MHS Tigers Defeat Sturgis For Sixth Victory Last Nite

Murray Scores In Each Frame But Second

The Murray high school Tigers chalked up their sixth victory in seven starts last night when they defeated the Sturgis Golden Bears at Sturgis to the tune of 19-7.

The Tigers scored in the initial period with Miller going over from the one yard line, but Sturgis came back to tie it up in the second frame. Mackey threw an 18-yard pass to Stevens for the payoff, and the first half ended in a 7-7 deadlock.

Murray got going quickly in the third period when Alexander ran the opening kickoff back to the Sturgis 10 yard line, and Stewart then threw a pass to Butterworth for the score. The Tigers scored again in the fourth period on a pass, Stewart to Alexander.

Score by quarters:

Murray	7	0	6	—19
Sturgis	0	7	0	—7

Different Chicken Due In 1951, Experts Predict

LEXINGTON, Ky., Oct. 30 (UP)—You can expect a different looking chicken about 1951, a U. S. department of agriculture expert said today.

Just what the bird will be like, H. L. Shrader would not guess. He said, however, he was sure it definitely will pack more and better meat.

Groundwork for the chicken of the future was laid at a meeting of poultry men of the University of Kentucky campus here. The poultry men decided to launch a "chicken-of-tomorrow" contest. It will be on a state and regional basis in 1949 and 1950, with a national contest in 1951.

The breeder who comes up with the most robust rooster or the huskiest hen will get a sizeable cash prize—amount not yet determined.

Largest Homecoming Crowd In History Gathers At College

The day dawned bright and clear this morning for the 16th annual homecoming festivities as the largest crowd in the history of Murray State college began arriving in Murray.

Activities got under way at 7:00 o'clock this morning when the Vivace club, composed of music students, entertained with a breakfast in the Hut, adjacent to the college campus.

The first major item on the program was a giant homecoming parade which formed at the Carr Health building at 9:30, proceeded down Main street to the court square and back to the college on Olive street.

Dr. Ralph Woods, president of Murray State, and Dr. Rainey T. Wells, past president, occupied the lead car, followed by 75 floats and bands from the college, Murray high, Mayfield high and Tilghman high from Paducah.

First prize went to the Industrial Arts club and second prize to the Dramatics club.

Coach Fred Faurst promised the 11th homecoming victory when the Thorobreds tangle with Tennessee Tech at 2:00 o'clock this afternoon in the Carlisle Cutchin stadium. Despite the fact that the TPI Eagles usually put up a battle when they engage the racehorses, it looks like the fifth win of the season for the home team.

Last week all 33 members of the traveling squad saw action at Cape Girardeau, Mo., as the Breds ran wild over Southeast Missouri winning 40-0. The spectators needed an expert football analyst to help them pick the outstanding performers for Murray.

John Hackney, 180-pound, six-foot, three-inch tackle from Hopkinsville, and Powell Puckett, 180-pound, five-foot, ten-inch guard from Shelbyville, turned in stellar performances. They are expected to take the limelight again this afternoon.

The football game, Miss Polly Tucker of Paducah, will be crowned at a special pre-game ceremony.

Depression Expected, War Can Be Avoided--Babson

Wellesley, Mass., Oct. 29 (UP)—Nineteen years ago today, Oct. 29, 1929, the stock market crashed. It was "Black Tuesday." The glass-domed tickers ran hours behind transactions in Wall Street brokerage offices in New York. In the ensuing days of panic and confusion, men who had been millionaires a week before became paupers.

Filling station attendants, bookkeepers, housewives, all "experts" on the stock market saw their small investments wiped out overnight.

One of the few men who foresaw the market break was Economist Roger Babson. He predicted in September 1929 that the crash was coming.

Today, Babson took a gloomy look at the world and predicted that another depression and probably another war are on the way.

However, they won't arrive this year or next, the 73-year-old former Prohibition Party Presidential candidate said in an interview.

"Depression is inevitable," said Babson. "War isn't—but it surely will come unless the nations can develop a world government with authority to regulate such things as tariffs and immigration."

Babson said he's preparing for war because he doesn't think such an international organization can be created, until the world's businessmen stop worrying about profits, the working men about wages, and the politicians about votes.

"In other words," he said, "a spiritual awakening is the only solution to the problem."

Convinced that nearby Boston would be a primary target in World War III, Babson is preparing atomic bomb havens at Eureka, Kans., and New Boston, N. H.

He said he isn't pessimistic about war: He figures it's coming but doesn't think it will end civilization or even stop economic development of the United States.

