praised all the various agencies which took the two infant organizations back in the early years, aided them, and helped them grow into the two strong heart organizations they are today. He listed the Kentucky Heart Association, the Veneral Disease Control Center at Louisville, where the children's clinic first found quarters, the Kentucky Crippled Children's Commission, the State Department of Health, the University of Louisville.

Dr. Little was introduced by Dr. Hugh Houston. Dr. Charles Tuttle was a guest of Dr. Houston. Ralph Schutte of Paducah was a visiting Rotarian.

Wells Purdon, Jr. was introduced by Nix Crawford as a new Rotarian.

Testimony revealed that Sanders and Arthur Rowlett of Murray were in an automobile together. Rowlett claimed that his wallet came out of his pocket in the car and he discovered it when he got out. He said he tried to stop Sanders, but refused to stop. Sanders said he did not see a wallet in this car and that he did not hear Rowlett trying to stop him.

Gary Herndon Admits Theft At Puryear

A Murray man, released this week on probation for a five year term in Eddyville, has admitted burglarizing the Cotton Club located near Puryear, Tennessee, on February 10.

The man, Gary Herndon, was held to the Henry County Grand Jury under $1,000 bond today after he waived preliminary hearing in General Sessions Court on a charge of burglary. Herndon was being held by Calloway County Sheriff Woodrow Rickman on another charge, and the three officers questioned him. Under questioning, Herndon admitted the Cotton Club theft, Fields said.

Respect The Customer, give him what he wants, and tell him the merits of your product, William A. Leigh told his audience in the Ledger and Times sponsored sales clinic on Wednesday night at the Murray City Hall. The sales clinic was a bonus to merchants participating in an eight week promotion campaign to begin next week in the Ledger and Times.

Dr. Clegg Austin, Pediatrician and Medical Chairman from the Medical Society said persons who have received Salk polio shots will be urged to take part in the program because of the advantages offered by live-virus Sabin vaccine. A person who has received Salk shots may have an individual immunization.

Funeral Of A.F. Doran Held Today

Will Lose Representation For Almost Two Years In Senate

"Calloway County voters will be disenfranchised" by proposed re-districting State Senator George Werby told the Ledger and Times yesterday afternoon by telephone. He pointed out that Calloway County would be moved from the third Senatorial District into the 12nd Senatorial District with Trigg and Christian counties and will not be able to elect a senator until November of 1964.

Calloway County is now in the third Senatorial District with Trigg, Lyon, Caldwell, Grittenden counties. Overbey said that this new district, with no senator until the election of 1964 amounts to violation of the United States Constitution.

The Ledger and Times United Press correspondent Joseph Varilla at Frankfort reports fully on the proposed reapportionment.

Senate Majority Leader James Ware set Wednesday as a target date for the passage of a modified version of the bill introduced Wednesday by the chamber's special reapportionment committee. House Majority Caucus Chairman Paul Young set Thursday for passage of a revised version of the bill introduced by the House Democratic leadership.

Ware said the rules committee of the Upper Chamber probably would report out the Senate bill on Monday. A bit more work is expected in the House before that chamber's bill is ready to come out, but Young thought it would make it by Tuesday.

If that schedule holds up, each house could ratify the bill of the other chamber in the following week. Once a bill reaches the floor, it needs a minimum of three days for passage in each house.

Both Ware and Young said they thought the bills now under consideration had enough votes to pass, but they wanted to make them even more acceptable to a greater number of legislators.

About 12 Nays Seen
Young predicted that with two changes the House bill probably would pass with not more than a dozen negative votes. Without the changes, he said it would be a squeaker.

The changes, he said, would be to reduce both Floyd and Warren counties from two districts to one district. The second seat now allotted to Warren would provide (Continued on Page 6)

Cards Stacked Against Women In Industry But Women Own About Half Of Stocks, Bonds

WASHINGTON (UPI)—American women complain that when they go into business, men stack the cards against them. Statistics prove they are right because few women have fought their way to the top of big corporations, and in factories their pay frequently is lower than that paid to men for equivalent work.

