Liston's Move To Garden May Boost It To New High

NEW YORK (AP) - Heavyweight champion Sonny Liston was scheduled to begin arranging his big switch today from independent promotion to that of Madison Square Garden. The switch, Liston said, would entail abandonment of his proposed Sept. 30th defense against young Cassius Clay at Philadelphia, and the arrangement, instead, of a December defense against some lesser contender on home television for promoter Harry Markson of the Garden. That December contender may be Ernie Terrell, the Chicago giant. If Sonny does swing over to the Garden, it could be one of the most momentous moves in boxing history - a move that might begin boosting the Garden back to the big-fight promotional supremacy it enjoyed until 1966. Top contender Clay, visiting in New York, said he was grievously disappointed because of Liston's withdrawal from the September fight, "just because he's scared to death of me." Liston countered with, "I hope big mouth Clay doesn't fight anybody till I get him next year because the first good man he meets will knock his head off." It was Liston, himself, who announced in Philadelphia that he planned to visit Markson and his Garden matchmaker, Teddy Brenner, in New York today and discuss possibilities of a home-television defense - possibly at Miami Beach, Fla., or Las Vegas, Nev., in December. And it was also Liston who announced he was postponing his proposed defense against 21-year old Clay at Philadelphia's Municipal Stadium until next year because of "tax problems." Total gate, television and other receipts from the Clay fight were expected to approximate $7 million.

NL Race Just As Hot As Mays' Bat

by FRED DOWN. United Press International. Those front-running Los Angeles Dodgers must realize by now that the National League pennant race is as hot as Willie Mays' bat happens to be. The Dodgers are five games in front of the Giants and the St. Louis Cardinals and they're coasting along with a tidy three-game winning streak. Willie's average dipped to .340 in mid-season and this looked like the worst season he ever had in the majors. But he's rifting that bat with six hits in his last eight trips to the plate and he's raised his season average to .290. The message to the Dodgers is loud and clear - falter and you'll pay the penalty of blowing a second straight pennant.

Dodgers Down Cubs

The Dodgers downed the Chicago Cubs, 4-1, in the sixth when the Pirates defeated the Milwaukee Braves, 3-0, and the Philadelphia Phillies scored a 7-1 triumph after a 6-4 10-inning loss to the Cincinnati Reds in other National League games. Jim Duffalo went eight innings and allowed six hits to win his fourth straight game without a loss for the Giants while Hal Brown suffered his seventh defeat against four wins. Maury Wills paced the Dodgers' 10-hit attack with a double and three singles and Don Drysdale pitched a six-hitter and fanned six for his 14th victory against 12 losses. Drysdale, now gunning for his second straight 20-win season, halted Billy Williams' 12-game hitting streak. Shantz Shut Door. Bobby Shantz' 1 1/2 innings of close-out relief pitching helped the Cardinals deal the Mets their 15th defeat in 17 games. Ken Boyer, Julian Javier and Tim McCarver had two hits each for the Cardinals, with Boyer driving in the winning run with a fifth-inning single. Galen Cisco suffered his 10th loss against seven wins. Don Cardwell shut out the Braves with four hits for eight innings and Al McBean closed it out in the ninth to earn Cardwell his eighth win against 12 losses. Key blows in the Pirates' three-run seventh inning were a single by Roberto Clemente, a double by Donn Clendenen and a single by Jim Pagan. Pete Rose's two-run homer led the Reds to their opening-game triumph at Philadelphia but the Phillies won the nightcap on the strength of three doubles by Johnny Callison, and the three-hit pitching of Denis Bennett. Joey Jay suffered his 16th loss against four wins for the Reds.

NEW YORK - Mickey Mantle, returning to the New York Yankee lineup after an absence of 61 games, hit a pinch homer against the Baltimore Orioles in the second game of doubleheader. Struck Out 11. The only hit-off Williams was a third-inning double by Don Blasingame, and the powerful right-hander struck out 11 and walked only one. The Kansas City Athletics knocked second-place Chicago right full games behind the Yankees by edging the White Sox, 4-3; the Baltimore Orioles defeated the Cleveland Indians, 6-4; the Detroit Tigers routed the Boston Red Sox, 10-1; and the Minnesota Twins downed the Los Angeles Angels, 5-1. Williams, who retired the last 19 Washington batters in order, got the only run he needed for his fifth victory in eight decisions when Tony Kubek tripled in the eighth inning and came home on Bobby Richardson's sacrifice fly. Bonnie Daniels was the victim. Hit Two Homers. Chuck Cottier smashed two homers for the Washington Senators, including a decisive three-run blow in the sixth inning that sent Yankee starter Whitey Ford down to defeat. Stan Williams Looms As New Threat To The AL Batters

By MARTIN LADER. United Press International. Opposing hitters who consider Don Drysdale a menace to life, limb and batting average are hereby warned that the American League now boasts a bigger-than-life duplicate in Stan Williams. Williams, a 6-4, 240-pounder, can match his former Dodger teammate in size and he throws a mean enough fast ball to compare with Drysdale. Only trouble is, Williams hasn't enjoyed as much success getting the batters out. All this is about to change, however, boasts Williams. His solution? To pitch with the same motion as Drysdale. Whatever the answer, "it worked with huge success Tuesday night when Williams gave up just one hit in leading the New York Yankees to a 1-0 victory over Washington in the second game of a two-night doubleheader after the Senators had taken tripled in the eighth inning. The Twins' early rally was culminated on a two-run single by Bob Allison and another run-producing hit by Earl Batley. Dean Chance (10-12) took the loss.