"Even if they explode atomic bombs in the 12 biggest cities and kill 15,000,000 people—that still leaves us with more than 140,000,000 people and our important resources," he said.

Babson said he approves of the European recovery program on humanitarian principles, but doesn't think it will be much use.

From his viewpoint, he indicated, Europe looks beyond any permanent recovery. He suggested the United States concentrate its efforts on the relative undeveloped sections of the world.

Babson had no doubts about what

President Truman said today the Republicans are out to "destroy the social and economic progress made under 16 years of Democratic rule."

The President made the charge in a message to the young Democratic clubs of America as he and Republican nominee Thomas E. Dewey prepared to wind up their formal campaigns with speeches tonight. Mr. Truman speaks at a rally in St. Louis, Mo., Gov. Dewey in New York City.

Both candidates will make brief radio appeals on election eve.

In his message to the Young Democrats, Mr. Truman predicted he would have the support of a majority of young voters in his bid for four more years in the white house.

"I am confident," he said, "that the young men and women of America will not join hands this year with those who would turn the clock back, and would destroy the great social and economic advances we have made in the past 16 years."

Bare heading west last night, the President told a Democratic rally in Brooklyn that 61,000,000 persons will go to the polls next Tuesday. He predicted that the results of the election will throw the public opinion polls "in the air."

However, Dewey's aides were more confident than ever at the end of their 15,000-mile campaign trail. Though they conceded privately that Dewey's plurality wouldn't be so large as was forecast two months ago, they said the GOP nominee is so sure of victory he already is giving some thought to the selection of a cabinet.

Dewey's confidence was reflected yesterday in his call on house speaker Joseph W. Martin, Jr., at the latter's home in North Attleboro, Mass. The visit was regarded by political observers as a bid on Dewey's part for cooperation between congress and the white house after he takes office.

Martin, who had lined up with the anti-Dewey forces at the GOP National Convention, told the home-town crowd that "we see pretty much eye to eye."

The Governor arrived in New York City late yesterday after stopping Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut. He and Mrs. Dewey attended a reception at the National Woman's Republican Club last night.

Elsewhere in politics:

Senate: A house investigator accused the Democrats of carrying on a campaign of "fear and propaganda" in New Mexico to elect Clinton P. Anderson to the senate. Chairman Forest A. Harness, R. Ind., of the house subcommittee on publicity and propaganda named Interior Secretary J. A. Krug as one of the leaders of the campaign. Anderson promptly replied that the Republicans are using the "contemptible device" of a congressional investigating to hurt his chances of election. The former agriculture secretary is running against Republican Patrick J. Hurley, himself a one-time cabinet member.

Labor—APL President William Green said his organization is against setting up an independent labor party. He said the results of Tuesday's election "will show our position is sound."

UN ORDERS ARAB ISRAELI ARMIES TO STOP FIGHTING

Paris, Oct. 30 (UP)—The United Nations ordered Israeli and Arab armies to stop fighting in North Palestine as of 7 a.m. EST today, but lacked immediate word whether the order was obeyed.

The new UN cease fire order was issued by truce headquarters in Palestine even as the new outbreak of fighting and a diplomatic showdown here on the eve of the American elections threatened to wipe out the vestige of UN control over the Holy Land.

UN headquarters in Haifa reported the Jews opened a big offensive along the whole Northern front last night. The attack was reported following the nation of the recent fighting in the Negev area of South Palestine.

Seeking to check the fighting in the North, truce headquarters dispatched orders to both sides to lay down their arms as of noon GMT, but the fighting in the Negev area was disclosed.

That was the method by which the UN finally checked the fighting in the Negev. But it ended only after the Jews had scored major gains which undermined the whole Arab position South of Tel Aviv and Jerusalem.

So great was the confusion in UN quarters over the Palestine issue that many diplomats now expected the issue to be settled by violence on the Palestinian battlefields before the General Assembly even gets around to its thrice delayed discussion of a permanent settlement.

Aviation Expert Tells What Would Happen In War With Russia

By LEO TURNER

United States Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK, Oct. 29 (UP)—Suppose you woke up tomorrow-morning and found that the United States and Russia were at war. What would be likely to happen? A man who is an expert on aviation speculated on that question today in an exclusive interview. He is Maj. Alexander De Seversky, a graduate of the Imperial Russian Naval Academy and Military aeronautical school and a former Russian naval officer who became an outstanding American aeronautical inventor and consultant and founder of what now is the Republic Aviation Corp.

