Just For Kicks

Some youngsters consider stealing a car to take a joy ride to be but a playful prank. The law considers it a felony.

"You stand convicted of a felony. The record will be here as long as the courthouse stands. No amount of good conduct in the future can ever erase it.

Next year, or ten years from now, or when you are old men, if you are ever called to be witnesses in any court, some lawyer will point his finger at you and ask: 'Have you ever been convicted of a felony?'

And you will hang your head and admit that you have. 'Someday, you may have a chance to get into one of the expanding countries of South America, and you will apply for a passport. You will not get it.

No country will allow you to become a resident. Your world is, oh, so much smaller than it was. 'You may seek a position in civil service. On the application blank you will find this question—'Have you ever been convicted of a felony?'

Your answer will bar you from examination. 'In a few years, you will be 21, and others of your age will have the right to vote, but you will not.

Your father may be a candidate for public office, but you will not be allowed to vote for him. You will be a citizen of your state and country, but you will have no voice in public affairs. 'I am granting you a parole. A parole is in no sense a pardon. You will report to the men who have accepted your parole as often as they may ask.

YOUR convenience is not a matter of importance. You also will obey your parents. If your parents send you to bed at 9 o'clock, you will go without complaint. You will perform such tasks as are assigned to you. Your parole is a fragile thing. Should the slightest complaint of your conduct be received, your probation will be revoked immediately, and you will begin serving your sentence. You will not be brought back here for questioning or explanations. You will be picked up and taken to prison, without notice to you, and without delay.' The above was taken from an AAA Bulletin printed in Louisville, Ky., and here are some other 1969 facts that should provide some food for thought: 79 per cent of car thefts involved 'unlocked cars' 59 per cent of cars stolen involved keys left in the car 46 per cent of cars stolen are for joyriding only 17 per cent of cars stolen are involved in accidents 80 per cent of those arrested for car thefts are under 21 years of age 62 per cent of those arrested are under 18 years of age

THE WINCHESTER PROOF

NEW FIELDS FOR YALE... Yale University recently received a $20,000 grant from the Winchester-Western Division of Olin Corporation for the purpose of establishing the Oliver F. Winchester Shooting Fields at the university's Outdoor Education Center in East Lyme, Connecticut.

The Winchester grant will initially be used to establish a trap and skeet facility for the Ivy League school, but future plans include courses in shotgun shooting, faculty and student workshop and seminar sessions, and a program of intercollegiate shooting competition. The Yale Skeet Club will be instrumental in sponsoring recreational shooting activities for Yale students, faculty, administrative staff and alumni.

In announcing the grant, William R. Kelty, Jr., vice president and general manager of Olin's Winchester-Western Division, said, "There has always been an inherent desire in most Americans to enjoy the out-of-doors. Winchester, by nature of its business and product line of outdoor recreation equipment, is naturally mindful of the millions of people, both young and old, who desire to hunt and shoot for recreation. We have long had an active interest in new approaches toward the learning and enjoyment of the shooting sports. The Yale Outdoor Education Center and its many natural facilities is ideal for an all-inclusive recreational and educational facility which is dedicated to outdoor learning."

In accepting the grant on behalf of the university, Edward C. Migdalski, director of the outdoor education center and the school's director of outdoor recreation and club sports, cited the rapid growth in the popularity of the shooting sports, on both a recreational and competitive level, in colleges and universities across the country, and stated that the Winchester Shooting Fields will be an important addition to the outdoor education center, to Yale and to the entire community surrounding the school.

Among others representing Winchester and Yale at the announcement ceremony were William E. Talley, vice president in charge of marketing for Winchester-Western, Kiphuth DeLaney, director of athletics, physical education and recreation for Yale, and John Ecklund, treasurer of the university.

YOUR NOMINATION, PLEASE... It's that time of year again—time for you to nominate a candidate for Winchester-Western's Outdoorsman of the Year for 1970. Please indicate your choice — someone who, in your estimation, has distinguished himself through major personal contributions to hunting, shooting and conservation — on the accompanying card and return it to the Winchester News Bureau for tabulation. As soon as we complete the tallies, we will send you a ballot containing the names of the leading nominees so that you may cast your vote. Previous recipients of the Outdoorsman of the Year Award include Roger Latham, Lee Wulff, Stewart L. Udall and the late Robert Taylor.

NEVER TOO LATE... Dave Carlson, director, Match Rifle Facility, for Winchester-Western, has become a firm believer in the old adage, "All things come to those who wait." In 1937, Dave was a member of the United States team that took top honors in the 50-meter, prone position, event in the World Championship Rifle Matches in Finland. Dave, in fact, tied for first place in the individual competition in this event. Recently, the National Board for Promotion of Rifle Practice decided to issue medals to all American award-winning shooters. So, Dave has just received his "U.S. Distinguished International Shooter" medal for his performance as a member of the United States team — a performance which was enacted 33 years ago.

QUICK SERVICE... We've received word about an Iowa woman who placed a family want ad in the Des Moines Register and Tribune, advertising an unfired Winchester Centennial '66 rifle. The ad was canceled after one day as the rifle was sold for the full asking price of $200 to the first person who called.

FOR THE HOBBYIST... Lear Publications, through special arrangement with Winchester Press, has republished the 1938 edition of the Winchester Sales Manual. If you collect old guns or if you collect old books or if you just enjoy nostalgic reading, this book should be of interest to you. The manual retails at $5.00 and may be obtained from Lear Publications, 115 Gatell Street, Easton, Pennsylvania 18042.