No. 334 Like David Dixon Porter, commander of gunboats under Porter's foster-brother, David Glasgow Farragut, during the decisive Mississippi River campaign, John Rodgers came of a family of distinguished naval officers. His father, John Sr., was an outstanding captain in the war with the French Red Communalists, 1798-1800, and in the punitive actions against the African piratical states before he was senior commodore in the Second War of Independence, 1812-15. John Jr.'s uncle, George W., was a notable captain in the latter war. Two of George's sons, Christopher and G. W. Jr., were fellow officers of John Jr.'s in the Great Rebellion. John Jr. was captain of the monitor Weehawken when, in 1862, it overpowered the Atlanta, reputedly the strongest ship in the Confederate Navy, in a 15-minute attack. The fight, which took place in Wasaw Sound, Ga., is depicted here [1] in a contemporary Harper's Weekly drawing. The Weehawken is at left, the Rebel ironclad in the foreground. John Rodgers kept the battered Atlanta afloat, and, after repairs at Philadelphia, she was U.S.S. Atlanta, engaged in blockading the coast where formerly she had served the Rebels. Rodgers was given a presidential citation for the capture and promotion to commodore. A short time afterward, Aug. 17, 1863, tragedy befell his cousin, George W. Jr. in an attack on Charleston, S. C., the latter brought his command, U.S.S. Catskill, close to a harbor defense to give strongest effect to his own gun. A shell blew up the pilot house and killed Rodgers. -CLARK KINNAIRD

American Love Story That Made European History! The Amazing Mrs. Bonaparte BY HARNETT T. KANE

CHAPTER 20 BRISK wind lifted the tendrils of dark hair at Betsy Bonaparte's forehead as she stood in the prow of the trun ship Eris, which moved steadily forward along Chesapeake Bay.

The previous day, March 10 of 1805 - a date she would never forget - their party had gone quietly to a Baltimore wharf to board the vessel, chartered by her father for a trip to Lisbon. Eventually this method of travel, though expensive and especially so in wartime, had proved the swiftest and the most certain. Nevertheless, while they tried to keep details secret, such a hope was hardly likely to be realized.

As the family and friends gathered for farewells, Commodore Barney, who had a rather unwilling part in Betsy's first meeting with Jerome Bonaparte, stood among them, bearing as if everything could be credited to him. Clearing his throat, Betsy's father became matter-of-fact. "You'll write us everything that happens? And you, too, William?" Their eyes went to Betsy's oldest brother, for Mr. Patterson had judged that he would be a helpful companion and adviser to them and, like Robert before him, would also carry out business assignments for the company.

The firm-jawed, humorless William had not been as ready as Robert to make a European journey, but he had consented to go. Mr. Patterson addressed Betsy again. "If, for any reason, you don't enter France with Jerome, I think you should sail to Amsterdam. The Eris carries goods for that port, and we have friends there. In fact, Robert ought to be in Holland about the time you arrive."

Two members of the party stayed stiffly apart - Secretary Le Camus and Dr. Garnier - but their hostility was offset by the addition of Mrs. Anderson, a friend who had responded swiftly to Betsy's invitation to go with them. With the baby six months advanced, Betsy felt the need of a woman companion. "Time to go," Jerome called, gave a last quick kiss to several of those within reach, kissed Dorcas on both cheeks, and shook hands solemnly with Mr. Patterson. "My second father and mother," he murmured huskily. "You've been very patient with us, with me especially, and I carry with me the happiest of memories."

The words had the tone of a little speech prepared in advance. Only when they headed away did Betsy realize that Jerome had spoken with finality, as if he expected never to behold the United States again. The thought was disquieting. Now, toward the close of their second day, Betsy sat with her shoulder against the rail. The American flag, flying overhead, might head off the hostile interest of a British sea rover. And, she reflected, they had an additional protection. "Madame d'Albert," the captain had ad-

Dear Abby... Don't Fight It, Mom! Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Our son, married only four years, phoned us yesterday to say his wife never wanted to see us or hear from us again. The reason: She doesn't like my loud laughter or "affectionate ways". My son says his first duty is to his wife. Must a son forsake his parents to prove his love for his wife? Last Mother's Day I broke down in a flood of tears because there was no card or call from them. Dad tried to console me, but on Father's Day he cried like a baby because he was forgotten, too. They have two darling babies which they always take to see the other grandparents. They never come to us. Have other parents gone through this? Must we forget our son or what?

HURT PARENTS DEAR HURT: Yes, many other parents have "gone through this". You can't force your love of your son or on his wife, and you shouldn't try. The immature and embittered daughter-in-law is your son's problem. Best that you ignore both of them until he shows what he can, or will, do - if anything.

DEAR ABBY: When a man proposes to you, could sober, and then doesn't do anything about it, can he be used for breach of promise? Do I need witnesses? If so, how many? Please don't tell me to see a lawyer - he is one. Thank you.

JLT:ED DEAR JLT:ED: See ANOTHER