There are thousands of rich women in the United States, but most of them — Doris Duke and Barbara Hutton are examples — inherited the money. Women own about half the stocks, bonds and similar personal property in the nation, and most of them turn the management of the assets over to men. Albert E. Schwabacher Jr., San Francisco investment banker

FISCAL NONSENSE

CONDITIONS are changing so rapidly in the space age it is difficult to determine whether our forebears gave us the right advice on what it takes to live happy, independent, successful lives, or whether they actually made it more difficult to "roll with the punches" and accomplish more for ourselves and our fellow-man by becoming a cog in the modern system of "avoiding the wealth."

Try as we will we simply can't understand an expert like Walter W. Heller, Chairman of the President's Council on Economic Advisors, when he faces millions of Americans on television and sees them deficit spending by the United States government in the greatest era of prosperity the world has ever known is no threat to our economic stability, while astronomical and unending increased spending will eventually exhaust us to operate on a balanced budget.

"The average American family, he says, owes four times as much as it did prior to World War II. So, he says, isn't that sufficient proof that the central government can owe a great deal more without danger of running into economic difficulties. As for us, the end answers, "is it?"

Examining the question a little further: why does the average family owe four times as much as it did a generation ago? Does government waste, which always causes higher prices and inflation, have anything to do with it? And is it right to steal or cheat because so many others do it? And how much better off are we... we owe four times as much as we did in 1945?

Too many of us are prone to accept assurance of experts like Dr. Heller at face value. He is an educated man, but when it comes to the importance of spending less than we may reasonably expect to earn we had rather rely on a doctor who spent much of his time in debtor's prison in England.

He was a famous character in David Copperfield, one of Charles Dickens' immortal books. His name was Wilkins Micawber, and he explained the economic facts of life as he had learned them through experience, to his little friend, David. This is the way Dickens records his advice:

"Annual income twenty pounds, annual expenditure sixteen, result happiness."

"Annual income twenty pounds, annual expenditure twenty pounds, ought and six, result misery."

But we realize it takes the statement of an expert to compete with an expert, and for that reason we quote the statement made by William Mc. C. Martin, Jr., upon his resignation by President Kennedy as the Chairman of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System. He said: "There is no form of human slavery that will compare with the man or nation in debt."

State's Fleet Of Bookmobiles Far From Horse Drawn Type

Frankfort, Kentucky's fleet of 100 Bookmobiles, rolling along the highways and byways of 101 of the state's 120 counties, are a far cry from the horse-drawn delivery wagon which in 1916 became Kentucky's first library on wheels.

Today Kentucky boasts the largest State-owned fleet of Bookmobiles in the nation. With self-contained heating and lighting systems, plenty of headspace and a capacity of some 2,000 volumes, the latest models on the road prompted one enthusiastic little girl to call her county's new Bookmobile a "palace on wheels."

The Bookmobile program as Kentucky knows it today was launched in earnest in 1954 with 94 vehicles, but even before the start of the century there was some organized effort in Kentucky to get reading material to less accessible parts of the state. During the 1880's collections of books knothed their way through Eastern Kentucky from Berea where a girls' Sunday School class collected and crated them in wooden boxes. The cases of books travelled by all available means—jog wagon, train, muleback, and horse-drawn delivery wagon donated by a Berea College student, started out on the backroads of Madison County. On that first day in August, 67 volumes were taken from an private home, shafted above and left at 21 homes and one school. Berea students who had sandwiched mountain school teaching into their college years and learned firsthand of the need for books in the mountain settlements, usually drove the wagon.

Within a few years, the students had arranged to leave small collections of books in make-do reading rooms set up in private homes, an arrangement which left more time to visit the schools. The students motorized their library in 1921 when a Red Cross car was donated to the cause.

Meanwhile, a similar service was initiated by the Stuart Robinson Mountain Fund, operating from Ayr in Perry County and covering parts of Perry, Wolfe and Breathitt counties.

