Draft Personnel To Be Appointed Soon Says Clements

Registration To Be 'Painless' Says Hershey

In a communication received today from Gov. Earle C. Clements, the Ledger & Times was advised that "as yet recommendations have not been made to the President for personnel of draft boards."

Under the draft set-up, the Governor of each state makes recommendations to President Truman for personnel to serve on local draft boards. These recommendations are expected to be sent to Washington shortly, the communication from Governor Clements said.

Those who served on the draft board in Calloway county during the war have requested that someone else be found for the job this time. All youths between the ages of 18 through 25 must register with the local board August 30, according to the new draft law.

Selective Service officials said today that registration for the new 18-through-25 draft will be made as painless as possible.

They said that in cases where the older registrants are clearly exempt from service, they may not even have to fill out questionnaires. This will be especially true in the case of veterans, whose military records are known to their draft boards.

Selective Service Director Lewis B. Hershey told the Senate armed services committee yesterday that his organization hopes "to bring certainty to the upper age groups as soon as possible as to whether they will or won't be taken."

He said Selective Service will call the 25-year-olds first and then work back to the 18-year-olds. He added, however, that only about 8,000 25-year-olds will be taken into service. Of the 5,000,000 men in the 22-through-25 age group, all but about 70,000 will be deferred.

The Army's first call for men is expected sometime after Oct. 1. It will ask for about 30,000 men. It was expected that this first call will take all the eligible men in the 25 and 24-year-old brackets and most of the eligibles in the 23-year-old group.

Senate committee members, including chairman Chan Gurney, R., S.D., gave Hershey's "age group" plan their blessing. Gurney originally had favored a lottery for determining which registrants would be called first.

Meanwhile, two members of Henry Wallace's Progressive party in congress—Reps. Vito Marcantonio, N. Y., and Leo Isaacson, N. Y.—introduced a bill to repeal the recently-enacted draft law. Sen. Glen Taylor of Idaho, the party's vice-presidential nominee, is expected to introduce a similar measure in the Senate.

Selective Service said local boards will start sending out draft questionnaires soon after registration begins on Aug. 30. It said registrants will have "at least 10 days" to fill out the forms.

Selective Service officials said no decision has been reached on how long draftees will have to arrange their personal affairs before reporting for duty. At the end of World War II as much as 90 days elapsed before draftees were actually taken to camps for training.

Lt. Gen. William Paul, Army personnel chief, told a Fort Knox, Ky., conference yesterday that the Army may have to furlough some of its draftees immediately after induction because of insufficient facilities for training and housing them.

Gen. Omar N. Bradley, Army chief of staff, told Army officers attending the conference that they should treat incoming selectees in a way that will send them back to civilian life as friends of the Army—right critics.

"Sure, we will have discipline and the caste system and we will keep the men busy," Bradley said. "But we must treat our men as individuals and not as rows of men lined up on the parade field."

LOCAL MAN BEING HELD ON PATERNITY CHARGE

Paul Lee, 40, a Murray carpenter, has been charged with "carnal knowledge of a girl under 16, she being 15," and he was also charged with being the father of her three-week-old child.

Martha Jean Reeder, the girl, swore an affidavit late yesterday afternoon which resulted in a warrant being issued. Lee was freed under an appearance bond of $1,000 as designated by County Judge Pink Curot.

A closed door hearing has been held for 10:30 o'clock Saturday forenoon in the Judge's chambers. Attorney Waydon Raburn is representing the defense, and the prosecution is being conducted by County Attorney Joe Weeks and Attorney Joe Lancaster.

Political Roundup

By United Press
Sen. Alben W. Barkley, Democratic vice presidential nominee, was pushed unwillingly into the campaign spotlight today by his Republican colleagues on Capitol Hill.

The quoted the Kentuckian to prove their point that President Truman's special session call was a big mistake.

GOP leaders in the house and senate butted through their congressional records and came up with a statement purportedly made by Barkley a month ago, before he was selected as Mr. Truman's running mate.

"I think," they quoted Barkley, "if we sit here until after the (Republican) convention, or if we sit here between the conventions, or after the two conventions, the entire time of congress will be taken up with political bickering and political legislation and political oratory; and I do not want that to be brought about."

Barkley, who has taken no part in the campaign since his nomination two weeks ago, did not comment immediately on the GOP leaders' statement. He said yesterday, however, that he thought the President's legislative program was "reasonable" and could be carried out "if congress would take it seriously and go to work on it."

The Republican leadership cited Barkley's comment in support of its claim that "serious legislative problems" cannot be satisfactorily handled in the most of a political campaign.

In their statement of policy, the leaders also described the President's special session call as "a political maneuver" in the campaign for his own reelection.

Two signers of the statement—Sen. Robert A. Taft and house leader Charles A. Halleck—go on

Peace Or War Is In Balance When Russian Policy Is Told

LONDON, July 22. (UP)—A thortitative source said today that the decisions of the London conference on Russian relations probably will be made known to Soviet foreign minister V. M. Molotov in Moscow tomorrow by the three western ambassadors.

