KHRUSHCHEV CAN GET TOUGHER, HE SAYS

First Reserves May Be Called In About 2 Months

By CHARLES CORDRY
 United Press International
 WASHINGTON (UPI) — Mobilization of the first military reserve units under President Kennedy's preparedness plan may be ordered in about two months, authorities said today.

They said units may be notified this month to be on alert for possible call-up. But they do not actually would be on active duty before the end of September.

Kennedy has indicated Air Force units would get the first calls. The door was opened to call-up of as many as 250,000 members of organized reserve forces and the National Guard when the House gave final congressional approval Monday to a measure giving Kennedy mobilization authority he requested. The vote was 403-2.

Besides the summoning of reserve units and selected individuals to active duty for as much as 12 months, the resolution empowered the Chief Executive to extend for a year the tours of duty of men now in service.

It further authorized the administration to extend the annual training periods of some reserve units beyond the normal two weeks. Two-to four-week extensions are contemplated.

While the administration sought the mobilization power urgently, Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara promised to use it sparingly.

So far, it was reported, no notifications have gone to state governors concerning National Guard units that should be on alert.

It was expected that ample notice would be given so that disruptions and hardships could be minimized.

Russian Women Peer With Mixed Feelings At Utopian Future

By ALINE MOSBY
 United Press International
 MOSCOW (UPI) — Russian women peered with mixed feelings today into the utopian future predicted by Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev's new 20-year economic program.

At least one Moscow housewife was less than enchanted with the anticipation of being spared the "household toil" of rearing children and cooking the family's food.

"I want my children home with me," she said firmly. "And we all want to eat my cooking."

Khrushchev's blueprint foresees that by 1980 the state will rear the children from the cradle — with parental consent — and families will dine in public halls, catered by the state.

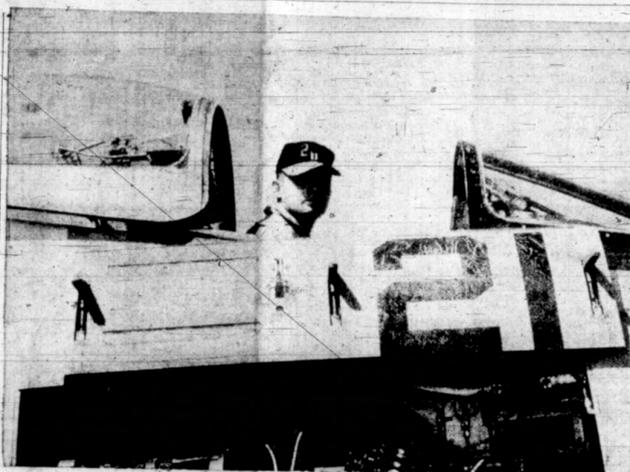

Pre-school children will be installed in state nurseries and kindergartens "within coming years" if the parents wish, the program states. After 1970, "every family can send their children to free boarding schools."

The Soviet viewpoint, stressed often in women's magazines, is that qualified teachers can rear children better than mothers can.

A top Soviet government economist, Stanislaw Strumilin, said recently that every Soviet infant would be assigned to a nursery, then to a kindergarten, then to a boarding school.

"Father and mother can visit their children after working hours," he said. "The parents will live in apartment houses with full services. Women will be freed from cooking."

By the time "pure communism" arrives in 1980, "electric mixers and dishwashers and fancy stoves will not be needed by Russian women because they will eat in public dining rooms," the program predicts.

Stiffer Measures By U.S. Will Bring Tougher Berlin Attitude

By ACVIN SPIVAK
 United Press International
 WASHINGTON (UPI) — Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev has warned President Kennedy that stiffer U. S. military measures to meet the Berlin crisis will spark a tougher attitude on the part of the Russians, high officials said today.

But the Soviet leader, in his talks last week with presidential disarmament adviser John J. McCloy, still left some room open for possible negotiations of the smouldering issue.

McCloy reported to the President and Secretary of State Dean Rusk late Monday on Khrushchev's statements made to the U. S. official during two days of talks at the Soviet leader's Black Sea vacation retreat.

Officials said Khrushchev, was "as tough as he was in Vienna" and his reaction to the President's plan for increased U. S. and Allied military might was "pretty veiled."

They added, however, that the Soviet premier set forth no new demands or issued no specific ultimatums. His principal threat was in his declaration to McCloy that "if the United States is going to take a tough line then the Russians will take a tough line."