Kentucky State Government when the Legislature created the Kentucky Library Commission. To the new agency, the Federation of Women's Clubs donated the 3,000 books and 100 wooden crates they had collected since the beginning of their book-by-mail project in 1886.

Although the budget of the Kentucky Library Commission was then only $6,000 a year, this was the beginning of public library service over the state. There were no local libraries from which books could be borrowed so they were mailed out from Frankfort on request to the Library Commission. Wheels were again added to the library operation in 1948 when the state's first real bookmobile, a reconditioned Army ambulance, began making its rounds in Hart County. The ambulance was presented to the Commission by the Friends of Kentucky Libraries.

By 1952 six other counties—Mason, Bell, Breathitt, Rowan, Barren and Wayne—agreed to operate Bookmobiles. These were converted half-ton panel trucks given to the Library Extension Division by Mrs. Mary Belknap Gray of Louisville. In the counties, operation of the Bookmobiles was still largely a volunteer project, usually sponsored by a civic or woman's organization.

Widespread Bookmobile service in Kentucky became a possibility the following year when Mrs. Barry Bingham and Louisville businesswoman Harry Schaefer led a campaign to finance the purchase of a fleet of new Bookmobiles. Individuals and business firms over the state joined the drive and at a special ceremony at the 1954 State Fair, 84 counties were each presented a Bookmobile by the Library Extension Division.

Many years have passed since the first bookwagon entered the mountains and a woman asked for baking powder, thinking a traveling peddler was making his rounds. From a budget of $30,000 in 1952, the newly-designated Department of Libraries now administers $200,000 in State funds annually for new Bookmobiles and Bookmobile Books and $335,000 in State and Federal funds to develop and staff library regions throughout the state.

Kentucky's county libraries and 12 library regions comprising 57 counties supply the Bookmobiles with fresh titles, record-keeping services, cataloging and a source for special requests. The Bookmobiles operate on definite schedules. Training programs for the driver-librarians also result in better service.

Two new library regions were created during 1962. Both are yet to be named. The 11th region comprises the counties of Nicholas, Bath, Harrison, Fleming and Robertson. Region 12 will be headquartered at Letcher County and will serve surrounding counties as they apply and qualify for regional status.

Although Kentucky's 12 library regions and 120 county libraries are understandably in various stages of development, they all contain people who are getting books, as well as baking powder. And they are asking for the books by brand name.

Marshall Bridges Will Be Able To Pitch Again Soon

Dr. George Rahilly, a bone specialist at the local hospital where Bridges is reported resting comfortably, said the pitcher's injury is not serious and should not hamper his pitching. Rahilly said the bullet, fired from a 25-caliber Italian automatic, broke a bone midway between the ankle and the knee and damaged some muscles.

Bridges, 31, said Thursday he felt "good and I can walk now if they let me."

Bridges was wounded by a bullet allegedly fired by Carvle Lee Rogers, 21, in a local bar Wednesday night. Miss Rogers claimed Bridges, married and the father of three, tried to pick her up but the Negro pitcher said he was waiting for a friend when the shooting occurred.

Manager Ralph Houk said the club would not take any disciplinary action.

One More Win Will Assure Bellarmine K.I.A.C. Championship

By United Press International Bellarmine's Knights rejoiced today over their first Kentucky Intercollegiate Athletic Conference championship and needed only a victory over center-bound Berea Saturday night to make it an undisputed title.

Bellarmine was assured of at least a tie for the title Thursday night when Georgetown knocked off the only other remaining contender, Transylvania, 62-50, in a game at Georgetown.

The defeat, snapping a 10-game winning streak, left Transylvania with a 9-3 K.I.A.C. mark against Bellarmine's 9-2 league record.

Transylvania meets dangerous Villa Madonna while Bellarmine will be playing at Berea Saturday night in the wrap-up of K.I.A.C. competition this season.

The Knights, who must have had one eye on the game at Georgetown Thursday night, downed Centre 68-49 in a scoreless game marked by scarcely more than mediocre shooting on the part of either team.