U. S. Ambassador Walter Bedell Smith left London last night in his special transport plane and was scheduled to arrive in the Soviet capital today. Smith's plane stopped in Berlin shortly before midnight.

When the three western ambassadors call on Molotov they will be playing for the highest stakes since the end of the second World War, authoritative sources said.

Those stakes could be peace or war, these sources said, not necessarily immediate peace and not immediate war.

But, these officials said, this next approach to Russia and the Kremlin's response could be the turning point for better or for worse.

"This verbal note may set the course of future developments for a long time," officials said. "That's why so much care and time has gone into its preparation."

"That's why never before on a diplomatic move has so much intense attention been given to a plan by all branches of the United States government."

Western officials are hopeful that the new approach to the Russians will work and that over a long period of time some satisfactory compromise on Berlin, Germany and other problems can be worked out.

But they warned that the situation could move "very rapidly" in either an adverse or a favorable direction.

The ambassadors of the U. S., Britain and France are expected to tell Molotov frankly that their governments are prepared to begin negotiations with the Russians on German problems as soon as the Berlin blockade is lifted.

Negotiations do not necessarily mean an immediate meeting of the big four foreign ministers council, for which much preparation is needed. The western powers are expected to suggest talks first through regular, diplomatic channels and in the allied control council for Germany.

The ambassadors also are expected to make clear to Russia that they consider:

1. The blockade of Berlin is a flagrant violation of obligations under the United Nations charter to settle disputes without coercion.
2. The west considers the blockade a cross form of coercion.
3. The western powers will not leave Berlin under duress. They have no plans to leave Berlin at all except that eventually, after a peace treaty, it is contemplated that all four powers will leave Berlin and Germany.
4. The west will not negotiate under pressure such as that applied by the Berlin blockade.
5. The west is prepared to use every diplomatic device to find a satisfactory solution to the German crisis.
6. If there is a turn for the worse, the Russians must know that the west is carefully planning its moves so that Russia, and not the west, will bear the blame from world opinion.

Crop Prospects Reported Good

Prof. A. Carman, manager of the college farm, reports a very successful crop this year.

All of the crops on the farm show good prospects with the exception of the wheat crop. Due to a bad season for wheat, the crop was inferior to that of last year.

The peach crop this year is excellent. Although the peaches are not as thick this year as last, they are of much finer quality, says Professor Carman.

Peach thieves are giving the manager a very difficult problem, he says.

FORT KNOX SCHOOL REGISTERS TOP ARMY OFFICERS

Top-ranking Army officers, including 15 generals, are beginning a 3-day school at Fort Knox today.

The students include General Omar Bradley, Army Chief of Staff, and a number of other officers who arrived at Knox by plane last night.

They are studying methods of training to be used on the new ten-age soldiers to be inducted into the service soon under the present draft law. The reason they came to Fort Knox is that Bradley believes the methods used there by the University Military Training Experimental Unit can be applied to the new draft army.

High-ranking officers say that among the elements of the UMT system to be used are moral and religious training, disciplinary courts run by the men, and a new relationship between officers and men, done away with oldtime army sternness and narrowing the gulf between officers and men.

The Army has announced that the UMT Experimental Unit at Knox is being shelved for the time being, at least. At Fort Meade, Maryland, Lieutenant General Leonard Gerow, 2nd Army commander, says the unit's leadership and buildings are needed to train the new selectees army.

The unit was formed in January, 1947, to show how the Universal Military Training plan would work if adopted by congress. The lawmakers so far have turned down efforts to set up such a system.

Republicans Defy Fillibuster Threat Of Southern Democrats

RUSSIANS SET UP NEW PROPAGANDA BARRAGE TODAY

Berlin, July 22. (UP)—Russian authorities opened a propaganda barrage today which western sources said was designed to pave the way for establishing a communist-controlled administration for their sector of Berlin.

The Soviet press and radio charged in a message that the western commandants had approved plans at a secret meeting yesterday to set up a separate city administration and police headquarters for the American, British and French sectors of Berlin.

Basis for the charge was two letters sent by the western military governments to acting Mayor Franz Louise Schroeder.

One approved the city administration's dismissal of Soviet-trained communist police president Paul Markgraf, who had refused to accept orders from anyone except the Soviet administration.

This letter also rejected the Soviet order ousting Johannes Stumm, appointed by the city administration to take Markgraf's place.

The second letter rejected the Russians' attempt to replace Paul Fuellback, deputy head of the food department of the city administration, with a communist appointee, Paul Letsch.

It was generally believed the Russians soon would follow up these charges by declaring the present city administration defunct and then establishing a communist-controlled administration for their sector of Berlin. This would force the western powers to accept a divided city.

Western licensed newspapers said that only 187 German residents of the three blockaded western sectors of Berlin had registered with Soviet food shops in response to Russian promises to feed the entire city.

German sources said that thousands of Berliners from the western sectors may lose all their holdings of Soviet marks in the new Russian currency exchange.

Many residents of the American, British and French sectors have been receiving 75 per cent of their wages and salaries in Soviet coupon marks, which must be exchanged for the new Soviet Deutsche marks before the deadline this afternoon, these sources said.