Major Seversky said that provided Russia's huge army is not a myth it immediately would occupy all of Europe except Great Britain. The U. S. long range strategic air force would begin blasting Russia with atom and possibly rocket-propelled TNT bombs from England and even America.

The skies above England would be filled with dogfights as British fighters rose to defend the island bomber bases from the swarms of Russian tactical aircraft.

And thousands of Russian fighters would buzz like hornets, through Soviet skies to defend fields and factories from American bombers.

Seversky said America has two bombers capable of a round trip to Russia from bases on the American mainland.

Asked if these bombers could reach any part of Russia, he replied: "Definitely. They could hit the industrial heart of Russia from American shores. But unfortunately, we have only a few of them."

These long-range bombers are the B-36 and the B-45.

Does Russia have a bomber with sufficient range to strike the United States mainland?

"We know that Russia has in mass production its version of the B-29 which can reach any part of our anatomy from bases in Russia in one way, kamakazi style, suicide attacks. But whether they have bombers with sufficient range to bomb our cities and return to Russia, we have no information."

How would the atom bomb fit in the picture?

"Possession of the atom bomb is a tremendous advantage provided you have superior air force and can attain the right-of-way over enemy skies," Seversky said. "But many targets are impervious to the blast of atomic bombs and require a direct hit for demolition. On these targets, perhaps rocket propelled, may have to be used."

Russia would have three advantages at the outset of a European war, Seversky said.

1. It has an overwhelming land army that could occupy all of Europe except the British Isles.
2. The Eurasian land mass being completely self-contained makes blockade impossible, which would reduce our navies to minor roles.
3. Russia has a superior tactical air force in numbers far close-range bombardment, defense and army cooperation.

"We know Russia has a large number of jet fighters with speeds above 600 miles an hour," Seversky said.

Russia never stopped production of a tactical air force. Eastern Germany has been converted to production of jet fighters for Russia at a rate far higher than Hitler, he added.

"In 1945 I examined factories at Halle which had manufactured parts ready to assemble 3,000 fighters of the ME-262 twin-jet type."

"After falling into the hands of the Russians, I am sure they were not sold for war surplus."

"Russia stopped the German armor simply by suffocating it with corps of men, some of them armed only with bayonets, some of them Cossacks on horses," Seversky said. "The same employment of mass numbers could be expected of its tactical air force. She always placed confidence in mass support of troops by artillery. Now this emphasis undoubtedly will be thrown to aircraft."

America should concentrate on its strategic air force, now the best in the world, said Seversky. "Russia's version of the B-29 may have a striking radius of about 2,500 miles. This performance is nearly doubled by our B-36 and B-45 which are capable of striking radius close to 5,000 miles. As to the new jet bombers, Russia possesses a jet bomber with a range of 4,000 miles, a striking radius of 1,000 miles. I am afraid that we haven't got anything much better than that."

Britain's air force is equally as good as the American one, Seversky said. "Britain must concentrate on fighters, and we on bombers."

Britain is reasonably safe as an air base not only because it is separated from the mainland by water but because "it has the industrial capacity to regenerate its military strength, and as long as it maintains control of its air it cannot be invaded."

Re-invasion of the continent would not be possible until Russian aircraft have been driven from the sky. In defense, Russia would rely primarily on the use of jet fighters, force and would try to offset by sheer numbers the deficiency in radar and ground defenses, Seversky said.

"The American problem would be to absorb the Russian air force in the air, and destroy ground installations and factories. We could not re-invaade Europe except under friendly skies," he said.

Then came the $94 question. "How long would it take to knock out Russia?"

"That would depend on our own aerial punch, and Russia's defense," Seversky said. "We might find penetration not as simple as some think. And contrary to the hysterical notion in some quarters, atomic warfare may last years instead of hours."

view with Maj. Gen. William H. Tunner, chief of the combined anglo-american airlift task force. Tunner learned how to haul cargo by air when he bossed the famous wartime "hump" operation that flew supplies into China across the Himalayas.

Tunner, silver-haired at 42, said the present 4,500-ton daily quota was established several months ago by Gen. Lucius D. Clay. He said his fliers have been reaching that goal regularly with a fleet of about 300 planes.

Now, he said, Gen. Clay has set a new goal as the American answer to the Soviet refusal to lift the Berlin blockade. Tunner did not reveal the exact amount involved in the new quota, but he indicated it will be considerably more than 1,000 tons a day.

He estimated that the 66 planes should be capable of hauling another 20 tons each a day. The 20-ton figure, he explained, is standard air force calculation on the capacity of Skymasters on a 24-hour day schedule on the Berlin run.