George Hill and Bill Alvey each netted 16 points to lead the Bellarmine scoring as the Knights hit a below-par 35.9 per cent from the floor. Centre was even colder, however, firing only a 29.3 percentage.

Georgetown's two sharpshooting guards did Transylvania in Cecil Tuttle hitting 38 points and Dick Vories 25 in a come-from-behind decision. Lynn Stewart had 29 in Transylvania's last game.

Cumberland whacked Campbellsville 91-74 in the only other Kentucky college game of the night.

Pioneer Flier Gets New Job

By RODNEY GUILFOIL
United Press International
SUNNYDALE, Calif. (UPI) — A pioneer flier who lost his sight in a plane crash 22 years ago has returned to work at the age of 59 — and enthusiastic about the fact he is doing something useful again.

He is Winn Bradford, the only blind worker among the 32,000 employees of Lockheed Aircraft Corporation. It may be he is the only blind worker in the entire aerospace industry. A self-taught flier, Bradford barnstormed through the United States as a stunt artist and wing-walker until 1930. Later he became a commercial pilot for American Airlines. Then he lost his sight in the plane crash. Recently Lockheed Missiles and Space Company here decided to find a place for Bradford. Officials felt he could serve usefully as a trouble call dispatcher.

The special concessions to Bradford's handicap were turned the bells for his four telephones so he could identify incoming calls and designing a metal template so he could properly fill out coded call cards. The job sounded relatively simple when Bradford first heard about it. But it proved to be a formidable challenge when he actually started work late last year. "So much of the terminology I heard sounded like a foreign language to me," he recalled. "And then there was the problem of using the phone and recording the complaint on the coded form at the same time. I began to lose confidence. I was afraid of letting down all the people who had stuck their necks out for me."

But the girls in his office — Beryl Dorman, Sally Dazzo and Maria Blackton — would help and reassure him. Before long, Bradford got the hang of the job, and from then on it was smooth sailing. "This has been a new lease on life for me," Bradford said. "It's the first paycheck I have earned since my accident. You can't know what it means to be doing something useful."

Winn Bradford is not the only handicapped man working for Lockheed. Another is Jim Lewis, who is a Polaris electronics assembler, although he has no hands or legs. Lewis received his training from the Goodwill Industries, and was named National Goodwill Worker of the Year in 1962. Another, but less handicapped, worker is Chuck Ward. He achieved fame of sorts two years ago when he was stationed at Lockheed's Santa Cruz, Calif., test base and was bitten several times in the leg by an angry rattlesnack. But the rattler slithered off, bewildered and slightly groggy. "It had made the error of picking on Ward's wooden leg."

FISCAL NONSENSE

CONDITIONS are changing so rapidly in the space age it is difficult to determine whether our forebears gave us the right advice on what it takes to live happy, independent, successful lives, or whether they actually made it more difficult to "roll with the punches" and accomplish more for ourselves and our fellow-man by becoming a cog in the modern system of "dividing the wealth."

Try as we will we simply can't understand an expert like Walter W. Heller, Chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisors, when he faces millions of Americans on television and tells them deficit spending by the United States government in the greatest era of prosperity the world has ever known is the threat to our economic stability, to our nationhood and that increased spending will eventually threaten us to operate on a balanced budget.

The average American family, he says, owes four times as much as it did prior to World War I. So, he says, isn't that sufficient proof that the central government can owe a great deal more without danger of running into economic difficulties. As for us, the echo answers: "is it?"

Expanding the question a little further: why does the average family owe four times as much as it did a generation ago? Does government waste, which always causes higher prices and inflation, have anything to do with it? And is it right to steal or cheat because so many others do it? And how much better off are we if we owe four times as much as we did in 1947?

Too many of us are prone to accept assurance of experts like Dr. Heller at face value. He is an educated man, but when it comes to the importance of spending less than we may reasonably expect to earn we had rather rely on a paper do well who spent much of his time in debtor's prison in England.

