RESCUE NEAR FOR TWO TRAPPED MINERS

VICTORY NEAR AT COAL MINE—The expressions on the faces of these weary rescue workers tell the story as a 12-inch drill reaches two miners entombed nearly two weeks 308 feet underground in a coal mine at Shepton, Pa. Fate of a third miner separated from the other two by a wall of dirt is unknown.

Police Kill Kidnapper Of Police Officer

HARRODSBURG, Ky. (AP) — Police today shot and killed a burglar who had kidnaped a Campbell County police officer and four other persons during a wild flight in which nearly a score of cruisers gave chase. The fugitive, tentatively identified only as "Neil" or "Neal," was shot as he tried to commandeer a third escape car on Ky. 152 about four miles west of here. An unidentified woman who was seated in the car, which bore a Washington County license, was reported to have been wounded in the hip. Harrodsburg police said the fugitive was shot by Fayette County Deputy Sheriff James Molloy and another police officer not identified. The episode began early this morning when George Arnold, assistant chief of police, was dispatched to check a report of a burglary in progress at the Highlands Country Club at Fort Thomas, Ky. About 7:30 a. m. (EST), Arnold called headquarters for assistance, but nothing further was heard from him. Approximately two hours later his car was spotted near Lexington and Fayette County and Kentucky State Police all gave chase. While fleeing down U. S. 68 toward Harrodsburg, the suspect stopped, halted a station wagon carrying a man and wife and two children, not yet identified. He forced Arnold into the station wagon and resumed the flight. By this time from 15 to 20 cruisers had joined the pursuit. The fleeing kidnapper fired several shots, and was reported to have blown out the tires on three police cars. Police returned the fire, and shot the transmission of the station wagon, stopping it four miles west of here. The fugitive, who had threatened to take the couple's little girl, about 7 or 8 years of age, with him as hostage did not do so. He left the station wagon and ran toward the Washington County car parked in front of a store across the road. As he forced his way into the car, the Fayette County patrol car arrived on the scene and the officers opened fire. The fugitive apparently was killed by a rifle bullet, and is not believed to have returned the fire at that time. The unidentified woman seated in the car was reported to have been wounded in one hip. Newport police said $148 in money was taken in the burglary along with some gold clubs which were later recovered.

Hope To Pull Two From Deep In Mine Some Time Tonight

When the drill passed the 258 foot mark shortly before noon (EDT) it was decided to continue to drill through to the men with the 17 1/2 inch reamer instead of switching to a 20-inch reamer. Authorities said, however, that the large bore would be used if necessary. Dr. H. Beecher Charnbury, state secretary of mines, said there was a possibility the break through could be made in three hours but he "suspected" it would take a longer time. He said it would take five hours to prepare the tube for the capsule, test the capsule, and take other precautions for pulling the men up. Rescuers worked drilled the three-inch tube being perforated in an effort to reach the third trapped miner, Louis Bova, also had passed the 265 foot depth, but progress was "disappointing." The exact whereabouts of Bova, who has not been heard from since last Tuesday, are not known exactly. The Federal Aviation Agency declared the Shepton area a disaster area today in order to bar all airplane from approaching within five miles or 2,000 feet altitude without specific advance approval of the FAA. This will prevent any vibrations especially from jets, from disturbing the earth in the rescue area. Fear Of Sinking There were fears the metal escape capsule, which was expected to bring the men to the surface would get stuck in the narrow rescue shaft. Officials also wanted to decide whether to send a volunteer down to help the men into the capsule. The 10-foot long concrete plug was poured to prevent dirt, rock and coal being scraped-out in the remaining operation from falling into the miners' tiny prison. Shortly before 9 a. m. (EDT), one rescue official spoke to Fellin over the communications system that links the miners to the world above. No Word From Bova He asked Fellin whether he had heard anything from a third miner, Louis Bova, 42, and Fellin replied quietly, "No." Fellin, whose voice could be heard over a broadcasting speaker near the head of the mine in which the three were entombed, also said he had no idea whether Bova stopped for little before 6 a. m. at a depth of about 140 feet when water was encountered. The drill, driven by compressed air, will not operate in water. The conference was called to decide whether to drill through the heavy plug or first test the torpedoshaped escape capsule in which Fellin and Thorne may ascend by raising and lowering it in the enlarged portions of the hole. If they bore through the plug first, and then discover that the capsule will not fit through the 17 1/2-inch shaft, it would be difficult to re-plug the larger hole prior to further remaining operations. During the morning, drilling was halted periodically for about an hour to allow new sections to be added to the so-called "stem," a pipe used to draw pulverized rock from the hole to the surface. Such delays occurred at an average of about once every three hours. The first 38 feet of the rescue shaft was widened to 30 inches Sunday. Then a 26-inch steel casing delicately was inserted in that section of the hole to reinforce its walls and reaming with the 17 1/2-inch bit was started. A rescue worker said five diamond bits, worth $300 each, had been worn out since midnight in drilling the three-inch hole to the spot where Bova was thought to be trapped. The hole was not expected to be flushed before Tuesday. Bova, who was with Fellin and Thorne when the mine shaft they were in collapsed Aug. 13, was last heard from on Tuesday. Hopps that