Officials were emphatic in saying that Khrushchev, in the McCloy talk and his message to Kennedy, had not injected any greater element of crisis into the situation.

The net result of Khrushchev's statements, high officials said, was simply to confirm the wisdom of Kennedy's plans for a military buildup paralleled by an intensive effort to seize the diplomatic initiative on the Berlin issue and try to place Khrushchev on the propagandistic defensive.

Meanwhile, the White House would not give any details of the verbal message McCloy delivered to Kennedy.

"We are going to have nothing to say about it over here," White House press secretary Pierre Salinger said when newsmen asked if any disclosures would be made on the message.

Salinger said there were no plans for Kennedy to confer again with McCloy as a follow-up to their hour-long discussion at the White House Monday night.

Asked if McCloy had come 5,000 miles for a one-hour conference with Kennedy, Salinger grinned and said, "You can say an awful lot in an hour."

Salinger said the President did not say anything to Democratic congressional leaders about the message during their regular White House meeting today.

Facts In Accident Story Are Incorrect

Facts in an accident story in yesterday's Ledger and Times were incorrect.

The story reported that Miss Emma Rogers of Springville, Tennessee and Charles Lee Porter of Mississippi were involved in an accident near the 641 Slaughter House, with Miss Rogers receiving a black eye and Porter a bloody nose.

Actually those in the Rogers car were Mr. and Mrs. Opal D. Rogers of Springville, Tennessee where Mr. Rogers is a school teacher. Mrs. Rogers did receive a black eye and it was Mr. Rogers who received the blow on the nose.

Porter was the driver of the "piggy back" truck which passed the Rogers car at the time of the accident.

The Ledger and Times regrets the publication of this incorrect story.

Civil Defense Plan Could Save Millions

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara told Congress today several million Americans — perhaps several tens of millions — might be killed in a nuclear attack on the United States.

McNamara, who took over national responsibility for civil defense today under a presidential order, spelled out Kennedy's program in testimony before a House military operations subcommittee.

The subcommittee, led by Rep. Chet Holifield, D-Calif., opened two weeks of public hearings today to take a close look at the program "so that pitfalls and errors of the past may be avoided."

McNamara said the new administration plan calls for locating and marking great quantities of community shelter space in existing buildings throughout the United States.

He said the goal is to find enough shelter spaces for 50 million Americans, or one-fourth of the population.

McNamara said the United States still does not have any effective defense against enemy missiles. Even in the case of an attack by bombers, he said, some probably would "penetrate our defenses far enough to release their weapons."

The defense secretary said millions would be killed but a "comparatively modest" civil defense program could provide a great deal of protection for people not close to the explosion points.

Dr. Ammons Joins Houston-McDevitt

Dr. Hugh I. Houston, president of the Houston-McDevitt Clinic, announced the addition to the medical staff today of Dr. James Ray Ammons, recently of Memphis, Tennessee.

Dr. Ammons is a native of Western Kentucky and the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Ammons of Cayce, Kentucky in Fulton County. He graduated from Cayce High School in 1949 and worked on the Santa Fe Railroad until entering the Marine Corp during the Korean War. He received his college training at Memphis State College. He was graduated from the University of Tennessee College of Medicine in 1960 and served his internship appointment at Methodist Hospital, Memphis.

Dr. Ammons received his medical education with the assistance of the Kentucky State Medical Association's R. F. T. Scholarship Fund. The people in Calloway County will remember this program as one in which they set up two scholarships for the training of rural physicians.

Dr. Ammons states, "I feel a moral obligation to the rural people of Kentucky for aiding me in my medical education and I wish to serve in the capacity of family physician for all of the people in Calloway County who desire my services."

Dr. Ammons is married to the former Miss Lois Friden, of Minneapolis, Minnesota. They have one son, Scott, age 5, and are residing at 1504 Henry Street. Dr. and Mrs. Ammons are members of the Methodist Church.

10,000 Persons Routed After Ammonia Fumes Cover Area

By WILLIAM FEURER
 CREVE COEUR, Ill. (UPI) — Deadly ammonia fumes poured out of a ruptured brage pipeline across 12 square miles today and routed an estimated 10,000 persons from their homes before dawn.

Police and civil defense teams evacuated residents of Creve Coeur and three surrounding north central Illinois towns. Hospital staffs in two counties treated more than a score of injured.