"But that's a conservative figure," Tunner said. "We've done consistently better than that. And bad weather hasn't affected us too much."

He said he wasn't at all perturbed by the prospect that fall rains and winter weather might prevent the airlift from reaching its higher quota.

To illustrate, he pointed to the solid gray skies overhead.

"On a day like this we run a plane every six minutes instead of one every three minutes," he said. "But that doesn't cut it in half because we haven't been following the three-minute schedule around the clock anyway."

The new requirements, Tunner said, are broken down into four divisions—American military British military, French military and German civilian.

Military government officials said in this connection that the airlift is far enough ahead now so it can include "desirable" as well as "essential" items. Coal for home heating, previously ruled out, by airlift planners, has been included in the new quotas in the amount of 550 tons daily.

Organized Gang Is Stealing Rare Old Books, Especially Expensive Bibles

By HARMON W. NICHOLS
 United Press Staff Correspondent
 WASHINGTON, Oct. 29.—A gang of book thieves has been organized in Washington to steal rare old books, especially expensive Bibles, according to a report from the FBI today.
 The gang, which is active in the Washington area, has been reported to have stolen several Bibles of great value, including one of the King James Version, which is valued at $1,000.
 The thieves are reported to be using a variety of methods to obtain the books, including breaking into homes and libraries.
 The FBI is currently investigating the gang and has issued a warning to book collectors and libraries to be on the alert for such thefts.

FOOD TIPS: The pineapple snow dessert uses the egg whites left over from the Deviled Oysters. The cinnamon toast sticks are an interesting alternate for cookies and are an especially good way to use stale bread that you so often have on hand.
 The tossed green salad, of course, is a natural to serve with fish or oysters. They seem to go together like butter and bread. And food specialists say green salads can't be served too often. They are economical in price but high in vitamins and iron content.
 You can use a variety of greens—lettuce, endive, escarole, spinach, Chinese cabbage, watercress or whatever is available in your local market. Add flavor and color with raw carrot curls, slices of celery or cheddar cheese, pickled beets, chopped onion, pickles, stuffed olives or pickled onions.
 Tossed salads are an especially good dish for your young daughter to prepare. She will enjoy choosing her own ingredients and her help will save your time when you are busy with the rest of the dinner. With greens are the trays of salad prepared too far in advance and the salad is best prepared at the last minute.
DEVILED OYSTERS
 1 pt. small oysters
 2 tablespoons table fat
 2 tablespoons flour
 1 cup oyster liquor and milk
 1/2 teaspoon salt
 1/2 teaspoon pepper
 1/2 teaspoon minced parsley
 1 teaspoon lemon juice
 1/2 teaspoon catsup
 2 egg yolks, unbeaten
 1 cup cream
 Remove bits of shell from oysters and drain off liquid to combine with milk. Add oysters to pieces with sauce or chop coarsely. Make a white sauce of the fat, flour, oyster liquor and milk. Stir in the oysters, oyster liquor, catsup, lemon juice and egg yolks. Pour into greased custard cups, cover with buttered bread crumbs. Bake in a hot oven (400° F.) for about 15 minutes. If you are serving cold, top with home-made chili sauce from Deviled Oysters home-canned supply, Serv. 4.
MEAT SUGGESTION: Make pin a Deviled Oyster with tinned green sauce. It is a good idea to have a variety of oysters to be served to your guests.

Second Prize

My dad should seed all of his cultivated land to a cover crop this fall because such crops help to hold the soil in place and keep the sloping land from eroding. Furthermore cover crops add humus to the soil and such crops as legumes add nitrogen also. Thus enabling him to reap a more bountiful harvest from his acres.
 The many acres of forest land we once had helped to preserve our top layer of soil. Now most of our forest is gone. So is our top soil going and will continue to go with each rain if we do not use some means of holding it. My recipe is "Sow Cover Crops."
 Retta Bonner, Murray, Ky. Route 5, Grade 8.

Third Prize

My dad should seed all of his cultivated land to a cover crop this fall because cover crops form a cover on soil so that rain drops won't loosen the soil particles and wash them away.
 Soil contains plant food elements nitrogen, phosphorus, and potassium which will dissolve in water as the water sinks into the ground and goes off in a stream. Cover crops take these elements up as plant food and hold them in place for the roots and stems.
 In the spring the crop is turned under in green manure which later forms humus in soil which permits a better root growth and increases the water holding.
 Bonnie Sue Parks, Route 2, Hazel, Kentucky, grade 9.