The lower part of the hole had been temporarily filled with cement to prevent debris from falling on the trapped men. ## County Farmers Net Income Over Most In Area

(Special to the Ledger & Times) NEW YORK, Aug. 26 — Farmers in Calloway County were better off last year, from an income standpoint, than were farmers in most parts of the East South Central States. Their overall receipts, on a per capita basis, were above average, according to a national report on farm incomes. They were able to produce and market more, despite their reduced acreage, than they had in other years. The gain in production is attributed to more efficient operation, made possible by the use of highly-mechanized farm equipment. Just how the local farm community made out, compared with others, is detailed in the annual report on farm incomes, issued by the Standard Rate and Data Service. It presents figures for all sections of the country. It shows that gross farm receipts in Calloway County during 1962 amounted to $7,662,000, as against the previous year's $7,423,000. Expressed in terms of the local farm population, it was equivalent to $1,563 per person. This topped the returns reported for most areas of the East South Central States, where they averaged $1,405 per farm resident. It exceeded, also, the $1,392 in the State of Kentucky. The figures on income take into account all receipts, including the cash proceeds from farm marketings, Government payments and the value of home-grown products that are consumed on the farm. Of the amount received from farm marketings, Department of Agriculture figures indicate that 55 percent of it came from the sale of crops and 45 percent from the sale of livestock, poultry and dairy products. Nationally, according to Government reports, the face of farming continues to change. The drive by farmers to increase their acreage goes on, forcing the price of rural land higher and higher. They have found that the big, mechanized units can be brought in on a paying basis only on the larger farms. Wherever they are put to use, however, production efficiency rises. Sales of such machinery are reported increasing for the second year in a row. Last year they amounted to $1.0 billion. As a result of this mechanization, output per man-hour on the farm has been going up at the rate of 6.5 percent a year, which is twice as fast as in manufacturing. It ex-

State Trout Are Studied

Frankfort, Ky.—Kentucky's trout situation is being studied by Federal agents. A three-man crew has arrived from the Federal Fish and Wildlife Service in Atlanta, Ga., to study the trout needs for Kentucky streams and lakes. Aides of the Kentucky Fish and Wildlife Resources Department will work with them and possibly other Federal agents from Washington to come later, according to Bernard T. Carter, director of the Kentucky Division of Fisheries.

A survey last year indicated that expanded hatchery facilities in neighboring states could meet the demand for trout stocking in Kentucky. However, Edward E. Thompson of Louisville, an ardent fisherman, went to Washington in March with a petition of 13,000 signatures which described the study as inadequate. This petition asked a trout hatchery for Kentucky. The living conditions for trout in Kentucky streams is to be studied by the Federal crew, Carter said. A stream is automatically "out" as a trout source, if the temperature is over 70 degrees for optimum conditions, such as those in the trucks which transport them from hatcheries.

Kentucky's Division of Fisheries has been restocking its trout streams with 10,000 to 20,000 pounds a year from the Paint Bank, Va., hatchery, some 500 miles from Frankfort. About 60 truck trips a year are required for this transfer. Director Carter pointed out. The estimated need is 75,000 to 100,000 pounds a year now. Additional help is expected from a trout hatchery new under construction at Celina, Tenn., near the Kentucky state line. The long-range plan of Kentucky's Fish and Wildlife Resources Department would require an annual, assured supply of trout, Director Carter emphasized.

he would be found alive were dim. Times Estimates Vary Some officials estimated the drill may reach the chamber in which Thron and Thron are trapped by 11 a. m. (EDT) while other predicted it would not break through until late in the afternoon or evening.