By 8 a. m. (EDT) most of the evacuees had returned to their homes and Peoria Health Director Dr. Fred Long said the "emergency is now over." Only "occasional pockets" of gas remained and the wind, blowing northwest at about 7 miles per hour, was not expected to shift suddenly, he said.

Widespread Confusion
 The acrid fumes from a highly pressurized 300,000-pound tank on the barge became hazardous around midnight. Authorities ordered evacuation of about half of Creve Coeur's 5,500 population and virtually all persons at Marquette Heights, Bartonville, three miles west, and North Pekin, four miles south on the Illinois river.

Evacuations led to widespread confusion. The Creve Coeur firehouse was deserted when every available man rushed to the scene. A Peoria police lieutenant said casually and rescue reports were uncoordinated.

"If I knew the answers to all these questions, I'd be a lot further along than I am now," he said.

Most of the injured were fire-

East Germans Warned Of Epidemic

BERLIN (UPI) — The East German Communists warned their people they face a polio epidemic and a future as possible slave laborers if they flee to West Germany. But the Reds made no immediate attempts to enforce new threatened travel controls between East and West Germany.

Under the guise of fighting the spread of polio, the East German Health Ministry Monday night called for unspecified restrictions on travel between the two zones. The announcement did not say where or how the restrictions would be enforced.

Western observers saw the moves as a tactic of mass fear psychology and a prelude to new Communist travel regulations to halt the flow of East German refugees to the West.

West German health authorities denied there was a polio epidemic, but said there was a serious outbreak of the disease, especially in the state of North Rhine-Westphalia.

Simultaneously with making the polio epidemic charges the East German "democratic bloc" representatives all East German political parties and mass organizations accused the Western allies of using West Berlin to lure East Germans to the West through corruption, threats and money.

Insurance Fraud Costs This Nation Almost 350 Million Dollars A Year

By FRANK L. SPENCER

CHICAGO (UPI) — It was a familiar scene: An accident on the highway. Police cars, ambulances and wreckers. A priest giving last rites to one of the victims.

Because of that scene and others like it, 20 persons were arrested at Jackson, Miss. The charge was not dangerous driving but insurance fraud.

The accidents were faked in an attempt to mult insurance companies, faked so skillfully that a clerkman unknowingly prayed for the soul of one "victim."

Such fraud rings may be unusual, but the problem is not. The insurance industry says cheating on automobile insurance is almost "a national moral sickness."

It now costs the nation some $350 million a year.

Have YOU complained lately about high automobile insurance rates?

Have YOU cheated your automobile insurance firm recently?

The men whose companies pay for your bent fenders and broken bones are inclined to think you're not happy with the rates. And they strongly suspect not everybody is being honest with the claims department.

These men say the questions are related. They say insurance cheating means high rates. And from hereon and hereinafter this story winds down a highway cluttered with facts, opinions, allegations and threats, involving doctors, lawyers, garagemen, racketeers and ordinary drivers just like you.

"The way of the transgressor is easy and his paths are paved with gold," said Fletcher B. Coleman, vice president of the State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co., Bloomington, Ill.

"A tremendous new industry has emerged from our modern motorized civilization," Coleman told an insurance meeting here.

This is the injury industry, a vast legal and financial jungle in which about $4 billion is being expended each year.

Because it is a new industry because it has exploded into immensity almost without being identified, this injury industry rears the temptations or rich rewards to those who will not let personal morals, ethics or conscience stand in the way of a fast dollar.

"Given an even choice, most PLANE PIRATE — Wilfredo Roman Oquendo, native Cuban who left a wife and two children behind in Miami where he worked as a waiter, has been charged by the FBI as the man who forced an Eastern Airlines plane to fly his turbo-jet Extra to Havana. The 36-year-old modern-day pirate used the name of Jose Marin when he bought his one-way ticket to Tampa.

people are basically honest, but the injury industry is infested with unscrupulous transgressors who violate the ethics of their profession or the business principles of their trades.

"They are costing us money," Coleman said, "since this is you and I and other purchasers of automobile insurance who provide the funds on which these operators flourish."

Another insurance man of less vivid prose put it this way: "The casualty industry, which seeks to hold insurance premiums at a rate within the reach of the average driver, is increasingly concerned that the growing prevalence of both petty and major fraud, combined with increasing traffic bills, can create a crisis by driving insurance rates beyond the reach of the average motorists."