Fourth Prize

My dad should seed all of his cultivated land to a cover crop this fall because a cover crop in any crop while covering the ground, whether planted or not, covers the ground, and prevents excessive erosion, improves the soil, prevents leaching, reduces runoff of rain, and therefore conserves moisture. When turned under makes a good green manure crop. Increases yield of crops such as corn, cotton, and etc. It increases the water-absorbing capacity. The seeding and growing of a cover crop is an imitation of nature's method of holding the soil.

Large Cuts of Meat May Be Roasted Or Cooked With Moisture

One of the first basic cooking lessons the new homemaker should learn is that large cuts of meat are cooked by two methods, either with or without, added moisture. This is both because of the difference in tenderness of some of the cuts and for variety's sake. Of these two, the difference in tenderness is more important, because there are actually only a few cuts which are cooked by both methods to give variety.
 The two methods for cooking large cuts of meat are roasting and cooking with moisture. Both are equally easy to follow. Roasting is for large tender cuts of beef, veal, fresh and smoked pork, and lamb, such as: beef standing ribs; veal ribs and rump; fresh or smoked pork shoulders, loins and ham; lamb legs and shoulders; and meat loaves. The meat for loaves may be from tender meat cuts. However, grinding makes the meat tender so that it may be cooked as a roast.
 To roast meat successfully place the meat cut with its fattest side upon a rack in an open, shallow roasting pan. Do not add water. Do not cover. Roast in a slow oven (300 degrees F. for all meats but fresh pork which is roasted at 350 degrees F.) until tender. The approximate time can be computed by any of the very good charts showing the number of minutes of cooking time to be allowed per pound.
 Cooking with moisture (a small or a large amount, on the other hand, is the method for less tender cuts, such as beef pot-roasts (arm and blade bone—from the chuck, heel of round or rump); beef shanks; veal knuckle; pork hocks; heart; corned beef; and tender cuts like smoked ham which are cooked in liquid for variety.)
 Pot-roasts are browned before being cooked and only a small amount of liquid is added. The meat is then covered and cooked slowly. The other cuts are cooked completely covered with liquid. These cuts are usually cooked in a heavy utensil with a tight cover. The water, vegetable juices or other liquid is added, the utensil is then covered and the meat simmered until tender. The approximate time for cooking can be computed with the aid of standard charts on the subject.

Today's Sports Parade

By JACK CUDDY United Press Sports Writer NEW YORK, Oct. 30 (UP)—The "royal family" of boxing had another champion today.

Sandy Saddler, new featherweight ruler, is managed by Charley Johnson, youngest of the four Johnson brothers who contributed much to boxing history during the past half-century.

When brown-skinned Saddler of Harlem knocked out Willie Pep at Madison Square Garden last night, he brought to the royal family its sixth world title.

The other five champs were piloted by the late Jimmy Johnson, who died on May 7, 1943, at the age of 70. Jimmy, most famous of the quartet was known as the "boy

"Bandit," "Wise Guy" and "Pops" during his years as a fighter manager and promoter at various clubs including Madison Square Garden.

Jimmy, once a bantamweight challenger, also piloted such notables as Abe Simon, Bob Pastor, Phil Scott, Jim Driscoll, Boer Rodol, Gypsy Daniels, and Tom Cowler.

Ned Johnson, who trains Saddler, ranked next to Jimmy in age. Ned, when a featherweight scrapper, gave Jimmy his first managerial experience. Jimmy had great confidence in the prowess of Ned, the "Fighting Blacksmith." He would toss Ned into the ring with any featherweight or even with any middleweight. After Ned hung up his gloves, he trained most of Jimmy's battlers.

Willie, no. 3 in the family, has been a boxing and wrestling promoter for more than 40 years. He staged fight shows at St. Nicholas Arena for more than 10 years, and he still promotes wrestling there.

Charlie, president of the New York Boxing Managers Guild, appears younger than his 54 years. He is a genial, brown-haired chap of medium height and medium build. Charley, who began his fighting career as office boy for Jimmy, has been piloting pugilists for nearly 30 years. Three of his previous gladiators earned spots at titles, but they failed.

Indian Quintana fought Sixto Escobar for the bantam crown; Mike Bellaise challenged Joey Archibald for the feather crown; and Lulu Costantino tried to take the same diadem from Chalky Wright.

The youngest Johnson brother managed Saddler since the young Negro professional in March, 1944, and had his first fight in Hartford, Conn.—Willie Pep's home town. Sandy benefited by the combined advice of the royal family until Jimmy died.

There were times when none but the Johnsons believed the skinny youngster would develop into a champion. But their years of experience with fighting machines convinced them that Sandy was a "comer."