Gordon Smith, deputy state secretary of mines, and Clyde Macnamer, president of the Independent Miners Association, said the remaining operation may be finished before noon. Petr Hino, a state mine inspector, said it might take until dusk.

The remaining operation proceeded slowly, at the rate of a few feet an hour. Periodic delays were caused when new sections had to be added to the pipe that carries pulverized rock to the surface as the drill goes deeper.

After drilling is completed, the capsule will be lowered to the chamber and raised several times in dry runs before an actual attempt to lift the men to the surface is made. Thron, insisting the tunnel through the smaller shaft, said "We're gonna be like astronaut John Glenn and come shooting out of this hole." "I'll send Hank Thron up first," Pellin shouted later. A rescue worker replied: "I figured you'd say that."

George Gallagher, a friend of the two, Sunday night, warned Thron that there may be "stuff coming down the hole" from the drilling. "We got room down the slope," Thron said, indicating there was space to shunt aside any loose dirt that might fall. "Nothing is falling now."

Elwood Tita, a television repairman from nearby Hazelton who set up much of the communications system to the men, also talked to Thron and told him: "Don't worry, we'll have you fellows up here."

"I don't care if you take me up upside down," Thron said. "Dave said that if he can't get in the capsule, he'll crawl up." Thron then woke up the sleeping Pellin so that he could talk to his wife, Anns, 47. She told him: "Hope you're coming up tomorrow today because I haven't seen you for a long time, Buddy, Buddy."

Smith said that after the hole had been widened, it would require about two hours to withdraw the drill, 30 minutes to hoist the capsule into position and one and a half hours or the test runs with the capsule.

The steel casing was lowered by crane into the 38-foot section of the hole with accuracy of this Smith called "perfect." Another casing, 20 inches in diameter, was inserted inside of it as an additional safety factor.

When Thron and Pellin are brought up, they will be flown by helicopter to a hospital eight miles away.

AMERICAN LOVE STORY That Made European History!
The Amazing Mrs. Bonaparte
BY HARNETT L. KANE

CHAPTER 36
BETSY BONAPARTE repeated edly urged her son Bo to marry only a personage, woman of rank and consequence, whose position would help advance the youth's fight for recognition as a Bonaparte.
Nevertheless, one day in the fall of 1829, while opening her mail at the apartment in Florence, Betsy screamed in hurt and disbelief and fell to the floor.
Her father had just written, without previous intimation, that Bo was about to marry a young Baltimore girl, Susan May Williams, of whom she had never heard.
To friends who rushed to her side, Betsy wept and uttered broken phrases. "How could he—how could he have done this? A nonentity, while I—worked so hard, and so many others helped, to find him a wife to match his rank!"
Groaning, she talked of ambition and pride, "a place in the world that he deserved."
She pointed to the Baltimore girl who was wealthy, but Betsy shook her head. "He could have made a marriage that would have advanced our fight. Instead, he did this."
Putting the clues together, Betsy discovered that the union had been planned for months; many others knew about it, but the announcement to her had been delayed until it was too late to interfere. Her eyes filled with pain when she learned that her father had counseled Bo and helped arrange everything.
All of the Bonapartes, even Jerome—and there was special torment for her in that fact—had been informed; with fresh bitterness she found that practically every Bonaparte had written of his approval, and several sent gifts.
Bo had sent messages to Baltimore. "I have hitherto lived in the meanest, most comfortless manner, as you all know. The miserly way . . . and the beggary shifts to which I have been obliged to resort to collect my present means, have been a great disadvantage to me in every respect . . . I always had in view the duty of providing for my son. I must change my mode of life and make it more expensive. I never can forget the treatment I have been made to experience in the conduct of this marriage."
In time she announced that the marriage "must separate me from my son." She did not write to him, or communicate directly with him, but she said firmly that, no matter what treatment she had received, "no parent has a right to disinherit a child," and she would not do so to Bo. "I should have done exactly the same thing if he had attempted to cut my throat and had failed in the attempt."
For the next few years Betsy devoted herself to her European affairs, and also to the handling