Western allied authorities offered to set up exchange centers in the western sectors, but the Russians rejected the offer and insisted all exchanged must be handled by centers in the Soviet sector.

WASHINGTON, July 22. (UP)—Republican senators defied threats of a southern filibuster today and promised to "press to a decision" on an anti-poll tax bill.

They also promised to hunt for a solution to price and housing problems but made no pledge to pass legislation asked by President Truman yesterday in his message to the special session.

Price and housing problems were listed by Mr. Truman as the major issues before the special session. But Republican congressional leaders rebuffed his recommendation in a policy statement last night.

Republican Senate Plans—In line with last night's statement—were announced by Chairman Eugene D. Millikin, R., Colo., after a meeting of the full Senate GOP membership.

"It was agreed that tomorrow we will bring up the anti-poll tax bill and continue to press it to a decision," Millikin said.

"Southern Democrats who bitterly oppose the measure, along with other so-called civil rights bills, were waiting for announcement of the Republican majority plans before perfecting filibuster plans."

A filibuster would block senate action on Mr. Truman's economic program.

The poll tax bill, endorsed by Mr. Truman, will outline payment of poll taxes as a qualification for voting in federal elections.

Millikin reported that the Republicans would "make every effort" to pass the measure but that they had made "no decision on whether to undertake in an effort to break a filibuster by exhaustion."

Millikin said he assumed an attempt—requiring a two-thirds vote—would be made to shut off debate at the proper time.

But under the senate's liberal rules of debate, supporters of the legislation may never be able to reach that point.

Millikin recognized that possibility by mentioning that the filibuster might come on the motion to take up the bill, rather than on the bill itself. He recalled that under previous rulings of senate presiding officers, a vote to shut off debate cannot be obtained on a motion to take up a bill.

On the housing and price issues, Millikin said it was agreed that the banking committee would consider them but he would not say any bills would be approved.

The committee "will consider what, if anything, can be done, and if it's feasible and practicable, they will make recommendations," Millikin said.

Millikin said the Senate would consider only those recommendations deemed of "national importance" and of an emergency nature. He said the program represented no divergence from the policy statement issued by House and Senate leaders last night. While that statement was not approved or disapproved at the Republican conference, Millikin said he asked his colleagues if there was any dissent. None was voiced, he reported.

He reiterated that the Senate has no intention of passing new money bills, unless an emergency develops, or of acting on nominations.

Pressed for some indication as to how long Republican leaders plan to keep congress in session, Millikin said:

"The general feeling around here is that we should finish in two or three weeks."

The Southern Democrats have anticipated that civil rights legislation will get priority in the Senate and expect to be ready to launch their filibuster promptly.

BY EWING GALLOWAY

If passing passersby see an unusual radiance in the marble face of Chief Paducah, in the landscaped middle of one of the Purchase metropolis's beautiful boulevards, it is because the spirit of that locality famous Becklin is proud of the industrial progress the city named for him has made in recent years.

A good wetting by the 1937 flood woke Paducah up. Even before all the water had been pumped out of basements, business people and civic leaders saw that something must be done to save this city of 35,000 from the bad reputation given it by the Great Inundation. They yelled for help and Uncle Sam sent them a $4,000,000 flood wall 3 feet above the crest of 1937. Paducah began to grow as soon as the wall was under way.

It's letting Henry Ward Paducah newspaperman taking time off to serve the state as conservation commissioner, go on from here.

"Paducah is booming. A $1,000,000 Magnavox Company plant has been completed and is now in operation, with the first 400 of what eventually will be 2,000 employees at work. This radio parts manufacturing factory is the most modern of its type. Additional units are in the plans.

The Modine Manufacturing Company, top manufacturers of automobile and tractor radiators, selected Paducah as the site of a new plant last year. So well satisfied were officials of the company of production there that they have just announced plans for the construction of a $500,000 addition. The contract has been awarded and first stages of construction are under way.

"Getting into full production now is the new plant in Paducah of the Ray-O-Vac Company, manufacturers of dry cell batteries. The Deena Artware Company has an addition to its pottery plant—un-

BON VOYAGE

WESTERN POWERS ADOPT STRATEGY AGAINST RUSSIA

LONDON, July 27. (UP)—The United States, Great Britain and France today completed the text of their reply to Russia on Berlin and reached an agreement on long range strategy for dealing with Soviet political aggression.

The three-power conference on the Berlin crisis was finished this morning. The special American envoys prepared to depart, the first of them late today.

The agreements reached here still required the final formal approval of the respective governments. But that was expected to be a mere formality unless the new French government failed to fall in line.

The official version of the Western reply to Russia's refusal to lift the Berlin blockade—probably a verbal protest to Soviet foreign minister V. M. Molotov—will not be known for several days. And it may be several months before the full range of the long-term strategy toward Russia unfolds.

High diplomatic conferences here were understood to have reached an at least tentative agreement of what steps they will take whether Russia says yes or no to the next western move.