Local situations across the country have caused concern in several cities. Newspapers have attacked the problem. Among them is the Seattle Times, which carried a series of stories, some of them headlined: "Car insurance cheats cause of high insurance rate," and "Some garages con-showed more nerve. They participated in 23 known rear-end accidents, halting their car on a highway in the path of a truck. Last year 11 persons were killed at Akron, Ohio, on charges of filing $235,000 worth of fraudulent claims.

In most of these cases garage men connived with the cheaters. According to the insurance people it is no trick to find a garage man willing to hike the estimate for repairing a wrecked car.

New York has been hit by a $10-million-a-year tow truck racket. A grand jury investigation has shown some garages maintained trucks equipped with illegal police radios. Officials charged that tow truck drivers raced to the scene of a crash and got stunned drivers to sign papers agreeing to repairs.

Then, in the garage, any car that was not sufficiently damaged was beaten with a crowbar to up the repair bill.

But that is not all. The two truck drivers allegedly tipped off lawyers and doctors and even some insurance adjusters were suspected of joining in on the blking.

Insurance sources say there's no way of knowing the dollars and cents total for such fraud. But they estimate $12 million is paid each day for bodily injury and physical damage. One report figured perhaps 10 per cent of this involves some degree of fraud.

Shell experts test for knock by accelerating up steep grade. In another test, that "fifth wheel" on the back is lowered onto the road to measure mileage precisely.

TOP PERFORMANCE:

Shell test crew reveals five ways to test your car for top performance—and how the 9 ingredients in today's Super Shell can help you get it

To John Baker and John Watson (below) of Shell Research, top performance is a scientific standard. They measure it with precision instruments. But any good driver can run a version of their basic tests. Here are five they recommend.

Test #1. Quick starting
Count the seconds it takes to start your car. The engine should "snap" to in about two to three seconds. A slow start drains your battery. And it may flood your cylinders, causing performance troubles.
If your engine is balky, try Super Shell. It's blended with a frisky ingredient called Butane — to give you quick, easy starts.

Test #2. Smooth running
Pay close attention to your engine in traffic.
Does it vibrate roughly when you stop for a traffic light? Does it seem to "surge" as you pull away, then falter and fade?
The problem may be the wrong blend of gasoline.
In summer, for example, excessive heat can make winter grade gasoline bubble in the fuel line, causing rough running. Shell scientists don't let that happen with Super Shell. When hot weather threatens, they adjust Super Shell's 9-ingredient formula to give it the correct volatility for smooth summer driving.

Test #3. Reserve power
On a turnpike, in light traffic, accelerate suddenly from about thirty miles an hour to the legal limit. Now ask yourself:
1. Did your car accelerate smoothly—with no faltering, no bogging down?
2. Do you have plenty of power to spare?
If you feel you've "run out of engine," it's time to do something about it.
Super Shell may be your answer. It contains TCP, to help restore power lost to combustion chamber deposits.
And another Super Shell ingredient, called Platformate, contains components that release 11 per cent more energy than even the finest of 100-octane aviation gasolines.

Test #4. Knock
Accelerate up a long, steep hill and listen carefully. If you hear a sound like marbles falling into an empty oil drum, you've got knock. It could cause engine trouble.
Take no chances. Switch to Super Shell. Its formula includes no less than three ingredients to fight the various causes of knock.

Test #5. Miles per gallon
Don't trust your fuel gauge when you measure miles per gallon. Take these three simple steps and be sure.
1. Start your test by filling your tank. Make sure the gasoline comes up to the brim. Write down your mileage reading.
2. Drive in your normal manner for at least three tankfuls — keeping a record of the exact amount you buy.
3. Finally, fill your tank to the brim again. Add up all the gallons you've bought (not counting the initial fill-up in step 1). Divide this amount into your total miles driven. This gives you your miles per gallon.
Try this test with three tankfuls of Super Shell. You'll see what top performance really is.
A Bulletin from Shell Research — where 4,997 scientists are working to make your car go better and better.

Super Shell's 9 ingredients for top performance
Super Shell now contains 2 octane boosters, 1 mileage booster, 1 quick-start component, 1 fast warm-up ingredient, 1 anti-knock mix, 1 gum preventive, 1 anti-stall ingredient, and new, improved TCP. These nine ingredients all work together to give your car top performance.

