OSCAR FRALEY

UPI Sports Writer

EVERGLADES CITY, Fla. (AP) - Eighty-six year old Charlie Boggs sat on his screened in front porch and watched across barren River to the swank Everglades Rod and Gun Club lodge.

"I can remember when that was a little four-room building and I went to school there," said the first guide in the history of the Everglades.

"Now they get people like former President's Dwight Eisenhower and Harry Truman."

Boggs is a relic of the past while the Rod and Gun Club is a testimonial to the future of a peaceful spot where pelicans and sea-gulls wheel through the scented air and the tarpon roll temptingly in the clear waters. "Old Charlie" knows all about what went before. His grandpappy came down out of Georgia to settle in this fishing paradise and his father was one of the early plumbeared alligator hunters.

Kept Head Only

"Feller named Ed Ferguson started hunting snappers first," he recalled while the white-haired woman to whom he has been married 65 years sat quietly watching him. "All he kept was the head because with the teeth for a dollar a pound. They made ladies' pins out of the biggest teeth, watch fobs out of the medium sized ones and earrings from the small ones. Imagine all the ladies' pocketbooks that went floating down the river."

And, he grinned, since the Cuban market has been shut off for alligator skins, "there's a lot of bootlegging going on around here in alligator skins."

The Rod and Gun Club lodge was built in 1920 but recently, as the western entrance to Everglades National Park, it has been completely refurbished. There is an eight foot channel to the Gulf of Mexico, a 1,000-foot dock, 58 new motel units and a screened in swimming pool.

Have Good Fishing

"Biggest snapper I ever caught," said old Charlie, "was 187 pounds. They're still out there, too. We have good fishing all the time."

Old Charlie and his wife had seven children, 27 grandchildren and it would take all week to count our chackheads great grandchildren.

"Snapper" Butt, one of Charlie's grandsons, is one of the many guides available for hire but he doesn't promise to match old Charlie's feats. "By the time, I know as much about the waters around here," said Snapper modestly, "I'll be sitting up on the porch watchin' my grandchildren."

UCLA Ranks First In UPI Poll For The Fifth Week

NEW YORK (AP) - UCLA, aiming to bring the national basketball title back to the West Coast for the first time in four years and join an exclusive group of unbeaten champions, today ranked No. 1 in the United Press International major college ratings for the fifth straight week.

The Bruins own the only perfect record among major teams and if they can survive a schedule which calls for six games away from home in the remaining time, they could become only the fourth unbeaten UPI champion since the ratings were instituted in 1960.

The last West Coast champion was California in 1960. The North Carolina tilts of 1957, the San Francisco team of the '55-'56 season and Ohio State's '60-'61 quater are the only perfect-record champs.

For the third consecutive week 22 of the 35 coaches on the UPI rating board ranked UCLA No. 1 and awarded the same point total of 346, four points less than a perfect rating.

Michigan received two first-place

Duke from eighth to seventh. Vanderbilt, victimized by Auburn, suffered the biggest drop in the ratings, skidding from fifth to eighth. Loyola of Chicago rebounded from a pair of losses two weeks ago with three wins last week to tighten its grip on ninth and Oregon State, winner of 18 games, coasted to rank 10th.

The ratings were based on games played through Saturday, Feb. 1.

Michigan and Kentucky continued to rank 2-3, respectively. Soaring Wichita, 12th three weeks ago, rose from sixth to fourth on the strength of its unblemished Missouri Valley Conference record.