Experiment On Dropouts Will Be Pioneered

FRANKFORT — The Bourbon County Board of Education, Paris, will pioneer in Kentucky—possibly in the nation—a program to reduce dropouts among the county's high school students.
The Board has received a $22,000 Federal grant from the National Vocational Rehabilitation Administration to assist in the first year of a three-year program. Additional funds will be made available for the project in the second and third years.
This Bourbon County work-study program in public schools was approved as a selected demonstration project on the recommendation of the National Advisory Council on Vocational Rehabilitation.
If successful, the cooperative project will be offered to other school districts in the state, according to Ben F. Coffman, head of the State Department of Education's Bureau of Rehabilitation Services, which is cooperating in the project with the Bourbon County Board.
James Melton, superintendent of Bourbon County schools, said William Bolton, supervisor of instruction, will be the director, and Robert Barlow, Bourbon County High School basketball coach, the supervisor of the special project.
Individual interests and skills, personal encouragement, recreation and extensive records will be used. Thomas Jacobs, a Bourbon County native who has been doing graduate work at the University of Kentucky Lexington, in preparation for the project, will record students' developments and needs.
Special teachers also will be employed on a part-time basis. Representatives of the University and of the State Department of Education will serve as consultants.
Kentucky, with a dropout rate in high school of 42.8 per cent, is second in the nation only to Georgia's 43.2 per cent in 1958 freshmen who did not graduate in 1962, according to the latest Federal studies.

Gov. Bert Combs has called a Statewide Conference on Youth August 22-23 in Louisville, sponsored by the Kentucky Commission on Children and Youth. Theme of the meeting will be "School Dropouts—Road to Social Disaster."

Elke Sommer Worked Hard For Position

By VERNON SCOTT
UPI Hollywood Correspondent

HOLLYWOOD EP - Elke Sommer is a German girl who made it to movieland by working as a housemaid in England and winning an Italian beauty contest. She didn't know she had entered.

Americans will get their first look at her in a new movie, "The Prize," but Europeans already have viewed this spectacular fraulein in a half-dozen pictures.

She's blonde, blue-eyed and endowed with a figure that would give Brigitte Bardot an inferiority complex.

She also speaks English like a native while Bardot needs an interpreter. Her way with the language came as a direct result of a seven-month tour as cook, laundress and nursemaid in a private English home where she was paid $7 a week.

Surprised Constant
"It was worth it," said Elke in the M-G-M commissary where she cut into a New York steak for lunch. "I was planning a career as a translator and wanted to learn the language."

Elke, whose father died when she was 14 years old, continued to work at other jobs to help support her mother. Then, three years ago, Elke and her mother took a bus trip to Italy for a vacation.

"When we stopped in the town of Viareggio we went to a night club and an Italian man asked me to dance," Elke explained.

"He gave me a ticket with a number on it, which later turned out to be my entry into a beauty contest they were holding in the town. Well, I won the contest and saw my picture in the paper the next day as Miss Viareggio of 1956."

"An Italian director saw it, too. He rushed up and said he wanted to put me in the movies. I said, 'oh sure,' and told him to go away. But he reappeared with his wife to show he was serious."

A few weeks later Elke was starring in her first picture. From Italy she went back to Germany, France and England to star in additional films. Now she has a three-picture contract with Metro and a bright Hollywood future unless the police run her out of town.

Pretty Speeder
It's not that cops don't appreciate Elke's beauty. It's her driving, especially on the freeways, that make them go crazy.

"So far she has had three traffic tickets in a span of six weeks. "I was warned about the freeways before I came here," Elke said innocently. "But they are nothing compared to the autobahns in Germany. We have no speed limits at home."

"In Germany you are allowed to drive as fast as your car can go. When I tried that here they arrested me.

"And the California freeways are safe compared to the ones in France and Italy. They drive like it was over there."

VOTE AGAINST AID
WASHINGTON (AP) - All seven U.S. representatives from Kentucky voted in favor of cutting the foreign aid bill by $565 million before passing the bill on another vote. The bill passed the House of Representatives by a roll-call vote of 222 to 188.

Dear Abby ... A Reason For Telling!

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am 13 years old and I have a problem. I don't get along with my mother. Everything I do she finds fault with. Did your mother ever say to you, "GO TO BED - YOU'RE SICKENING!" Well, my mother does. I have an older brother, 17, who gets to do anything he wants. My mother always favors him. My father works and is hardly ever home, but when he is, he sides with my mother. I am not lazy. I help around the house, but what do I get? Yelled at, picked on, and criticized. Can you help me?