Charlie explained today: "This kid was blessed with a

Childrens Corner

HALLOWEEN
By Joette Lassiter

The large round harvest moon rose weirdly upon a cloudless sky, shedding an eerie white glow upon the fields and forests. A cool autumn wind howled and screamed through the trees and a screech owl's cry wavered across the country side—it was hallowe'en! And a more suitable night could not be imagined.

The large yellow jack-o-lanterns grinned grotesquely from the farmhouse window and here and there among the corn shocks a black cat prowled waiting—waiting for the midnight hour when his talons would become witches claws and his black coat her somber dress. Then too, the owl would become strange hallowe'en spirit and from the corn shocks would emerge hobgoblins, sorcerers and other strange and fantastic creatures that are usual on hallowe'en.

The black spider said repeatedly that she felt that something would happen, and she anxiously spun a thin curtain over the door of her house in the cornshock as she waited for the visit of the hallowe'en spirit.

"Yes all day I've felt in my bones, that something unusual is going to happen," said the spider to the owl, who had paused at her door.

"Well after all, hallowe'en isn't every night," replied the owl, "and as for me I shall be prepared for anything."

And indeed it doesn't happen every day! For only once each year does the ghosts and goblins appear at the bewitching hour of midnight, and only each year is there so many pranks played.

'Tis hallowe'en, and all is still! The trees, the moon, the water-mill. But soon the midnight stroke shall bring

MISS SOUTH AFRICA—Latest importation to Hollywood and American films is blonde Jean Fulton, of Durban, Union of South Africa. The 18-year-old miss won her title and contract on the basis of beauty, charm and acting ability.

Upon the darkened eerie wing, The ghosts and goblins, witches too. The black cat and the witches brew.

And no one dares to venture out For creatures hover all about. The jack-o-lantern's grotesque grin Looks now like a most horrid fiend.

And kitty kitty's now bewitched. His eyes are coals, his snake tail switched. The dog's a wolf, now on the prowl.

No one would dare go near the owl! But lo, when again comes day— We find our hallowe'en just play.

Midnight drew near, the forest shuddered—the gang in the church began to strike—one—two—three—the spooky moon covered by a large black cloud, shapelike a bat—not a star was in sight! But suddenly the moon shot out from behind the cloud and the grin shadow of a witch passed over. Then the jack-o-lanterns began their dance—black cats yowled wickedly, but suddenly among them appeared a strange green light. A small creature danced within the circle of light and the other creatures paused to ask his name. The creature laughed and said:

Some call me this, some call me that. If you guess my name I'll give you my hat.

I've really a name, a good one all right—just as you're the Hallowe'en Sprite.

The witch prepared for an evil fight but for the life of her she could not leave the ground! And much to the surprise of the spider, he had quite lost his spinner. Every one was muddled, none of their tricks went right! The ghosts sheet kept flying away, and the candles in the jack-o-lanterns went out.

The witches brew failed to boil and the owl remained quietly in his home. Many parties that night was a failure because the pop corn would not pop, and much difficulty and many drenchings in the apple ducking contests. Pop corn balls were too sticky and peanuts too hard, and all the time the Hallowe'en Sprite kept singing and dancing in the corn field. At last a black cat ventured to ask him if he were the cause of all the trouble. But he only laughed and replied:

'Tis hallowe'en, sure—it's hallowe'en's night. If your tricks go wrong, blame the hallowe'en sprite.

So if your fire crackers won't shoot or your jack-o-lantern goes out, if every thing seems to go wrong—don't blame the wind, blame the hallowe'en sprite. If you listen closely to the wind in the trees, I think you can hear him call.

It's hallowe'en, sure—it's hallowe'en's night. If your tricks go wrong, blame the hallowe'en sprite.

Perhaps the hallowe'en sprite is a good spirit who is trying to stop the accidents so many of us children cause by playing some dangerous prank on hallowe'en, so let's all be careful this hallowe'en and see how much GOOD instead of bad things, we can do!

DESERT DESTINY

by JOSEPH CHADWICK

Blonde Tracy Hayden was not born a Garrison but she lived at the luxurious Hacienda built in Arizona by old Jeff Garrison, because her grandfather had been loyal to the late cattle baron. Tracy is the favorite of the baron's widow Senora Maria, and thus wins the enmity of Ruth and Juan, grandchildren and weak Ramon, only surviving son. The Senora learns of another grandson she never has seen, Phil Garrison, and sends Tracy to bring him to the Hacienda. In a distant city, Jim Conroy rents a room and ransacks the adjoining room only to be interrupted by the knocking of Tracy, who has been directed to Garrison's room. Drawing his gun, Conroy admits her. Tracy assumes he is the Senora's grandson and is instantly attracted. Later Conroy returns to Garrison's room, only to find his quarry fled. Called home by the Senora's illness, Tracy persuades Conroy to accompany her. Still posing as Phil, he meets Ramon Garrison, his beautiful wife Ruth, and the frail Senora, who exacts his reluctant promise to stay one month after he realizes she is tortured by a secret fear.