Little Davidson, which absorbed its first loss last week on a goal-tending play in the final second, slipped from fourth to fifth. Villanova and Duke made the only other advances in the top 10. Villanova jumped from seventh to sixth and

CHAPTER 10
AT THE BISHOP'S first few words a low murmuring ran through the crowd. Laura Hart, who had been brought up almost inside of hunt kennels, thought of sounds. The quarry was not in sight-but a hint, a faint and elusive hint, of his presence had reached the keenest noses of the pack.
And in some curious way and still without understanding she knew what he was saying. He was speaking of the glories of "Heiligen Land Tirol"; of the traditions of the hardy mount-tain folk who lived there, a small, but very precious fragment of the human family, isolated in difficult, sterile, betrayed. Betrayed. She felt certain he had used that word, and as he spoke it the crowd broke into a deep, baying roar of applause.
Laura looked at the platform. On one side of the Bishop, Dr. Miller sat impassive. On the other, Hofrat Humboldt was stirring. He cast a glance, first toward the crowd, then at the other distinguished guests, a chief secretary from Vienna, the honorary colonel of the regiment, and a number of other people whose functions she could only dimly guess.
The Diplomatic Corps was concentrating with the painful attention of men who would have to summarize and pass on to their superiors, in Paris, Berlin, London and The Hague, every word that was now being spoken.
Laura's attention was again attracted to the crowd. It was undoubtedly enthusiastic, but it was not entirely unanimous. References to the virtues and sufferings of the Tyrolese were applauded, but when the speaker, his eyes burning in his white face, turned his artillery on the oppressors, when he spoke-and she could hear the woman in the voice-of the "Joeh der Italiener" she could sense a restlessness in some parts of the crowd.
The group that she had noticed before, standing opposite the lampost immediately opposite to her, appeared to be

Miss Janice Cherry Honored Saturday With Luncheon

Miss Janice Lou Cherry, bride-elect of Richard Paul Sutton, was complimented with a lovely luncheon at the Murray Woman's Club House on Saturday, February 1, at noon.

The gracious hostesses for the occasion were Mrs. Dewey Ragdale, Mrs. Tom Rowlett, and Mrs. Hugh Houston.

For the pre-nuptial event the honoree chose to wear a beautiful bluish suit and her mother, Mrs. Oliver Cherry, wore a white suit. They were each presented with hostesses' gift corsages of pink carnations.

Miss Cherry was presented with a toaster-oven as a wedding gift from the hostesses.

The tables were beautifully decorated in the color scheme of pink and white. An arrangement of pink and white flowers topped with a miniature bride statuette adorned the table. English ivy interspersed with white wedding bells on the table and the mantel further added to the attractiveness of the room. Place cards in the bridal motif completed the decorations.

Covers were laid for Mesdames B. H. Houston, grandmother of the honoree, James R. J. Albritton, Verne Kyle, Conrad Jones, Elliott Wear, R. L. Ward, C. Caldwell, Holmes Ellis, Robert W. Hise, and Herman K. Ellis; Misses Mary Anna Wallace, Anne Wraether, Linda Marine, Lillian Tate, Frances Brown, and Lottie Sauter; the honoree, her mother, and the hostesses.

House With Movable Wall Is Forecast

By DOROTHEA M. BROOKS
United Press International

NEW YORK (AP) — Johns-Manville Corporation, peering into the future, gives the home-owner something to look forward to.

The building products firm, polling leading architects and design engineers, came up with the following picture of the home of the future:

"A new kind of house with movable partitions and conveniently-located push-button panel control over almost every phase of indoor and outdoor living, growing out of the increasing use of electronics and automation now gathering momentum."

"Just as the housewife now can control her automobile automatically, opening and closing windows, raising and lowering convertible tops, starting the engine, so she will be operating her home of the future: automatically opening and closing house and garage doors and windows, turning heat or air conditioning on or off, switching on or off inside or outside light arrangements, and activating or stopping numerous other labor-saving devices all from one conveniently-located push-button operations panel."

Exterior Unchanged
John-Manville feels the home of tomorrow won't look much different from those going up now, but said construction methods will change considerably.

Some change in structural form, such as roofs of warped planes and domes, and some planning based on the circle rather than the square, is indicated. In fact, some of these interesting shapes have appeared already in special purpose buildings such as churches, auditoriums and convention halls.

However, J-M predicts the greatest changes in the immediate future will take place inside the house.