He was a famous character in David Copperfield, one of Charles Dickens' immortal books. His name was Wilkins Micawber and he explained the economic facts of life as he had learned them through experience, to his little friend, David. This is the way Dickens records his advice:

"Annual income twenty pounds, annual expenditure nineteen, sixteen, six, result happiness."

"Annual income twenty pounds, annual expenditure twenty pounds, eight and six, result misery."

But we realize it takes the statement of an expert to compete with an expert, and for that reason we quote the statement made by William Mc C. Martin, Jr., upon his resignation by President Kennedy as the Chairman of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System. He said:

"There is no form of human slavery that will compare with the man or nation in debt."

State's Fleet Of Bookmobiles Far From Horse Drawn Type

Frankfort, Kentucky's fleet of 100 Bookmobiles, rolling along the highways and byways of 101 of the state's 120 counties, are a far cry from the horse-drawn delivery wagon which in 1916 became Kentucky's first library on wheels.

Today Kentucky boasts the largest State-owned fleet of Bookmobiles in the nation. With self-contained heating and lighting systems, plenty of heat space and a capacity of some 2,000 volumes, the latest models on the road prompted one enthusiastic little girl to call her county's new Bookmobile a "palace on wheels."

The Bookmobile program as known in earnest in 1954 with 94 vehicles known to today was launched, but even before the start of the century there was some organized effort in Kentucky to get reading material to less accessible parts of the state. During the 1880's collections of books reached their way through Eastern Kentucky from Berea where a girls' Sunday School class collected and crated them in wooden boxes. The cases of books travelled by all available means—jog wagon, train, muleback and rickshaw, arriving at unscheduled intervals into the hands of mountain people who had previously only thumped through their family Bibles.

In 1916, Kentucky's first library on wheels, a horse-drawn delivery wagon donated by a Berea College student, started out on the backroads of Madison County. On that first day in August, 67 volumes were taken from the wagon's makeshift shelves and left at 21 homes and one school. Berea students who had sandwiched mountain school teaching into their college years and learned firsthand of the need for books in these mountain settlements, usually drove the wagon.

Within a few years, the students had arranged to leave small collections of books in make-do reading rooms set up in private homes, an arrangement which left more time to visit the schools. The students motorized their library in 1921 when a Red Cross car was donated to the cause. Meanwhile, a similar service was initiated by the Stuart Robinson Mountain Fund, operating from Ayr in Perry County and covering parts of Perry, Wolfe and Breathitt counties.

Entered the library picture in 1910 Kentucky State Government when the Legislature created the Kentucky Library Commission. To the new agency the Federation of Women's Clubs donated the 3,000 books and 100 wooden crates they had collected since the beginning of their book-by-mail project in 1896.

Although the budget of the Kentucky Library Commission was then only $6,000 a year, this was the beginning of public library service over the state. There were no local libraries from which books could be borrowed so they were mailed out from Frankfort on request to the Library Commission. Wheels were again added to the library operation in 1948 when the state's first real bookmobile, a reconditioned Army ambulance began making its rounds in Hart County. The ambulance was presented to the Commission by the Friends of Kentucky Libraries.

By 1952, six other counties—Mason, Bell, Breathitt, Rowan, Barren and Wayne—agreed to operate Bookmobiles. These were converted half-ton panel trucks given to the new Library Extension Division by Mrs. Mary Belknap Gray of Louisville. In the counties, operation of the Bookmobiles was still largely a volunteer project, usually sponsored by a civic or woman's organization. Widespread Bookmobile service in Kentucky became a possibility the following year when Mrs. Barry Bingham and Louisville businessman Harry Schaefer led a campaign to finance the purchase of a fleet of new Bookmobiles. Individuals and business firms over the state joined the drive and at a special ceremony at the 1954 State Fair, 84 counties were each presented a Bookmobile by the Library Extension Division.