DISCOURAGED
DEAR DISCOURAGED: If I were asked to select the most trying age (and perhaps the "unluckiest") it would be 13. I'll bet when your brother was 13 he, too, felt unappreciated, picked on and discouraged. At 13 one's emotions are tender, and one's feelings are easily hurt. Toughen up a bit, and try a little harder to please. And before you know it, you'll be 14!

DEAR ABBY: How can otherwise good neighbors lose all consideration for their neighbors by keeping a noisy dog? The idea that children must grow up with a pet to teach them "kindness and consideration" is so much hogwash, since they are learning to be inconsiderate of others by imposing a nuisance on their neighbors. On a stifling summer trouble. And did you ever notice that dog owners put their doghouses as far away from their OWN homes as possible, but usually right under a neighbor's bedroom window? I don't hate dogs, but I think people who can't train their dogs to be quiet should take their dogs and move to the country.

CITY DWELLER
DEAR ABBY: I have been married only two years and recently a problem has come up that has really put an end to our honeymoon. My husband and I agreed that 8:30 would be the best time to eat our dinner. Shortly before dinner time, he disappears and we wind up fighting over cold food. I've hollered myself hoarse, but he's visiting in the home of a neighbor somewhere and can't hear us. How can I break him of this habit?

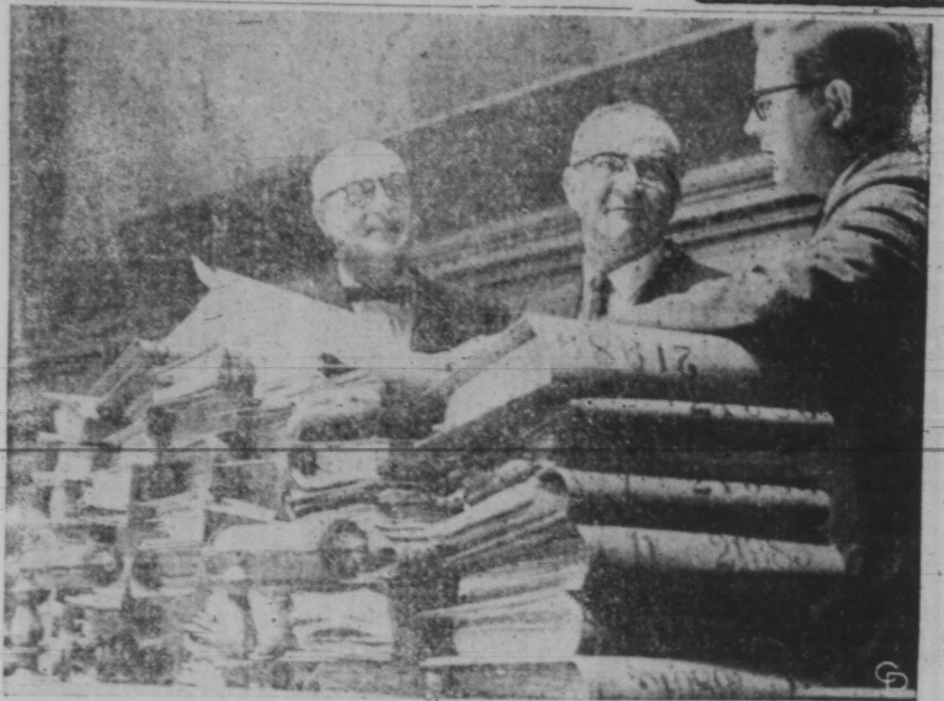

COLD FISH, CHICKEN AND ROAST
DEAR COLD: You could hire bloodhounds, but that would run into money. Or chain him to the table at 5:15, but he'd be too angry to eat. Your best solution is to leave everything in the oven until you see the whites of your husband's eyes. If it's the food that's dried and over-cooked, but it will never be cold.

35,000 PAGES OF TESTIMONY - Interstate Commerce Commission officials are shown in Washington with testimony in the longest railroad merger case ever heard, that of the New York Central and Pennsylvania, which began its second year Aug. 20. The 456 witnesses entered millions of words in the 35,000 pages of testimony on the table. From left: Jerome K. Lyle, chief examiner, ICC finance bureau; Lawrence K. TIPS From An Expert

By JOAN O'SULLIVAN

WOMEN have long been copying the First Lady's fashions. Now they're following her lead when it comes to decorating.