W. Bedell Smith, U. S. Ambassador to Moscow who will have a share in the verbal reply to Molotov if that procedure is finally approved, was leaving by plane late tomorrow for Moscow. He flew here under specific instructions from Secretary of State George C. Marshall to take part in the two-day conference.

For two days they had been in almost continuous conference with American, British and French officials together or in various combinations of groups.

The final meetings were held at the British foreign office this morning. Bohlen and Smith conferred with British and French experts. Then Douglas had a final conference in the series with Sir William Strang, British foreign undersecretary.

The semi-permanent crisis committee composed of Douglas Strang and French ambassador Rene Massigli will continue to meet, but the special talks are over, and the western powers are about ready to take the next step to get the Russians to remove the blockade from Berlin.

Wasted Warning

There's a stop light there now. The hedge has been cut down, too. An editorial in the Times says the city traffic commission "acted from cross hindsight." The Times means that authorities should have made the changes before last Tuesday.

"That was the day four men were injured—one fatally. All four were carpenters on their way to a job in the outskirts of town. Brownie says he thought he remembered a stop sign at the intersection and he leaned forward from the back seat to tell Dan, who was driving. "I guess my memory could have saved his life," Brownie told reporters. "It didn't do any good, though. Before I could say anything, the other car had rolled out from behind the hedge on our right, and then it was all over."

Dan died in the ambulance. Brownie came out of it with a skull fracture, and the other two were cut up pretty badly. Brownie was there, all right. Dan would have stopped if the hedge hadn't hidden it.

The Farmer Takes a Life

Everyone in the family was thinking about the same thing: what he was going to do with the biggest day of the week.

Mother's plans were about the same as they are every Saturday for a farmer's wife. The kids knew they'd have to tag along to the grocery store, but they were mentally choosing between Roy Rogers and Randolph Scott and where each would spend his extra ten cents.

Traffic on the pike was heavy. Dad was driving and wondering if anybody in town would know where he could get an abandoned hand. Impatiently he jockeyed for position in the fast-moving line. Without warning, the man ahead jumped on his brakes. The farmer followed suit as fast as his reactions permitted. It was fairly fast, but when his frantic message reached the tired brakes on his own car, the answer came back wrong. The car pulled sharply to the left across the center line and headed into a station wagon coming from the opposite direction.

Artie, the farmer's youngest boy, was killed.

Roger the Frog Kids His Patrons And Makes Them Come for More

PARIS (UPI)—Roger Spinhirny, better known as "Roger the Frog," is a restaurant owner who makes a good living out of insulting his customers.

He's one of the few too who opens his kitchen to anybody too poor to pay, such as hard-up youngsters and students in the neighborhood.

Roger has sealed late arriving ambassadors and movie stars in the kitchen but had them like it. He's kissed a good half of his women customers with the boy friend looking on laughing.

He's torn up orders and served what he thinks they ought to have. He has put almost every customer on the spot at one time or another.

They Love It

Most of them love it. Those who don't don't go back.

His place, the "Grenouille" (Frog) at 28 rue des Grands Augustins, in the heart of the Latin Quarter, has been a favorite since he opened it in 1930.

Roger was born in Paris in 1901. He grew up the hard way, an orphan. After World War I, he worked in the Ritz Hotel restaurant. Later he moved over to "Chez Roger" on the Place St. Michel.

By 1930 he had some money of his own. He decided to open a restaurant and run it in a way which combined all the things he'd been hawking out for doing at the Ritz and Bouzier.

Instead of going broke, he thrived. People have been pecking the miles away, will stimulate the growth of the recreation industry, the most prosperous industry in many states.

"Educating me the challenge of the 1947 flood, and now they can afford to laugh at those who predicted dire things for it as a result of that tragedy."

Food inexpensive. The highest priced dish on his menu is 20 francs (about 76 cents). Lobster sold by the weight might run up to 300 francs, but that's the ceiling.

Frog legs, which he frequently forces on you, whether you like them or not, are 150 francs.

Customers at the Grenouille get only two kinds of wine, one red and one white. If they want a long list to choose from, Roger tells them to go elsewhere. They stay. His flat price is 225 francs a bottle.

To most customers, the Grenouille looks more like an antique shop than a restaurant. Among the hundred-odd items hanging from the ceiling, all with their own story, are a French horn, a cow bell, a horse's man's, a bunch of onions—and a woman's hat. The walls are plastered with clippings, diplomas and pictures.

All in Fun

Lunch begins at 12:30 and lasts as late as 4. Dinner starts at 6 and goes on until 1 a.m. Throughout both Roger, dressed in an open shirt and a waist apron, moves from table to table shouting orders, tracking jokes, insulting customers, and making them explain to everybody there who the young lady is.

Roger's final gesture is reserved for the ladies. As they leave he offers them one of his green miniature frogs, his trade mark.

They can have it, he tells them, for a kiss, thanks on the cheek. He poses his cheek, they bend over to kiss. In a lightning move Roger smacks them squarely on the lips.

He says only one woman has ever seriously objected to his trickery and the rest of the customers were so enraged they nearly threw her out.