ON THE BOOKSHELF

"What, another hunting trip?" How many times has this question been asked by an irate wife about to be left behind with the kids while her mate pursues the lure of the outdoors? This is a scene which is dreaded by all parties concerned and which often leads to family discontent and strife. Noted author and outdoorsman Grits Gresham has come up with some fascinating theories on how to handle this problem in his new book, The Sportsman and His Family Outdoors (E. P. Dutton & Co., New York — $1.95). Basically, Gresham's solution is to bring the wife and kids along and include them in your outdoor fun, and his book contains a series of excellent suggestions on how this can be done. He covers all major outdoor activities — hunting, fishing, camping, boating, bird watching, etc. — with ideas on how to involve the family in each. He also has many great suggestions on outdoor activities just for the wife and children — activities which will afford dad a few hours to enjoy his favorite sport alone, if he desires. Very worthwhile reading.

Also worthwhile reading — or rereading — is the late Larry Keller's classic, Shots at Whittails (Alfred A. Knopf, Inc., New York — $7.95). Originally published in 1948 and long considered the definitive work on deer hunting, this masterpiece has been republished and updated with new technical information on rifles, loads and scopes, provided by Jack O'Connor, shooting editor of Outdoor Life. Our hat is off to Knopf for making this marvelous book available again.

If experience is the best teacher, then certainly the young fellow pictured here has gotten off to a good start. Allen Pool, eight year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Pool caught this two pound large mouth bass on Kentucky Lake during his first fly casting lesson, given recently on a camping outing with his dad.

HUNTING AND FISHING IN KENTUCKY

FRANKFORT, Ky. — Concerned and latent, on water and pollution, fish kills, soil destruction, strip mining and other environmental facets is everywhere in Kentucky. And this is good, for when there is awareness there is eventually something to be accomplished. Recently we were on a fishing trip at Kentucky Lake. Our vacationing group had been fishing for a couple of days without great success. Then it was found that from the deep water of the old Tennessee River channel catfish could be taken. The word spread and we anchored our boat in water that was 40 feet deep and from which numerous fishermen were catching catfish. In the area of about two acres we'd guess there were 40 boats anchored, and when there was a lull in fishing there was an increase in neighborly chatting by the assembled fishermen. Occupants of boats anchored nearby drifted into a conversation something like this: "Caught any fish this morning?" "Very few. But isn't this a wonderful morning? We enjoy just being out here, whether or not we catch fish." "We like to catch fish, but this is a vacation and we're enjoying this great body of water immensely. You know we came very near not coming to Kentucky Lake after those stories about mercury being found in fish below the dam. But then the fish in this lake are not contaminated, they say, so we came on down." "Well, now the fish in the lake may be contaminated a little bit. The story pointed to that possibility a few days ago." "But how would plants below the dam contaminate the fish in the lake above the dam?" "Oh, they wouldn't. They say there may be contaminated fish from below Pickwick Dam down in Tennessee in this lake, or that the mercury from that area may have spread to this area. That's the trouble. Seems like everywhere you turn these days there's pollution." "Yes, man is slowly killing himself, I guess. People just don't care anymore." "They're just not thinking. The other afternoon I took my children water skiing and you know I had difficulty dodging the beer bottles, cans and jugs that have been scattered on this lake. This is a wonderful body of water, but if people don't start caring about it, before many more years it will become a place where people won't want to visit. I just can't understand it." "You got a bite on that pole in front of the boat. You got him. Just another catfish, but what's with a carfish? Nothing. It's a great sport. I hope we don't ruin it."

FISHING LINES

By DICK WOLFF

Found for pound, there are few fish the equal of a smallmouth bass. By many sportsmen, he's been called the poor fisherman's trout, but most look upon smallmouth as all fun and the cause of a lot of fishing trips. About the only similarities between largemouth bass and smallmouth bass is their last names and that they look a bit alike. From then on, everything is different. The smallmouth bass is a fish of the northern portion of the eastern United States and southern Canada, from Ontario to New Brunswick. Unlike its southern cousin, the smallmouth likes colder and deeper water. Taking a smallmouth means putting the bait or lure where the fish is most likely to be. You can do it trolling or casting, depending on what suits you best. Starting from the beach, a spinning or baitcasting outfit, like the new Garcia-Mitchell 510 reel on a 6 1/2-foot (2581) light action, fast taper rod makes an ideal couple. It can easily handle 4 to 8-lb. monofilament and take a bottom-hugging lure like the Eelot or Finlandia down to the fish. If trolling from a boat is your preferred way of fishing, then you can troll the same outfit or better, match a Garcia Anadromous—1550—40—8-foot, two-piece medium action (2521) baitcasting rod. It will handle lines up to 15-lb. test and lures up to 3/4-oz. in weight. If you've got the spinning rod in the boat, cut the outboard. With the wind in the right direction, make a drift parallel to the beach, casting onto the shore and working the lure deep toward the bottom. Let the lure follow the contour of the bottom as it deepens. Use a good fish finder-fathometer combination. It will keep you directly over the 10 to 20-foot depth smallmouths prefer. I try all kinds of water for smallmouth bass and would be hard-put to say which method and conditions I like best. I might lean, however, to river fishing for bass where I can wade among the fish and work the rapids and currents in search of bronzebacks.