SHOT PLANNED

MOSCOW (UP) — The Soviet Union plans to attempt another manned space shot within the next few weeks, reliable sources said Monday.

The source said that Yuri Gagarin, who currently is on a good-will tour of Brazil, will not pilot the flight.

The new attempt will orbit the earth more than once and will be guided by the cosmonaut himself. During his historic trip, Gagarin circled the earth only once.

Late News Briefs

By United Press International
BOSTON (UP) — The Major League players favor continuation of two All Star games a year, their spokesman said today.

Have Enough
They now have enough money in their pension fund, said Frank Scott, agent for the players. Scott refused to predict what the players would recommend but several of them have changed their minds since last spring and it may be that the unsatisfactory finish of Monday's game might be the factor that will turn the players against the present format.

Actually, no one, especially the 31,851 fans in Fenway Park, liked the final outcome. Some were critical of the umpires in waiting less than a half-hour before calling the game. But Erick had instructed them not to wait more than 30 minutes and not to resume play if the field were soft.

"I told them I didn't want to risk injuries to the players because of poor playing conditions," Erick said.

Both Danny Murtagh, manager of the National League, and Paul Richards of the American League professed satisfaction with the tie.

"We played 19 innings and there was only one run difference," pointed out Richards. "His squad was beaten, 5-4, in 10 innings in the first game in San Francisco on July 11.

"I'm mighty pleased with my team," said Murtagh, "refusing to single out any player for praise.

Preserves Tie
But the player who preserved the tie for his team was Stu Miller, the junk-ball right-hander of the San Francisco Giants, who was winning hurler in the first All-Star Game.

This time it looked like he was going to be the loser, for Al Kaline of the Tigers opened the bottom of the ninth with a single as the rain, which had started falling in the eighth inning, came down harder and harder.

Miller struck out New York Yankee slugger Mickey Mantle and while pitching to another Yankee hitting star, Elston Howard, Kaline stole second.

Unperturbed, Miller, with his assortment of change-ups and sneaky fast balls, proceeded to strike out Howard.

Trying to beat the rain, Richards sent Roy Sievers, the long-ball hitting first baseman of the Chicago White Sox, up to hit for his teammate, shortstop Luis Aparicio. Sievers worked the count to three and two and also struck out. The umpires then called time and after a 22-minute wait called the game.

Battle Of Pitchers
Pitching dominated the game. The National League had five hits, only one of them for extra bases, a double by Bill White, the St. Louis Cardinals' first baseman who drove in the tying run later in the game. The American League got only four hits, but one of them was a home run by Rocky Colavito of the Detroit Tigers. It came in the first inning off Bob Purkey, the 13-game winner of the Cincinnati Reds. It was a lofted fly ball that just cleared the short left field wall.

After that blow, the American League never mounted a serious threat until the ninth inning.

Jim Bunning, the Detroit Tigers right-hander who started for the American League, pitched three perfect innings, making it five for the year as he also retired the

All-Star Game Ends In Tie For First Time In History; Players Thinking May Have Changed On Two Game Program

By LEO H. PETERSEN

BOSTON (UP) — The #1 rain-soaked tie in 1961's second All-Star Game may have sounded the death knell for the two-year inter-league games program started three years ago.

"Everyone, it seems, is against two games a year except the players. They proposed the second game and insisted that two be played each year in order to enrich their pension fund.

But there were indications they were coming around to the thinking of Baseball Commissioner Ford Frick and the club owners that fans will lose interest if two All-Star Games are played each season.

The players voted, 508-34, last spring to continue the two-year program and the player representatives met today to decide whether to go back to the one-a-season game.

six men he faced in the San Francisco game.

All of the National League hits came off Don Schwall, the rookie right-hander of the Boston Red Sox who has won 11 games.

He yielded singles to shortstop Maury Wills of the Los Angeles Dodgers and Willie Mays of the Giants in the fourth inning but then bore down and retired the side without being scored on.

In the fifth, White led off with a double and went to third as Frank Bolling of the Milwaukee Braves grounded out. But he was stranded there as catcher John Roseboro of the Los Angeles Dodgers and pinch-hitter Stan Musial of the St. Louis Cardinals struck out. It marked the 21st All-Star game for Musial, a record.

NL Ties It
Then came the sixth when the Nationals tied it up.