OUR DEMOCRACY — by Mat

St. Louis Cardinals Go Down In Bitter Defeat Before Brooklyn

By CARL LUNDQUIST United Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK, July 28 (UP)—One of baseball's greatest dynasties tottered today—it looked like the old Cardinal gashouse gang had just about run out of gas. These weren't the swashbuckling St. Louisians who used to terrify the National League—these were tired old men sitting silently around in the dressing room after one of the bitterest defeats any ball club ever suffered, a 3 to 2 ninth inning loss to the Brooklyn Dodgers, who took over second place. Manager Eddie Dyer, trying to pep up his boys before this opener of an important three game series, had chalked a pennant with the numerals "1948" on the blackboard. They stood out in mockery as the entire squad sat on benches, mumbling bitterly and not making any effort even to change their uniforms.

Symbolic of this most ironic defeat was the fact that the oldest gas-houser of them all, spirited sure-footed Terry Moore, long rated the best center fielder in the national league, had misjudged a fly ball and it had gone for a two-base hit. Moore, they say they affectionately call "old folks" had no alibi. "I didn't get good vision on the ball," he said. "I ran in when I should have gone back. That's all." The Dodgers failed to get into Boston's five-and-a-half game lead, however, as the Braves took a 2 to 1 night game from the Pirates. Catcher Phil Masi and outfielder Clint Conatser homered for Boston as Nelson Potter held the Pirates to six blows, one of them Ralph Kiner's 28th home run of the year. The New York Giants climbed into fourth place by beating Cincinnati 3 to 0 as Leo Durocher made his Polo Grounds debut as Giant manager. Larry Jansen stopped the Reds with six hits for his second straight shutout and 13th win of the year.

Pinch-hitter Bob Scheffing cracked a single with two men on and two out in the 11th inning to give the Chicago Cubs a 3 to 2 win over the Phillies at Philadelphia. Hank Borowy was the winning pitcher in relief while Dutch Leonard went all the way to lose. Johnny Blatnik and Aandy Seminick homered for the Phils. In the American league, the Boston Red Sox gained their 13th straight win as Ellis Kinder three-hitted the Detroit Tigers, 8 to 0. Kinder had a no hitter until Eddie Lipon doubled in the sixth. The Sox knocked out Hal Newhouse in a three-run second inning. Another three-hitter was hurled by Cliff Famin of the St. Louis Browns to beat the Yankees, 3 to 0. Rookie first-baseman John Arft, playing his first major-league game, hit a homer and a triple to lead the Brown attack. Bob Feller gained his 10th win of the year as Cleveland beat the Athletics, 10 to 5, with relief by Ed Klemm. Homers were hit by Ken Keltner of the Tribe and Sam Chapman of the A's. Pat Seery turned defeat into victory for the Chicago White Sox when he socked a two-run homer with two out in the ninth inning to beat Washington, 2 to 1. Mickey Haefner was the Senator hurler who had a win and a shutout in the bag until Seery connected. Bill Wright emerged the winner. YESTERDAY'S STAR — Pitcher Ellis Kinder of the Boston Red Sox who kept his team's winning streak alive by beating Detroit, 3 to 0, with a three-hitter. He had a no-hitter for six-and-one-third innings.

Recipe Of The Week

One of the best ways to economize on the meat budget is to serve fish. Not only is it a cheap meat, but it is high in protein. Serve it with something tart such as lemon wedges in a tangy sauce, suggests Miss Florence Imlay, specialist in foods at the College of Agriculture and Home Economics, University of Kentucky. Fish is especially good and easy to prepare when it is baked. Baked Fish 1 1/2-2 pounds fish fillets 1 teaspoon salt 1-3 teaspoon pepper 3 tablespoons melted fat 2 tablespoons lemon juice 1 tablespoon grated onion Paprika Place the fish slices in a well-greased pan. Add seasonings to melted fat and pour over the fish. Sprinkle with paprika. Bake in a moderate oven, 350 degrees, for about 25 to 30 minutes, or until fish flakes easily when tested with a fork. Menu: Baked fish, buttered carrots, corn on the cob, cabbage and green pepper slaw, biscuit, butter and apple dumpling.

Unhappy Birthday

It was a birthday cake of Homeric proportions, large enough to support 77 candles and to treat, she hoped, a score of assorted nieces, nephews and grandchildren. She picked it up at the bakery at about 3:30 and started home afoot. Rain started falling and half way up the hill between Lost and Mound she decided to cross over to the residential side in order to take advantage of the better protection afforded by the trees. As she stepped into the thoroughfare from between two parked cars she was felled by an oncoming auto. Its driver hadn't seen her until the instant of sickening impact. An ambulance took her to Mercy Hospital. She is still there, but doctors say she is going to be all right. At 77, they explain, broken bones mend slowly. She even had her birthday party, in a way. The driver, who was not held by the police, souped out the same bakery; had an identical cake made, took it to the hospital, and lighted the candles for her.