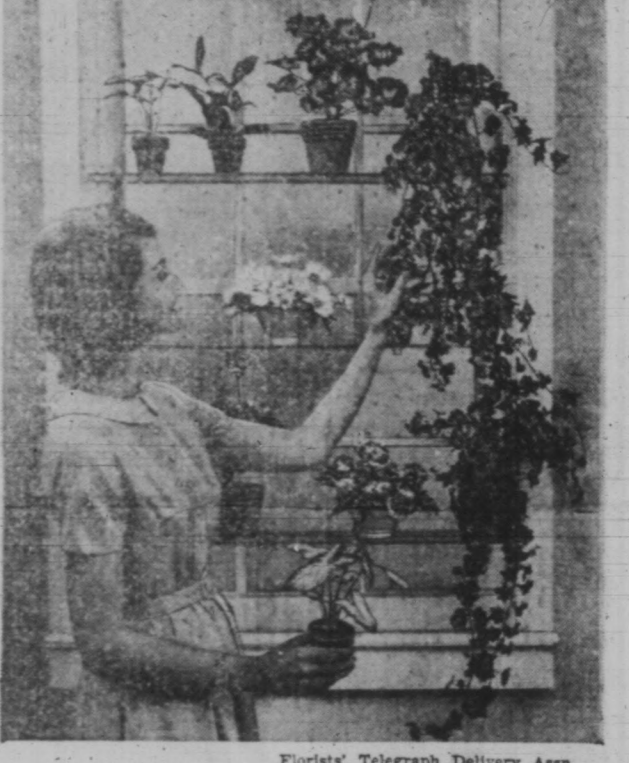

That's the opinion of an expert, Melvin Dwork, who served on a national decorating committee for the diplomatic reception room of the White House.

Floral Accessories
For example, he says, Jacqueline Kennedy's love of flowers has made women everywhere more aware of them and how effective they can be as home accessories.

"Bouquets bring warmth to a setting," says Mr. Dwork. "Plants and flowers also add texture.

"That's one reason why flowers make the perfect 'make gift.' You can wire them to friends anywhere and you can't go wrong," he suggests, "because they'll fit in with any kind of decor.

Always Right
"Choosing an ash tray, statue or some other accessory for a gift can be a tricky business. It just may not fit in. But flowers of house plants are always right." Mrs. Kennedy's preference for informal arrangements is one women are copying in a big way, says Mr. Dwork, who suggests flowers for every room in the house. Flowers and plants displayed on window shelves, he says, make a most delightful window dressing.

Blooming Ideas
Flowers can also be combined with other accessories to brighten table tops and buffets. And what's more effective than a floral arrangement on the dining table?

Avoid Clutter
Women should also be wary of clutter, he advises. It exhausts the eye. Don't group too many accessories or too many wall hangings together.

What other tips does this expert suggest for home decorators? Here's a list: 1. Don't use different wallpaper patterns in different rooms that open on each other.