Many years have passed since the first bookwagon entered the mountains and a woman asked for baking powder, thinking a traveling peddler was making his rounds. From a budget of $30,000 in 1952, the newly-designated Department of Libraries now administers $200,000 in State funds annually for new Bookmobiles and Bookmobile books and $335,000 in State and Federal funds to develop and staff library regions throughout the state.

Kentucky's county libraries and 12 library regions comprising 57 counties supply the Bookmobiles with fresh titles, record-keeping services, cataloging and a source for special requests. The Bookmobiles operate on definite schedules. Training programs for the driver-librarians also result in better service.

Two new library regions were created during 1962. Both are yet to be named. The 11th region comprises the counties of Nicholas, Bath, Harrison, Fleming and Robertson. Region 12 will be headquartered at Letcher County and will serve surrounding counties as they apply and qualify for regional status.

Marshall Bridges Will Be Able To Pitch Again Soon

PT. LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP)—New York Yankee relief pitcher Marshall Bridges, who was shot in the left leg by a woman Wednesday night, will begin his spring training in about a month and may be ready for bullpen duty when the American League season opens on April 8.

Dr. George Rahilly, a bone specialist at the local hospital where Bridges is reported resting comfortably, said the pitcher's injury is not serious and should not hamper his pitching. Rahilly said the bullet, fired from a 25-caliber Italian automatic, broke a bone midway between the ankle and the knee and damaged some muscles.

Bridges, 31, said Thursday he felt "good and I can walk now if they let me."

Bridges was wounded by a bullet allegedly fired by Carrie Lee Ruyser, 21, in a local bar Wednesday night. Miss Ruyser claimed Bridges, married and the father of three, tried to pick her up but the Negro pitcher said he was waiting for a friend when the shooting occurred.

Manager Ralph Houk said the club would not take any disciplinary action.

One More Win Will Assure Bellarmine KIAC Championship

By United Press International Bellarmine's Knights rejoiced today over their first Kentucky Intercollegiate Athletic Conference championship and needed only a victory over college-bound Berea Saturday night to make it an undisputed title.

Bellarmine was assured of at least a tie for the title Thursday night when Georgetown knocked off the only other remaining contender, Transylvania, 62-50, in a game at Georgetown.

The defeat, snapping a 10-game winning streak, left Berea with a 6-3 KIAC mark against Bellarmine's 9-2 league record. Transy meets dangerous Villa Madonna while Bellarmine will be playing at Berea Saturday night in the climax of KIAC competition this season.

The Knights, who must have had one eye on the game at Georgetown Thursday night, downed Centre 68-49 in a non-conference game marked by scarcely more than mediocre shooting on the part of either team.

George Hill and Edell Alvey each netted 16 points to lead the Bellarmine scoring as the Knights hit a below-par 35.9 per cent from the floor. Centre was even, colder, however, firing only a 29.3 percentage. Georgetown's two sharpshoot-sleeved bodice, scalloped neckline with Aleon lace applique embroidered with seed pearls. The lace applique skirt formed a lovely chapel train. She wore a single strand of pearls.

A New Thriller OFF THE DEEP BLUE END

BY JOHN CREASEY

WHAT HAS HAPPENED? Raoul, "Chicot" will be very interested. "Because if it is," answered Raoul, "said Gérard softly, 'don't you say anything to her. Understand? Sautot had his orders. To find out how much she had said to this Raoulson, you haven't any. You don't know what he was trying to find out from her. Wait until we get back, and telephone 'Chicot' for orders. Make sure of that, because you might do the wrong thing."

"Silence, tell."

"I won't hurt her," Raoul said.

After a moment's pause, Raoul left the saloon and walked briskly up the stairs. Odd noises began soon after he reached the engine.

There was no sound inside the saloon, and Raoulsson made none.

He had learned a little, and it might become a great deal. Raoulsson was the man they feared. Sautot was the stocky man with a bullet-hole through his right hand. Morency—a name which might be English or American—was the old man, and a doctor. These two were Raoul and Gérard, and they knew that Sautot had been questioning the girl when she had escaped and run, screaming, to a desperate hope of safety.