Ex-Service Men's News

The number of disabled veterans enrolled in educational, job-training and farm training programs in Ohio, Michigan and Kentucky now totals 28,995, Veterans Administration Branch Office in Columbus, Ohio reported today. The total includes: Ohio, 14,370; Michigan, 8,685; Kentucky 5,940. There has been little change in the number of disabled trainees in the past six months, VA said. Under the vocational Rehabilitation Act (Public Law 16), disabled veterans may enroll in educational or training courses of sufficient length to permit them to overcome their handicaps. However, these courses usually do not extend beyond four years. They are advised into objectives best suited for them in view of their service-connected disabilities and their progress is supervised by VA training officers.

Veterans Administration contact offices in Ohio, Michigan and Kentucky will remain open Saturday, July 31, which is the final day for most veterans to reinstate their G.I. insurance without a physical examination. VA contact offices in Ohio will remain open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., in Michigan from 8 a.m. until 12 midnight and in Kentucky from 9 a.m. until 6 p.m.

By applying before August 1, veterans whose policies have lapsed may reinstate any amount of government insurance without a physical examination. They must certify their health is as good as it was on date of lapse and pay two monthly premiums to get back into insurance, or all premiums in arrears, with interest on permanent types of insurance. The privilege of reinstating on this basis after July 31 will be available only to veterans whose policies have lapsed for less than three months. When the lapse period is three months or longer, the veteran will be required to take a physical exam and qualify as an insurance risk.

Current Weather and Crop Conditions in Kentucky

The weather during the past week was very favorable for growing crops with temperatures averaging some what below the normal and showers during the fore part rather frequent. The rainfall over the northern and western portions of the State totaled well over an inch with Eckenridge and Grayson Counties receiving over 3 inches. In scattered sections where the showers were too heavy or too frequent, the ground was too wet for general field work, especially the making of hay and the completion of the grain harvest. However, the harvesting of small grains is practically completed. A relatively small amount of hay was made. Pastures and forage crops, gardens and late potatoes have shown marked improvement and range from fair to excellent. Peaches and apples vary greatly from one section to another, but they are mostly good to very good in the western fruit growing sections. There was considerable picking and marketing of the earlier varieties of peaches and apples. Soy beans, where planted, are in good to excellent condition and from knee to waist high. Early corn in the western and central portions of the State is good to excellent and mostly fair in the eastern sections. It is mostly in the milk stage except in the northern counties where it is tassing. Late corn ranges from fair to good and it is tassing in the southern districts where most of it has been laid by. Tobacco is rather spotted ranging from good to occasionally poor. It is about the normal stage in the southern and western counties with plants having from 10 to 16 leaves. Topping has become fairly general in the southern and western counties but it is just getting started in other sections. Some priming of tobacco is also being done.

HOLLYWOOD FILM SHOP

Hollywood (UP)—Movie studio clothes designers can pick up costumes now for picture set in the 1920s in any department store.

The roaring '20s used to be the hardest period of movie times. As a movie designer to duplicate stars who wore the clothes and audiences who saw them all found them unattractive and unflattering.

The outstanding features of 1920 clothes: the sloping shoulder, the uneven hemline, the pleated skirt, the small close head, the cloche—were in complete contrast to the slim, broad-shouldered silhouette of the past 10 years.

But now Paramount designer Edith Head says you can buy them all at your department store.

Miss Head had 10 outstanding costumes to design for Betty Field and Ruth Hussey for their roles opposite Alan Ladd in the film version of F. Scott Fitzgerald's novel of the '20s, "The Great Gatsby."

VIGILANTES OF BUENA VISTA

By FRANK C. ROBERTSON

CHAPTER XXXIV
BEN'S wounded leg hampered him in his struggle with the outlaw beneath him. Ridgley's kicking didn't bother him so much, but the fellow's slashing gun did. He avoided several blows aimed at his head, but one caught him on the forehead. For a moment, his senses reeled.

Finally, however, with a blow from his own gun against Ridgley's wrist, he succeeded in knocking the other's weapon from his hand. The next instant, he had leaped up and yanked Ridgley up after him.

He was none too soon, for Seesaw Wheeler was now close at hand and had stopped to take aim with his gun. Ben held Ridgley in front of him as a shield, but Wheeler tried a shot just the same. It struck the dugout.

Ben thrust his gun around Ridgley and fired. He did score a hit, but he made Wheeler jump.

Then, with his left arm still holding Ridgley against him, he backed through the doorway into the dugout as Wheeler plunked two more bullets into the logs of the front wall. Pushing his prisoner to one side, Ben flattened himself alongside the doorway and poked his gun around the edge.

He and Wheeler exchanged simultaneous shots. The outlaw's bullet struck the door jamb within inches of Ben's face. At the same instant, Ben saw the man stagger and fall, evidently hard hit.

NOT until then, did Ben take time to look around. The dugout was dark, for the only source of light was the doorway. It was a moment before Ben could make out the forms of his mother and Earl lying tied to bunks at the back.

"Ben," he heard his mother call weakly. "Are you all right?"

"Sure, I'll untie you in a minute, Mom," he called back.