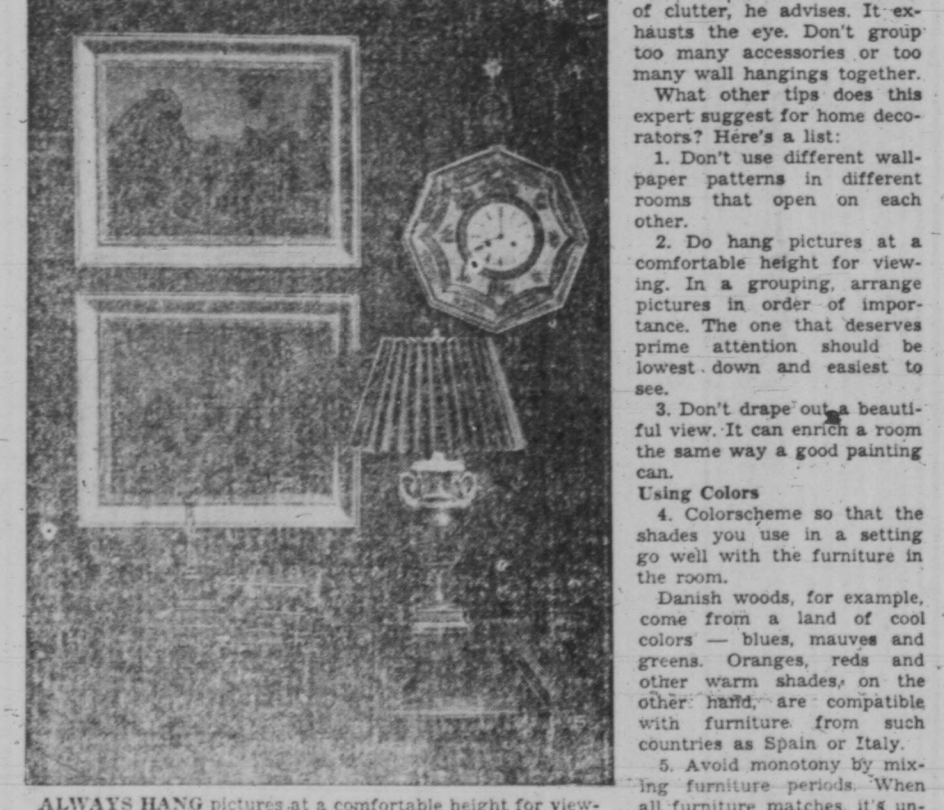

2. Do hang pictures at a comfortable height for viewing. In a grouping, arrange pictures in order of importance. The one that deserves prime attention should be lowest, down and easiest to see.

3. Don't drape out a beautiful view. It can enrich a room the same way a good painting can.

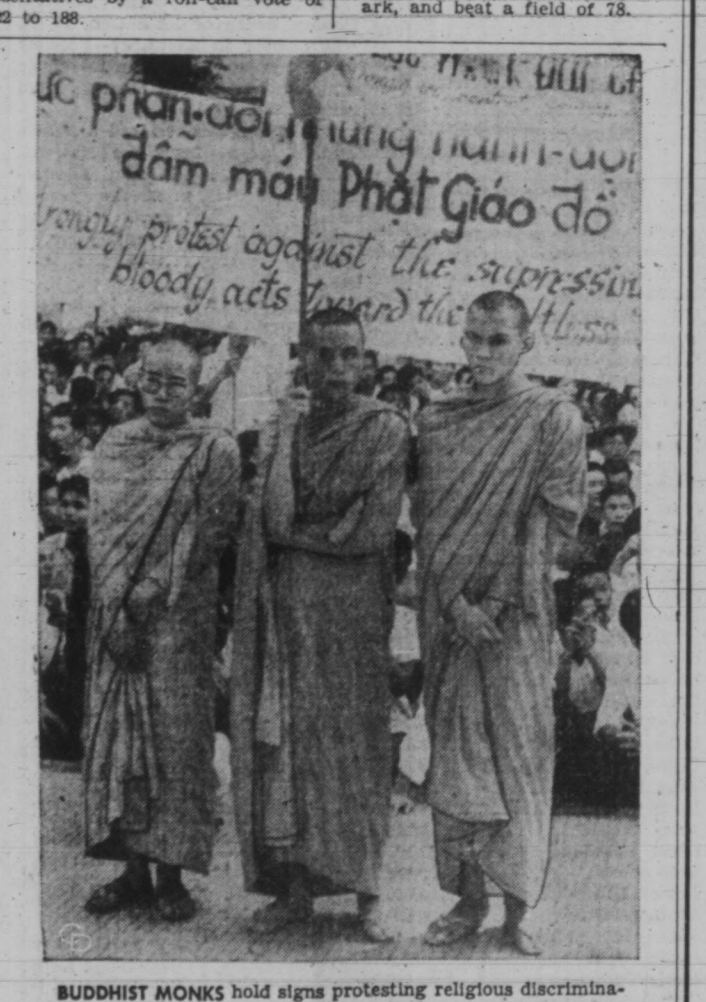

Using Colors
4. Colorscheme so that the shades you use in a setting go well with the furniture in the room.

Danish woods, for example, come from a land of cool colors - blues, mauves and greens. Oranges, reds and other warm shades, on the other hand, are compatible with furniture from such countries as Spain or Italy.

5. Avoid monotony by mixing furniture periods. When all furniture matches, it's uninteresting.

ALWAYS HANG pictures at a comfortable height for viewing, advises Melvin Dwork, who arranged this grouping.