It won't be long, the company says, before nearly every new house will be air conditioned. Particled will be brought inside; some will have translucent glass fiber roofs and windbreaker sidealls. Ceilings will disappear. But the old-fashioned attic, it seems, is here to stay. Because water supply is becoming of increasing concern throughout the nation, it seems likely shower baths will utilize sprays of mist instead of wasteful jets of water.

Interior partitions in many homes will be movable, as in Japanese houses, allowing for contraction and expansion of space to suit the changing needs of the family.

Much needed building code changes will be forced by the pressure of expanding population and dwindling building sites.

Code changes, Johns-Manville said, will permit construction of small multiple-unit dwellings — something between present type apartment buildings and the individual home. Attached houses will offer advantages for family life at moderate cost, including direct access, convenient car storage, private use of land and individual ownership.

These new dwellings will offer a family freedom, convenience and pride of ownership missing in apartment life. Compared to the individual home, they will require less land per family, share cost of common walls with adjoining houses and effect other savings on utility lines and access roads.

BAKER PARTNER—Ernest C. Baker, law partner of Bobby Baker, former Senate Democratic secretary, looks a bit tense on leaving the closed-door hearing at which Baker's outside activities are being investigated. His testimony wasn't revealed but he was described as "a very cooperative witness."

Dear Abby . . . Time Has Flown!

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: A year ago last November my daughter was married in Las Vegas. She was four months along then, but to save face, we told everybody she had been secretly married in June. Right after her high school graduation, her husband was in the Army but was able to get a 10-day emergency leave at that time. Now he won't be able to come home again until he is discharged in October, when our grandson will be a year, and a half old.

Everything happened so fast there wasn't time for showers or even a wedding reception. The kids will have to start housekeeping from scratch and they don't have a thing. Would it be proper to give them a big shower-type wedding reception when her husband gets back?

WONDERING
DEAR WONDERING: You may honor the couple with a "party," but I wouldn't recommend a "shower-type wedding reception" for parents of a one-and-a-half-year-old child.

DEAR ABBY: Recently our son brought a girl to our home so we could meet her. He is probably serious about her because he never brought a girl home for us to meet before. Well, that boy could not sit down without this girl plopping herself on his lap. She always had to be holding his hand, smoothing his hair and she would not let him out of her sight for one minute. We tried hard to like her, Abby, but she was disgusting! Our son is a college junior and so is she. If you were us, would you tell your son what you thought of such a bratty girl?

HIS MOTHER
DEAR MOTHER: Only if he asked me.

DEAR ABBY: Can you tell me why the brides who never found the time to get out their thank-you notes always manage to find the time to get out the birth announcements?

MISSISSIPPI MRS.
DEAR MRS.: That's not always the case. It just seems that way.

CONFIDENTIAL TO BET: You expect too much. The nearest most people come to perfection is when they are filling out an employment application.

New Scout Merit Badges Are Announced

Three new Boy Scout Merit Badges

and revision in the requirements for eight other merit badges have been made by the Boy Scouts of America, according to W. W. Ferguson, chairman of the advancement committee of the Four Rivers Council.

The new merit badges listed in the 1964 edition of the "Boy Scout Requirements" are for atomic energy, electronics, and model design and building, Ferguson said.

"Boys of Scout age are concerned about education and occupation decisions that they must make in the next few years," Ferguson explained, and "Scouting's answer to these boys' needs is the merit badge plan with more than 100 subjects to help boys explore both vocational and hobby interests."

Requirements for the atomic energy merit badge include giving the meaning of 20 words and terms, construction of three-dimensional models, diagrams and demonstrations, knowledge about scientists, and three major projects.

The electronics merit badge includes requirements related to a schematic diagram, wiring a circuit, explaining the purposes of the components in the circuit, explaining the purposes of the components in the circuit, and a major electronic project.

For the model design and building merit badge, a Scout must create a design for a passenger carrying vehicle, build and paint a three-dimensional model, and demonstrate that the project shows individual creativity, originality and practicality and craftsmanship.

New requirements have been approved for archery, architecture, and skiing merit badges. There are minor changes for the dairying, first aid to animals, personal fitness, printing, and world brotherhood merit badges.