Meanwhile, Ridgley, apparently weakened by his wound and the struggle he had put up outside, had made no further attempt at resistance. However, Ben took care of no chances. He poked his gun into the man's ribs, ordered him to the back of the dugout, and made him sit down on a bunk.

Then, keeping him more or less covered, he used his left hand to take out a knife and cut the bonds on his mother's wrists and ankles. Next, he released Earl.

The latter sat up with a groan and put his hand to his head. "They knocked me out," he muttered.

Ben saw a gun hanging on the wall, took it down and handed it to Earl.

"Do you feel equal to watching this cuss Ridgley while I take a look outside? I think I took care of Wheeler and Romain, but we don't want 'em takin' us by surprise."

"I'll watch him all right!" Earl growled.

"Why watch me? Ridgley complained. "I'm dyin' anyway. Lookit my chest."

"For a dyin' man, you did an awful lot of kickin' outside just now," Ben rasped.

As he started toward the door, his mother cried, "Ben! You're dragging your leg! You're hurt!"

"Only a flesh wound, Mom, and I'm settin' used to 'em," he told her cheerfully.

AT THE doorway, he peered out cautiously, saw no sign of the outlaw, venturing out, he examined the man and found that he was dead. Then, looking toward the spring and seeing no sign of Rick Romain, he turned back into the dugout. Ridgley, he was more dangerous at the moment and had better be tied up without delay.

Despite the outlaw's protestations that he was a dying man, Ben and Earl tied him to a bunk. A cursory examination revealed that he had suffered a deep flesh wound in his chest, but no more. Meanwhile, Mrs. Warren was clamoring to dress Ben's wound. He insisted it could wait, but finally gave in to her and sent Earl down to the spring to the up Rick Romain before the outlaw regained consciousness.

While his mother was dressing the wound, Ben gave her a sketchy account of what had happened in Buena Vista and how he had happened to find this hideout.

"Poor Doc Slicker," she interjected when he told of the gambler's death.

He had just finished his account, when Earl returned in a breathless state.

Swimming Hopes Dimmed By Star's Back Injury

By LEO H. PETERSON
United Press Sports Editor

LONDON, July 28. (UP)—America's swimming hopes in the Olympics were dealt a severe blow today when it was learned that backstroke star Robert Cowell had sprained his back.

Cowell, Allen Stack of Yale and Howard Patterson of Michigan State are the U. S.'s three 100-meter backstroke entries.

Elsewhere on the Olympic front, officials of the classic were confronted with headaches as Bulgaria withdrew today without giving any specific reason and the international swimming federation was called on to settle the eligibility of two Irish swimmers from northern Eire.

Headquarters of the Olympic organization committee announced receipts of a cable from the Bulgarian Olympic committee which read: "Unexpected difficulties at last minute prevent the departure of our representatives."

There were also reports that Romania intended to withdraw. Like Bulgaria, Romania has not notified Olympic authorities of the expected time of arrival of its team. The Romanian legation said it could neither confirm or deny these reports "because we don't know where the team is."

The International Swimming Federation today will take up the Eire protest against the banning of Olympic swimmers William Jones #400-meter freestyler, and Ernest McCartney, a 100-meter freestyler, because they came from the Ulster counties.

Eddie Heron, president of the Irish amateur swimming association said he will tell the federation that his association covers all 32 Irish counties and that the two stars are eligible to swim for Eire. The federation has ruled that the Irish competitors must come from Eire.

Reports of dissension in the American ranks on the eve of the opening of the Olympic games tomorrow gave rise to unusual optimism today among the nations competing against the United States for the unofficial team championship.

Until now the 61 other nations have been given little chance against the 378-member U. S. team which has been described as possibly the greatest squad in Olympic history. But they have gained renewed hope for the dissension reports center around the Yank track and field squad.

Even among the strongest U. S. teams, observers found signs of discontent and the American officials were visibly worried.

It was no secret that many American athletes were dissatisfied and it was obvious that the track and field squad was among the bitterest.

Many of the track men were complaining that coach Dean Cromwell of Southern California was devoting all his efforts to coaching sprinter Mel Patton of the same University and was not taking interest in the other members of the team.

Barnes Ewell of Lancaster, Pa., who finished ahead of Patton in the 100-meter qualifying trials, complained that Cromwell was having him practice starts with only a brief instant between "set" and "go" despite knowledge that the Olympic trials would be much slower.

The track and field draw announced last night did not hurt the chances of the American athletes. The draw was released only after Olympic officials had studied it and argued about it for five days and the result was that star athletes were spotted where they had the least chance of being upset in the early heats.

Ewell was just about the only Yank to draw any real opposition. In his opening heat in the 100-meter dash Friday, the 31-year-old Negro star will meet powerful Scotsman Alan McCrorquodale of Great Britain but, since the first two finishers will qualify for the second round, he also appeared a certainty to move ahead.

Patton's chief opening foe will be Jimmy O'Brien of Canada. The other dash favorites, Lloyd LaBeach of Panama, Harrison Dillard of Cleveland, O., and John Treloag of Australia, also faced only token opposition.