CHAPTER X
HIS discovery that the Senora Maria had a secret locked in her heart filled Jim Conroy with a vague uneasiness. He came from the sickroom looking darkly intent, but he merely said to Tracy, "She is sleeping now." He wasn't sure that he should take even her into his uneasy confidence.

"I'll sit by her for a little while," Tracy told him. She smiled faintly. "Don't think I'm neglecting you the moment you become my guest. It's just that I've been away from her so long."

She was anxious about the Senora, and Jim could gauge the depth of her love for the woman in the room behind him. It was an unselfish love, and Tracy was genuine.

He said, "Don't worry about me. I'll go sightseeing about the Hacienda." He looked after her as she entered the room. He was beginning to like Tracy a lot, his brother's style.

Ruth Garrison was another matter. She was waiting for him in the living-room downstairs, just as he knew she would be. Her dark blue eyes had a sparkle and her lips were smiling. "You're beautiful, but in an arrogant way. He couldn't find warmth in her loveliness.

Ruth slipped her arm through his. "I've had your bag taken out of your trunk, where it's Ramon's. But I'll bring it back to you in the old part, but the rest of us find it depressing."

The other section of the Hacienda was out of the question. The spacious rooms were lavishly comfortable. Surrounded by extravagant luxury, it was easy for the younger Garrisons to forget that they were living on a vast cattle ranch—and obviously forgotten by the Senora.

Ruth led the way into a low-ceilinged rumpus room, equipped with all sorts of devices to while away the hours of bored people. Jim sat on a stool by a well-stocked bar while she mixed cocktails.

"You don't seem at all like a cousin," Ruth told him. "I'm glad that makes it easier for me to like you."

"You mean my appearance?" "Not entirely. You aren't like us in looks. But I meant something else. There's something about you that's different from Ramon and Juan—and from me, too. Maybe it's your manner. You're sharp-looking as if you're nobody's fool. And I think you can be tough."

"Well, aren't the Garrisons tough?" "RUTH shook her head. "We've come to see. We're soft. Too much money, too easy a life. So you don't seem at all like a cousin. Why does that make it easier for you to like me?"

North Pleasant Grove Missionary Society Meets Saturday

The October meeting of the Pleasant Grove Missionary Auxiliary was held Saturday afternoon at 1:30 at the home of Mrs. Talma Wallace Crawford with Mrs. Jess Wallace as program leader.

The meeting was opened with prayer by Mrs. Roy Graham. Theme: Committed unto us—a Stewardship.

Songs—"We've a story to tell to the nations"; "Mrs. John Ed Ed Waldrop gave part of our study book"; "Child of Twilight or Dawn"; Musical Solo—Fred Wells; Song—"May I be faithful"; Mrs. Waldrop gave a report from Presbytery.

Bessie Collie was selected as a delegate to represent the society at Sturgis, Ky. this week. Responsive scripture reading by entire group. Prayer by Rev. Joe

"I don't know exactly. But the hard thing is, we Garrisons are so much alike we don't get along Ramon—I mean, Dad. Juan—his nephew, and I quarrel at the drop of a hat. And there's Helen, Ramon's wife. My step-mother. We fight like bitter enemies.

"So it's a nice family battle?" "Nice is right. Then, most of all there's our feud with Senora Maria. We all are fond of her of course. But the Senora tries to live our lives for us. I'm not giving you a very attractive picture of our relatives."

Jim Conroy had to wince when she called him Phil. He had tricked Tracy into believing him to be Phil in the hope that through her he could find the real Phil Garrison. Then he had duped the Senora in the hope of secretly righting matters with Tracy. Now he could not unmask himself without bringing down more trouble than he would be able to handle.

He questioned, "And Tracy? How does she fit into the feud?" "Oh, Tracy is on the Senora's side. But we all like Tracy. Ruth's lips curled in an unamused smile. "As who doesn't," she added.

"She poured the cocktails, handed a glass to Jim, and lifted her glass. "Here's looking at you—cousin." Her dark eyes flicked over him. "And wishing you weren't a cousin."