With one out, Mathews walked. Mays filled out and with two strikes on him, Orlando Cepeda of the Giants was hit by a pitched ball.

Then came the play which long will be discussed when the second All-Star Game of 1961 is brought up.

Shortstop Eddie Kasko of the Cincinnati Reds hit a high bounding ball to short. Aparicio waited for the ball to come to him and when he got it, it was too late to throw to any base and the bases were loaded.

Richards agreed with most observers that Aparicio should have charged the ball. The feeling was general that had he done so he could have gotten Kasko at first.

Then White rifled a shot which Schwall deflected. Aparicio making a good stop of the hard-hit grounder back of second base. But by that time Mathews had scored with the tying run and there was no play at any base.

Pascual Finishes
Schwall then retired Bolling, but the damage had been done. Camilo Paschal of the Minnesota Twins hurled the final three innings for the American League and allowed only one batter to get on — via a base on balls.

Purkey gave up only that one hit — the big one by Colavito in his two-inning stint. Art Mahaffey of the Philadelphia Phillies hurled the next two frames without yielding a hit. Sandy Koufax of the Dodgers yielded a single to Brooks Robinson of the Baltimore Orioles in the fifth inning and an infield hit to Kaline in the sixth. Miller allowed only Kaline's single in the ninth. In addition to striking out those three batters in succession in the ninth, he had fanned Aparicio and Johnny Temple of the Cleveland Indians in the seventh, thus retiring five of the 10 batters he faced via the strikeout route.

It was the first tie game in the 31 All-Star Games which have been played in the series beginning in 1933. The American League still leads, 16-14, but the National League won the last three games up to Monday's tie and has taken 10 out of the last 14.

The worst airship disaster was the crash of the dirigible Akron off the New Jersey coast in April, 1933, with a loss of 73 lives.

The CENTENNIAL SCRAPBOOK
The War for the Union 1861-65 in Pictures

No. 49 Division of the country in 1861 did not follow any religious lines. Both sides had Roman Catholics and Jews, as well as Protestants, among the fighting men and their supporters. The military chaplains included priests and rabbis (for the first time).

The original attorney-general of the Confederate government was Judah P. Benjamin, who was born in St. Croix, Danish West Indies (now Virgin Isles), while his English Jewish parents were in transit to the South. They settled in North Carolina, where Judah proved himself no Philistine. A vart-talented prodigy, he was able to enter Yale at age 14.

After three years at New Haven, he took up study of laws in New Orleans and qualified for the bar the day he was 21. He taught school, too, until his success as attorney made him a much sought counsel and an influential figure in Louisiana politics. He continued intellectual pursuits all his life and wrote extensively for publication.

Chosen U.S. senator when 41, Benjamin was in his second term in Washington when Louisiana seceded in 1861. Benjamin immediately resigned his seat in the organization of the new Confederate government at Montgomery, and was one of the first choices for President Davis' Cabinet.

In August 1861, the month of Benjamin's 50th birthday, Davis moved him into the War Department, occupying in place of Leroy P. Walker. This proved a mistake, for the wide learning Benjamin had cultivated did not include the fundamentals or realities of military craft. One of his arbitrary bureaucratic decisions incited the Confederacy's greatest tactician, Gen. "Stonewall" Jackson, to try to resign in 1862.

After saving the fables of both Jackson and Benjamin, President Davis made Benjamin his secretary of State in place of E. M. T. Hunter. In that post Benjamin was declared by contemporaries to be the chief power in the Confederate government after Davis and Mrs. Davis.

(Confederate diplomacy and relations abroad will be a subject here later.)

In the flight of the Confederate Cabinet from Richmond in April, 1865, the secretary of State hurriedly fled from the Davis party, reached Florida, and got on a boat to the Bahamas, reaching England, Benjamin took up law practice in London and qualified as a queen's counsel in 1872. He had accumulated a fortune when he retired in 1882 to live in Paris with his wife and children. He died there the next year.

AIR RAID WARNING FOR HOME—William J. McBride, supervising engineer for GM's A.C. Sparkplug Division, displays back and front views of a new household air raid warning device called NEAR, for "National Emergency Alarm Repeater." President Kennedy has requested funds from Congress for development of such a system. NEAR, a bit larger than a cigaret pack, can be plugged into an AC current outlet, and would tie the individual American home into a nationwide electrical alarm at a cost of about $10 per unit.