The games will be officially declared open tomorrow by King George VI in one of the greatest pageants in Olympic history. Six thousand athletes, led by the flags of their country, will participate in the march into Wembley Stadium for opening ceremonies and the lighting of the Olympic flame.

Actual competition does not begin, however, until Friday. Then the track and field games will get under way at Empire Stadium with the high jump, first round and semi-finals in the 400-meter hurdles, first and second rounds in the 100-meter dash, the women's discus throw, the first round of the 800-meter run, and the 10,000 meter run; basketball games will begin at Harringay arena, fencing at Wembley, and wrestling at Earls court.

Happy Birthday

MANY PERSONS SEE MYSTERIOUS OBJECTS IN SKY

Hundreds of persons claimed today that they saw a sively moon-shaped object streak through the skies over Washington State yesterday. Two employees of the civil aeronautics administration were among those who claimed to have sighted the object here. About the time the object was being reported over Yakima, William B. Appike of Portland, Ore., said he saw something "big, round and bright" moving west over Portland. He said it "suddenly veered southwest in an awful hurry." Airport traffic controller Don Hunt and aircraft communicator George Robinson said they saw a silvery disc-like object flying west of here about 2 p.m. and again at 4:20 p.m. "At first I thought it was the planet Venus, but after checking I saw that the planet couldn't be seen here at this time of the year," Hunt said. Robinson said the object looked as if it had "flashing lights, something like an airliners fog lights." They said no airliners were flying in the Yakima area at the time, however. Some officials believe that the object was a Navy target balloon which broke away from its moorings where it was being used to advertise a war surplus store. The balloon was last seen headed in a westerly direction - possibly toward the airfield. Hunt and Robinson insisted, however, that the object they saw could not have been a balloon because it was headed against the wind. It was first sighted by Victor Kroum, a farmer from Puntkin Center, Wash., at 10:14 a.m. He told state police about it. Hundreds of other persons in Yakima and surrounding counties began calling the CAA to report that they had seen the object. "They know just as much about it as we do," the CAA said. The object reported here and at Portland was the second apparition sighted in U.S. skies this weekend. In Atlanta, two eastern airline pilots insisted that they saw a flame-shooting "space ship" near Montgomery, Ala., on Saturday. Capt. G. S. Chiles of Atlanta and co-pilot John Whitted of Hapeville, Ga., armed themselves with still-

CHILDREN KEPT HOME TO HELP CHECK POLIO

FRANKFORT, Ky., July 27 (UP)—Life just wasn't worth living today for hundreds of Frankfort children who were kept at home, away from swimming, movies, drugstores and friends as the city fathers battled to stop the spread of polio. Under a proclamation issued by Mayor Ernest Jones, no youth aged 17 or younger could appear in any public place. Polio had not yet reached epidemic stage, but with 11 cases in a town of 11,492 population, no one was willing to take a chance. Sunday schools were closed Sunday. As a substitute, the local radio station broadcasted a one-half hour Sunday school lesson, but most kids said "that just wasn't the same." One four year old girl cried on hearing she would be kept home Sunday. She didn't know what polio was, but she had heard the word often enough to call it "polio." "Polly won't let me go to church," she told everyone. One boy, 17, who only recently has come into use of the family car, was especially unhappy. He had planned to take the gang to the Kentucky River for swimming today, and had a date with his special girl Saturday night. He had to cancel both. Frankfort merchants also suffered. One druggist said he hadn't sold a comic book for weeks, and ice cream and coke sales had dropped more than half. Bubblegum sales almost were at a standstill. Parents forget, or just didn't care to take such things home with them. The "Durango Kid" was featured in a western at the theater today, and boys of all ages failed to see why they couldn't see it. Thirteen year old Harry Gaines said the ban on shows was "damn silly."

But even if Harry could persuade his parents to let him go, of slipped away from home, he still couldn't get in if he got down town, the cop on the corner probably would sent him back home, and if not, theater attendants would refuse to admit him. For parents, the ban was a blessing. Mrs. E. W. Wolfe said "it makes it easy on mothers." She explained that she always knew that her young daughter, Mary Jean, was at home, but Mary Jean, cooped up at home, said "it isn't very much fun, there's nothing to do." Eight year old Logan Bailey, son of the state's publicity director, Clay Wade Bailey, was very pre-conscious and publicity wise when interviewed. "I don't mind staying at home," Logan said. "There's nothing to do, but I think the mayor's right. It's worth it to do, and I do get kind of lonesome, but after all, we've got to do what's right," she said.

Another young politician, nine year old Patty Thomas, daughter of Paul Thomas, executive secretary to Kentucky's governor, also approved the ban. "I don't have much to do, and I do get kind of lonesome, but after all, we've got to do what's right," she said.

THE ART OF FAKING—A knockdown and drag-out fight staged in "Red River," a movie of the first cattle drive over the Chisholm Trail, proves again that the camera is quicker than the eye. After being kicked in the face, John Wayne recovers to deliver an uppercut to Montgomery Clift. Actually, no physical contact was made between the two men.