Jim said, "Here's to you," and put the drink to his lips. He decided that Ruth was bared with life at Garrison Ranch, and because she was bored she was most certain to be first.

The roar of a plane sounded against the still desert night. Jim could tell by the sound that it was coming to a landing.

Ruth said, "That's Cousin Juan, back from flying Dr. Jessup to town. He's back early, so he couldn't have found any lonely girls in Lanassa. I call him Don Juan."

JIM followed Ruth out on a patio in time to see the plane coming in on a field which a Mexican attempt had lighted up with a big floodlight. Jim disapproved of the landing Juan made; a minute later, he disapproved of Juan himself—because Juan reminded him so much of Phil Garrison. Juan climbed from the silver, low-winged sport plane, and smiling, boyish man in his middle twenties. He smiled because of pleasure from flying, and then seeing the stranger—Ruth, Garrison's face seemed to frost over.

Ruth said, her voice a trifle mocking. "It is Phil Garrison, Juan. They brought him back alive. He couldn't look like a Garrison, so I've told him we'll like him a lot."

Juan held out his hand to Jim Conroy. "Welcome to Garrison Ranch, Phil. But I'll be glad to see you. Our welcome usually carries with it a stab in the back."

They laughed together, and Jim Conroy tried to watch her step on Juan Garrison. It was unfair to dislike him merely because he was like his cousin Philip.

When they returned to the rumpus room Ramon was there with a strikingly attractive, Auburn-haired woman and a colorless white leather sofa. Ruth took Jim Conroy forward to introduce him to the young man's name was Pat Donohue. He said, "Hiya, pal. The Auburn-haired girl was Helene, Ramon's wife."

She looked up at Jim Conroy. There were golden flecks in her eyes—and something more. Surprise. Slowly, Helene Garrison smiled at him. And said, "No introduction is necessary—Phil Garrison and I have already met." She looked at her husband. "Don't you remember my telling you, Ramon?"

He glance came back to Jim Conroy again, laughing at him—calling him "Fraud!" He felt joltingly alarmed.

Paris Road Club Meets At Home Of Mrs. Hugh White

Homemakers of the Paris Road Club met Friday, Oct. 22nd, in the home of Mrs. Hugh White.

Mrs. Paul Blalock, club president, presided. Fourteen members answered roll call. The club was glad to have as visitors Mrs. Craig, Mrs. McDougal and Mrs. White. Mrs. McDougal became a new club member.

The lesson on "Know Yourself and What Lines Can Do For You" was given by Mrs. Robt. L. Hendon and Mrs. Pat Thompson. They pointed out that we should find our bad points and try to cover them up with good ones. Proper uses of stripes, plaids, belts, neckties and hats to wear was given with pictures to illustrate each example.

Mrs. Leland Stealy gave a talk on "How Do You Do" and manners to use in introducing so all persons may feel at ease and happier. The club decided to have a food sale in Nov. just before Thanksgiving.

During social hour Mrs. Jack White in the game "Teakette" everyone enjoyed it.

The club adjourned to meet with Mrs. Raymon Rayburn in Nov.

Training School FHA Members Plan Radio Program Next Week

The Murray Training Chapter of Future Homemakers of America held its regular meeting Wednesday, Oct. 22, at 12:30.

The chapter made plans for a radio program to be given during National F. H. A. week which is November 1-6. Those on the committee to plan the radio program are Julia Fuqua, chairman, Euna Nell Boggess, and Lavinia Jones.

The chapter selected Jessie Atkins to speak on Promoting International Good Will at the district F. H. A. meeting at Trig County High School, November 6, 1948. The chapter divided into committees and planned activities for the chapter program of work for this school year.

The rest of the meeting was devoted to the construction of name tags to be used in registration at the District Meeting.

Zeta Department Entertains Student Veterans' Wives

The Zeta Department of the Murray Women's Club entertained Thursday evening at 7:30 with its annual card party honoring the student veterans wives from Murray State College.

Following a delightful evening of various games prizes were presented to Mrs. Orren Hall Mrs. Jean Hammond and Mrs. Jackie Allen for high, second and third respectively in bridge. Mrs. Lucy Bach received the bingo prizes and draw prizes were presented to Mrs. Virginia Rounton and Mrs. Lucy Bach.

Refreshments were served from a beautiful lace covered table centered with a pumpkin, surrounded by fruit and fall leaves. The chairman, Mrs. Charles M. Baker, presided at the punch bowl. Pretty arrangements of chrysanthemums enhanced the room and a lighted jack-o-lantern added to the Halloween atmosphere.