Violette—

Raoulsson found himself smiling at thought of her grace.

Then the engine started.

It ran smoothly from the first note, and in a few seconds they would be on their way. It wasn't far back to the jetty.

ROLLISON moved around to the saloon, trying to remember whether it was possible to glance down the stairs and see the front door of the saloon. He didn't think so. He was nearly sure that Gérard would look down, trying to make certain that Raoulson didn't see anything. Raoulson was not questioning the girl. There was a man that Raoulson would stop at. Raoulsson reached the doorway, and peered inside.

Raoul stood with his feet apart, his right elbow crooked, as if he had a glass in his hand. His sleek black hair was slightly out of place. He wore a biscuit-colored suit like the driver of the killer car, beyond doubt it was the same man.

The girl lay on the floor, with two blue rugs over her. Her feet showed at one end, and she had lost her shoes. Her hair was lank and wet, and a large water patch on the carpet seemed to be spreading. She faced the door, and her head lolled. She looked as if she were unconscious, but Raoulsson

Roman Wells Still Supplying Water In Jordanian Desert

By RAY J. MOLONEY
United Press International
AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — When in Jordan you do as the Romans did—at least if you want water.

In a modern tribute to the skill of Roman engineering, a California-born construction engineer, Oliver H. Folsom, 53, is rehabilitating Roman wells, cisterns and canals in a U. S. backed program to bring water to this barren land.

"There is virtually nothing that we could have taught the Romans about the utilization of water supplies," Folsom said. "The policy that we are following is a definite one of seeking out and using the old Roman waterworks because almost invariably their system was the best way to develop the water and their basic engineering concepts are the equal of anything we have to offer today."

The "we" referred to is the Jordan Central Water authority, a government department designed to find and exploit Jordan's scanty water resources.

Although technically a member of the U. S. foreign aid service, Folsom has been assigned to the Jordanian governments to head, the department and is, in effect, one of the most important ministers in the Jordanian government.

Folsom arrived in Jordan in September, 1960, for a two-year period. In a tribute to his work, Jordanian premier Wadi'el Tei appealed to him to remain "in office" for another two years. Folsom agreed.

Beginning his hunt for water in late 1960, and using some $350,000 of funds earned through sale of U. S. wheat to Jordan, Folsom has uncovered and restored 50 ancient Roman water systems, mostly in the barren sectors of Jordan.

"In our hunt," said Folsom, "we seek the smallest sign of grass or anything green in the desert. Even a single tuft of bush means that, somewhere near, there is water. "Almost invariably when we dig down—sometimes several feet—we find Roman remains. Sometimes they have been so wrecked by the passage of years that we cannot use them and we have to build all over again. But, wherever possible, we merely repair and strengthen, and then move on to seek other supplies."

Folsom insisted that those who ignored the Roman methods of trapping and storing water—did so at their peril.

"I have worked on many of the major California irrigation schemes, but now I find myself saying time and time again: how did the Romans do it? This way! then we shall do it the same way."

"On the few occasions when we have ignored the Roman methods, our new, modern schemes have failed."

About the only way in which modern engineering can improve on the original Roman designs is that Folsom and his men now protect the water supplies.

Folsom said that, traditionally, water is free in the desert territories of Jordan. "Everyone wants water, and no one will refuse it to you if he has it, but similarly no one will take the responsibility for ensuring a continuing water flow," he said.

The Romans, apparently, had an organized system to maintain their wells and cisterns, and it was after their departure that sand and rubble began to drift in and block up the water outlets.

To prevent a recurrence of this, Folsom and his men protect the newly-uncovered water supplies and cover them in, in the hope that even when not regularly attended to they will continue to flow.

The water being obtained from the Roman systems is used entirely for human consumption and maintenance of animals. Supplies found so far are nowhere near sufficient to permit irrigation of land.

Work is proceeding on another 20 Roman ruins and the hunt for more goes on.

Driver's Ego On Car Plates

By RAY FARKAS
United Press International
WASHINGTON (AP) — Anywhere in the world you drive you must have a license plate on your car. In Italy they cost about $80 each. In Egypt they're only about $150.

In the United States you pay anywhere from $10 to $25 to register the family car, and sometimes more than $200 for a big tractor-trailer truck.

A survey published in the "Ford Times" showed the profit margin on making the plates is terrific. Most states make their tags in state prisons for about 25 cents a plate.

Some years ago a few states put out license plates the shape of the state — Tennessee and Pennsylvania, to name two.

And until recent years West Virginia.

Former heavyweight boxing champion Rocky Marciano was issued plates by Massachusetts bearing the letters "KO."

Former President Dwight D. Eisenhower, while head of Columbia University, sported tags with his initials — "DDE."

Connecticut issued tags to two teen-age friends — "Rock" for one and "Roll" for the other.

During steel-scarce World War II many states merely issued gum stickers to renew old plates. But Illinois brought out a plate of pressed fiber containing, among other things, soybeans.

They looked good, but dogs and cats ate them.

been given top jobs in big corporations. General Motors has no women executives, and not even a woman designer or engineer. General Electric has a few technicians, research associates and women in personnel but no women executives except for the head of the advisory consumer institute.

"DuPont has a woman laboratory section head and a departmental control manager. U. S. Steel has no women executives. A. T. and T., although 60 per cent of its employees are women, has in its control executive group a lone woman assistant secretary. Standard Oil of New Jersey has two assistant secretaries. U. S. Rubber for years has given women supervisory jobs in certain plants, but no department heads are women."

Dany Prejudice

All big corporations insist there is no prejudice against women. The governor of a state almost invariably gives number 1, the lieutenant governor, two, and so on through the major offices.

Once past the governor's mansion and the state legislature, scrambling for jobs. Some people pull hard on all the strings to get that distinctive number. In one instance a car owner was said to have sold his rights to a low number plate for $500.

But if you lose out in this numbers game, there is always the chance of getting distinctive lettering.

Twenty-two states have laws forbidding wage discrimination against women, and an equal-pay provision is written into thousands of union contracts. Nevertheless, a survey by the National Office Management Association showed that one-third of the firms paid women less than men for equivalent work.

Two striking examples were banks and laundries. Women bank tellers with less than five years experience averaged from $5 to $15 a week less than for men with the same period of service. Women laundry workers get from 9 to 19 cents less per hour than men.

A Fayette County district and a Jefferson County district are in nomination. However, Democratic leaders in the Senate conceded this was local since it was the only way to get equitable apportionment.

In the House Thursday an amendment to the reapportionment bill was introduced that would change the internal alignment of Jefferson County. The plan put Ross O. Johnson and Frank Wood, both Republicans, in the same district.

But Young said he thought this could be corrected. If it were expected to get the votes of most Jefferson County legislators for the 1971. But whether these would be forthcoming was questionable after Louisville Republican Mayor William O. Cowser blasted both the current House and Senate plans.

Both the Senate and House took today off and are scheduled to reconvene Monday at 4 p. m. (EST) with rules committee meetings 2 hours earlier.

area of western Kentucky and the second floor seat would name another district in southeastern Kentucky. This would make the measure more palatable to rural legislators.

The rules committee approved switching Marshall into the First District, from the Second, Calloway from the Third to the 32nd, Lincoln from the 19th and Taylor from the 16th to the 15th, Wolfe from the 27th to the 28th and Wayne from the 15th to the 16th.

None of the changes radically affect the nomenclature of the districts involved.

It was anticipated that at a meeting Monday, Woodford would be moved from the 22nd to the 20th and Anderson from the 20th to the 22nd.

One leading Democratic senator said he thought the bill could get at least 22 votes on the floor. Twenty are needed for passage.

The transfer of Calloway means that county will lose Frigg and Calloway in a Senate district that will not be able to elect a senator until November, 1964. Only odd-numbered districts will elect senators this year and the district has an even number, 32.
